FRENCH PLAN RETREAT TO ALGIERS

Senate Approves "Excess Profits" Levy, 41 to 31

LaFollette Amendment Is Designed To Raise $500,000,000 Annually

Tax Would Reach Those Corporations Benefitting from Nation's New Defense Program

WASHINGTON, June 19. (AP)—The Senate passed the defense revenue bill tonight after adding an excess profits levy to raise between $400,000,000 and $500,000,000 annualy and inserting a drastic war profits tax which would provide additional billions in the event of war.

Approval of the two changes in the measure, which had called for $1,007,000,000 of new taxes took administration lieutenants by surprise. They opposed the excess profits tax, which would be effective at once, but many voted for the proposal to impose heavy additional taxes in the event of war.

Senator Connally (D-Tex), sponsoring the latter amendment, estimated that it would raise $8,000,000,000 a year from individuals alone and possibly as much from corporations. It would become effective automatically upon a congressional declaration of war.

The vote on final passage of the bill was announced as 75 to 5.

The dissenting votes were cast by four Republicans — Austin (Vt.), Gurney (SD), Hale (Me), and Taft (Ohio)—and one Farmer-Laborite, Lundeen (Minn.).

Goes to Conference

The measure next will be sent to a Conference committee of senators and representatives to consider the tax increases voted by the Senate alone. Democratic leaders indicated that both the excess profits and war profits proposals would be thrown out in the conference.

They said that such legislation should be enacted only after full study by both the House Ways and Means and the Senate Finance committee. The conference group will meet tomorrow or Friday.

Connally's war profits levy was adopted, 51 to 28, as a substitute for a similar amendment offered by Senator Bone (D-Wash.) Connally said it had been worked out by treasury experts and would put the country on a "pay-as-you go" basis automatically at the outbreak of war.

The excess profits tax, which would go into effect along with the higher income and excise taxes provided by the bill to finance defense expenditures, was adopted by a surprise vote of 41 to 31.

The amendment was sponsored by Senator LaFollette (Prog-Wis), who told the Senate it would "be a sham and delusion" to enact revenue legislation which contained no levy on excess profits.

La Follette said his proposal would reach those corporations benefiting from the new defense program. Chairman Harrison (D-Miss) of the finance committee and others urged that such legislation be delayed until Congress can consider a new tax bill — a step which Harrison predicted would be taken shortly. Harrison said he hoped excess profits taxes would be written law by Jan. 1.

Exemptions Are Granted

The La Follette amendment, imposing taxes similar to those in effect between 1917 and 1922, would grant corporations specific exemptions on profits and then would impose special excess profits levies. A corporation would have a flat exemption of $3,000 plus an additional exemption equal to eight percent of its invested capital.

A corporation with $100,000 capital thus would have a total exemption of $11,000.

Profits in excess of the exemptions but not in excess of an amount equal to twenty percent of invested capital would be taxed twenty percent. Profits in excess of the exemptions and exceeding twenty percent of invested capital would be taxed 40 percent.

Earlier the chamber stripped proposals for government economy from the tax bill. By a vote of 62 to 14, it reversed a decision of yesterday and eliminated a proposal authorizing the president to cut non-defense expenditures by ten percent.

Also rejected were proposals to instruct congressional appropriations committees to restudy non-defense spending bills with a view to reducing them by $500,000,000 and to require a flat four percent

England Reports Twelve Dead from Bombings on Coast Towns

By The Associated Press

LONDON, June 19, The battle of Britain is on.

It burst with a fury of bombings, Germany's heavest air raids of the war on England, just as Prime Minister Churchill predicted it would come—hard on the heels of the Battle of France.

Blow for blow, bomb for bomb, the little island of empire struck back.

At almost the same time, in the hours before dawn, waves of Nazi planes blasted at England's east coast towns and shipping along the lower Thames.

In reply squadrons of heavy British bombers smashed rail centers and industrial concentrations of northeastern Germany and the Rhineland.

Nazi Mechanized Forces Reported To Have Reached City of Lyon

German Sources Indicate Troops Are 200 Miles from Marseille and the Mediterranean

Strasbourg, Toul and Luneville Are Added to String of Nazi Military Successes in France

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, June 19—German pursuit of the shattered armies of France assumed the proportions of a gigantic and tragic chase tonight as Berlin and Rome awaited French decision on the axis powers' crushing peace terms.

Strictest secrecy was observed in Berlin regarding the precise nature of these terms. But inspired press comment indicated their acceptance would mean not only the partition of France but the harnessing of that country's resources to the great German drive against England.

The string of German military successes lengthened with bewildering rapidity.

The great seaport of Cherbourg, the industrial city Nancy and Rennes, vital railway junction in Brittany, were reported in German hands.

In their southward thrust Nazi troops were near Lyon, 200 miles from Marseille and the Mediterranean.

(A German bulletin heard in New York by the NBC short-wave monitor service said Nazi mechanized troops already had reached Lyon.)

Three Fortresses Fall

The high command reported three more fortress cities in the Maginot line defenses had been captured.

Strasbourg, bulwark on the Rhine opposite Kehl fell, and the swastika fluttered from the city's impressive cathedral.

Directly west of Strasbourg on the inner side of the Maginot line the Germans took Toul and Luneville, both key fortresses. They lie on either side of Nancy, which the high command repoted seized earlier today.

Luneville is historically significant as the city in which the peace of 1801 was signed, between France on one side and Germany and Austria on the other — a peace in which all Germany west of the Rhine was ceded to France.

There was no indication as to when or where the French plenipotentiaries would be handed Hitler's and Mussolini's armistice terms.

Authorized sources denied point-blank the five-point peace conditions outlined by the newspaper Popolo Di Italia and added that any other such erroneous publications regarding the Munich agreement were "unauthorized combina-

First Conditions for Armistice Accepted by The French Government

General De Gaulle Publicly Rebuked for Speech Urging Continuance of Resistance

By The Associated Press

BORDEAUX, France, June 19—The French government accepted the first German-Italian condition for an armistice today and publicly repudiated a recent cabinet member for having urged from London a continuance of resistance against Germany.

The rebuke was addressed bluntly to General De Gaulle, the under-secretary for national defense in the Reynaud war cabinet which resigned Sunday.

It left open the door for early peace negotiations and it followed the appointment by "Old Marshale" Premier Henry Philippe Petain of agents to hear the extent of the national surrender demanded by the conquerors to give peace to this scarred, unhappy country.

General De Gaulle was taken to task specifically by Interior Minister Charles Pomaret, for having advocated in a London broadcast last night a French-British union, with the industrial help of the United States, "to crush our enemies."

Pomaret said De Gaulle had been ordered to return to France from London.

Fighting Continues

The French armies, still in the field in a last stand, reported German planes southward through Brittany in the direction of Nantes, at the mouth of the Loire river—occupation of which would cut off lower English channel ports like Brest, and St. Nazaire.

South of the Loire, Nazis drove below Tours to the river Cher and still farther east approached Lyon, Roanne and Amberieu.

The cabinet, with Spanish Ambassador Jose Felix Lequercia, the axis intermediary, reported sitting in, appointed a group of plenipotentiaries to go to whatever place is designated by Germany and there to learn the price fixed by Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini, and to accept or reject it.

The names of these emissaries were not disclosed officially.

(Dispatches from Madrid indicated, however, that Henry Berenger, former French ambassador to the United States, would head them.)

Unofficial reports mentioned Madrid, and specifically the residence there of Generalissimo Francisco Franco of Spain, as the likely meeting place.

The French communique said nothing on the questions of when and where, beyond this:

". . . The government of the Reich will make known the date and place where these plenipotentiaries will be received."

Bordeaux, Capital Of France, Bombed By German Planes

Important Buildings in City Appear To Be Main Targets

BORDEAUX, June 20 (Thursday) (AP-Via Radio)—An undetermined number of persons were killed and wounded this morning as low-flying German planes bombed Bordeaux, provisional capital of beleaguered France. Two of the bombs scored hits on refuge shelters.

Important buildings in the city, which the French government has declared an open city, appears to be the main targets.

Bordeaux was bombed four times a little after 1:30 a. m. (7:30 p. m. E.S.T. Wednesday.)

(Two Associated Press staffmen in Bordeaux, W. J. Humphreys of Salisbury, Md., and William McGaffin, a Nebraskan, told of the raid in broadcasts carried by NBC.)

Newspaper correspondents were forced to take refuge in a cellar during the raids.

They heard the German planes sweeping over the open city at low altitudes, bombing the streets and buildings jammed with refugees.

The thunder of exploding bombs came just as the townspeople, waiting for word of an armistice, had begun to hope they had found refuge and were safe.

Bordeaux has a normal population of approximately 250,000 but is jammed now with refugees bringing the number it shelters to perhaps five times that many.

There was no immediate indication where in the city the bombs fell.

Johnson Tells of Mistake Made by Allied Official

WASHINGTON, June 19 (AP) — Louis Johnson, assistant secretary of war, said today that Allied government representatives sixteen or seventeen years ago rejected urgent advice that they place mass orders in the United States for war planes.

Addressing graduates of the Army Industrial college, Johnson said a high official of one of the Allied governments, whom he did not identify, expressed belief at the time heavy purchases such as undertaken subsequently would be "a wastage of money."

The assistant secretary said he recalled the proposal with a "heartache because his sympathies were entirely with the British and French.

United States Cautions Italy And Germany On Possessions

Transfer of Any New World Lands in Western Hemisphere Is Opposed by Government

American Republics Are Called to Parley; Senators Demand Probe of Sale of Sub-Chasers

WASHINGTON, June 19 (AP) — The United States cautioned Germany and Italy to keep hands off British, French and Dutch possessions in the Western hemisphere today and then moved to array the twenty-one American republics in a great united front for military and economic defense.

Without waiting for disclosure of the terms which Adolf Hitler and Benito Musolini will demand of France as the price of peace, the State department made known that Secretary Hull had sent notes to Berlin and Rome on Monday declaring the United States was opposed to transfer of any possessions in this hemisphere from one non-American power to another.

Notes Sent to Europe

The notes were sent to the American embassies in Berlin and Rome for communication to the German and Italian governments soon after word reached Washington that the new French government had sought to negotiate an armistice which might involve the future of French territorial possessions.

The views stated in the notes, constituting a reaffirmation of the Monroe Doctrine, were the same as those set forth in a resolution which has been approved by both branches of Congress but is now pending in the Senate again for consideration of minor house amendments.

Sumner Welles, assistant secretary of state, disclosed that this government had proposed that all the American republics meet soon in extraordinary session in view of European war developments. Although he said the agenda had not been formulated, he added, that it probably would include a proposal, now virtually ready for President Roosevelt's study, for disposal of export surpluses in this hemisphere. This proposal was understood to embrace a plan for marketing Latin-American exports through a United States financed corporation, designed to bolster hemisphere economy against the challenge of the Nazi barter system.

The timing of the notes to Germany and Italy and the proposal of a Pan-American conference indicated that defense of the hemisphere also would have an important place in the discussions.

Thirteen Nations Reply

Thirteen nations already have replied to the suggestion for a conference and Welles indicated that

Reports in Bordeaux Say President LeBrun and Other Leaders Have Gone

Masses of French Planes Are Africa-Bound; Rome and Berlin Say France Must Surrender

By The Associated Press

A fighting French government, finding Adolf Hitler's demands for a "pure and simple" subjugation to Nazi rule too onerous, may yet flee to Africa to battle with the British, it was reported in Boredaux last (Tuesday) night.

At the moment Nazi wheeled legions rushed to slice the country to ribbons and Nazi bombing planes fought the opening skirmishes of the "Battle of England."

Reports widely circulated in Bordeaux said President Albert Lebrun and other leaders had gone, or were about to go, to Algiers in North Africa and thus carry out the first step of former Premier Reynaud's threat to retreat fighting to Africa, and even to America, before submitting to Germany.

These reports, which were not confirmed from official sources, said nothing of Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, who succeeded Reynaud as premier last Sunday and who immediately sought peace terms.

Already masses of French planes were in flight to North Africa. Some of them were forced to alight at Spanish ports and islands before reaching their destination.

The Germans, taking French capitulation or rout as a foregone conclusion, pressed on England with little respite, and their planes bombed that country for the second successive night.

The bombs fell near a town on the northeast coast, and numerous alarms were sounded shortly before midnight, south of London, on the southeast coast and on the Northeast. Anti-aircraft guns roared and fighter planes went up.

Radio Stations Silent

While the German planes were bombing England, the Hamburg and Bremen radio stations went off the air for the third successive night, indicating Britain's bombers were on their way to return the Germans' visit with bombs for calling cards.

The British said yesterday that they had bombed numerous German cities Tuesday night, including Bremen, Hamburg, Essen and Hanover and had dropped 250 bombs in ten minutes on military objectives at Bremen.

On blitzkrieg schedule the German high command enumerated a new string of great French cities and fortresses fallen into its hands—the great seaport of Cherbourg, Nancy, Rennes, Le Mans, Strasbourg, Luneville and Toul.

The Nazi iron cavalry was reported but twenty miles from Lyon in Southeastern France, the nation's third largest city.

There the Germans were but 200 miles from the Mediterranean and in position to flank the Alpine army out of its positions and join hands with the Italians around Switzerland.

Crossings had been forced over the Loire, last natural line of defense for the peace-bidding French government and its shattered remnants of armies backed up in less than half of their territory against the Atlantic, the Mediterranean and the lofty Pyrenees border with Spain.

Advance Beyond Loire

The Nazis were forty miles beyond the Loire in one place.

They had moved 100 miles south after taking Cherbourg, and striking to cut off Brest and St. Nazaire, two remaining ports.

Drastic as German-Italian peace conditions may be, the French government gave indications it has no alternative but to surrender France.

Interior Minister Charles Pomaret repudiated General De Gaulle, recent cabinet member who urged continued resistance and French-British union in a speech in London Tuesday. De Gaulle was ordered home.

The French cabinet, meeting in an early session in Bordeaux appointed plenipotentiaries to learn

By RICHARD L. TURNER

PHILADELPHIA, June 19. (AP)—A blunt statement from John L. Lewis that President Roosevelt's proposal for compulsory national service was a "fantastic suggestion from a mind in full intellectual retreat" brought a burst of applause today from the Republican Resolutions committee.

The C.I.O. leader was one of a continuous stream of speakers before the policy-forming committee meeting in the increasing hub-bub of the throng already arriving for the national convention opening next Monday.

Democrats May Name Bankhead As Keynoter for Convention

Alabaman Favored for Post by President Roosevelt and James Farley

CHICAGO, June 19 (AP)—Speaker William B. Bankhead seemed destined tonight for the important post of keynoter at the Democratic national convention.

Bankhead

Bankhead appeared to be the likely choice after James A. Farley, chairman of the party's national committee, announced that both he and President Roosevelt favored the fluent Alabaman.

Farley told reporters that he would recommend that Rep. Bankhead be named temporary chairman and keynote speaker when the twenty-one member committee on convention arrangements meets here tomorrow to make the selection.

He also disclosed that he would suggest that Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky be endorsed for permanent chairman of the convention, opening here on July 15.

"I discussed this with the president," Farley stated at a press conference, and he has agred."

Farley said that Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, would be considered for the position of chairman of the resolutions committee.

Tydings and Neely Vote For Tax Amendment

WASHINGTON, June 19 (AP) — Senator M. M. Neely, of West Virginia, voted for the LaFollette "excess profits" tax amendment today as did Senator Tydings of Maryland.

Senator Radcliffe of Maryland opposed the measure. Senator Rush D. Holt was not recorded as voting.

Senator Walsh Rebukes U. S. Navy For Releasing Boats to British

Profits for Shipbuilders also Are Stressed by Naval Chairman

WASHINGTON, June 19. (AP) — Senator Walsh (D-Mass), chairman of the Senate Naval committee, rebuked the navy on two matters of policy today, contending that it was prepared to "guarantee" a ten percent profit on $1,000,000,000 of pending ship-building contracts and that it had made a "grievious error" in releasing twenty boats to the British.

He told reporters that the profit disclosure, which he termed "sensational" in its implications, was made to a closed session of the committee by Rear Admiral S. M. Robinson, chief of the bureau of engineering.

"This means," Walsh said, "that if the law is not changed and the methods now contemplated are used, ten percent profit will be guaranteed to these shipbuilders on a non-competitive contract let by negotiation. The law never contemplated anything like that."

Under the Vinson-Trammel act, he said, profits of shipbuilders holding government contracts are limited to ten percent, but he added that this was a maximum and could not be considered a guarantee.

Walsh's criticism of the British transaction followed a Navy department announcement that it had made it possible for Great Britain to take delivery on twenty torpedo boats and submarine chasers being manufactured for the navy the Electric Boat company, Groton, Mass.

"If war should come in the next few weeks and an enemy submarine approaches our harbors," he said, "no one can estimate the consequences that may follow as a result of this disposal of these vessels."

Meantime, the Senate appropriations committee made public testimony that some of the nation's largest industrial concerns had hesitated to undertake large-scale plant expansion for mass production of defense equipment because of treasury interpretations of the tax laws.

This was disclosed after the committee had approved a $1,777,000,000 emergency defense appropriations bill.

Mussolini and Hitler To Keep Troops in France

Italian Sources Hint They Will Use Army of Occupation

By The Associated Press

ROME, June 19—A warning by the United States that it would not stand for annexation by Germany or Italy of British or French territory in the American hemisphere was disclosed today while Fascists discussed the axis peace terms for France.

Italian sources predicted the Germans would be pointing toward preventing the republic from giving any help to Britain.

They indicated that Germany, and perhaps Italy too, would maintain an army of occupation in France after an armistice based on severe terms.

Aside from this, there was no unanimity here in predictions as to just what Benito Mussolini and Adolf Hitler had demanded of the beaten French, other than the long-held supposition that France would be required to give up some of its territory, both on the continent and in its colonies. Italy already is claiming Savoy with Nice, Corsica, Tunisia and Jibouti.

Conditions Justly Severe

The newspaper Tribuna said simply "there is no doubt that the conditions will be justly severe," but the authoritative Giornale D'Italia declared they would be more generous than those imposed upon Germany at Versailles.

Il Popolo Di Roma reported economic terms for the armistice under which France would be compelled to turn over its gold, raw materials, factories and the like for use in the campaign to smash Britain, but persons in government circles said these declarations were without authority.

The Tribuna said that German troops would occupy all strategic points of major importance of enemy territory.

It was still widely believed in foreign circles here that France might be required to surrender its navy to Germany for use against England.

Virginio Gayda, editor of the Giornale D'Italia and a frequent spokesman for Premier Mussolini, cast aside what he termed the "sentimental appeals" of American and Swiss newspapers for consideration for France.

No Reason for Pity

Italy, he said, could see "no reason for pity for France in the present case."

Then, referring to the challenge of Winston Churchill that Britain would fight on with American material aid, he declared that this meant Italy would carry out the war against "Anglo-Saxon forces alone."

The warning of the United States that it would not tolerate annexation of France and British possessions in the American hemisphere was understood to have been delivered to Italian authorities yesterday by Ambassador William Phillips.

The American government thus invoked the Monroe Doctrine and quoted passages from that 117-year old document of policy.

French colonies in the western hemisphere are French Guiana, Martinique and Guadeloupe in the West Indies, and St. Pierre and Miquellon off Newfoundland.

the terms which Hitler and Premier Mussolini agreed upon at their second Munich Tuesday, Spanish press dispatches said. Henry Berenger, former ambassador to the United States, was one of the delegates.

The place and the time of the meeting of emissaries was not known. Unofficial Madrid reports said the conference might be in the residence of General Francisco Franco, but authoritative quarters in Berlin said there would be no discussions on neutral territory.

France Must Surrender

Both Rome and Berlin made it plain France cannot negotiate—she must surrender.

Rome press accounts of the Munich meeting said the axis powers would demand military occupation of France, her gold, her industrial and economic organization turned into war production against England. Diplomatic quarters in Spain said the French fleet must be turned over.

Berlin quarters said the Germans would be harsh—intended to make France helpless until the fight with England is steeled.

But there were indications that France intends to fight on from her empire, even if she must remain under bondage on the continent.

A heavy movement of French military planes in flight from the homeland to Africa was reported from Spanish ports and islands. Seven planes were forced down, and their crews said they had set out for Algeria.

Marcel Peyrounton, French resident general of Tunis, said "this empire stands in an attitude of resistance, full of courage and gartitude."

Fleet Still With British

Presumably part of the French fleet still was with the British in the Eastern Mediterranean, near Alexandria.

The French radio declared French forces had cleared out Italian submarines in the western Mediterranean and now controlled communications in that area—the line of retreat to North Africa.

Powerful Central Control Is Urged For Preparedness

General Charles G. Dawes Says U. S. Must Proceed with Efficiency

CHICAGO, June 19 (AP) — Gen. Charles G. Dawes tonight urged the government to place the preparedness program "under a powerful central control" and suggested that the president assign an outstanding industrial expert to the task of coordinating the work of all departments and agencies involved.

Advocating the creation of the key joo of "chief coordinator," Dawes, former vice-president and world war chief of supply procurement for the American expeditionary force, asserted:

"At this time, when our government is preparing to be able to meet totalitarian attack, it must proceed with totalitarian speed and efficiency under a powerful central control. x x x

"If the government does not set up immediately an effective system of internal coordination as it enters upon an additional and gigantic effort for war preparedness, it will fail, wasting not only enormous resources but x x x an incalculable amount of time. x x x

Wake up, Washington! National war preparedness is primarily a military as well as a business effort and will fail unless worked out under guiding military principles as well as correct business principles."

the men—went far afield.

May Rely on Soviet

Parliament was told the government is studying purchase of tanks, guns, airplanes, and other war weapons from Soviet Russia. Germany's "paper partner."

Already, Britain has given America a virtual blank check for munitions, even of world war vintage.

Britain counted twelve dead, thirty wounded from the Nazi bombs and heard with enthusiasm that the far-ranging R. A. F. "heavily attacked" objectives of Bremen, Hamburg, Frankfort, Essen, Castrop, Sterkrade and Hanover.

At Bremen alone, an air ministry communique said, 250 bombs were dropped within ten minutes.

The raids were the second at some of the German towns within forty-eight hours.

Britons said their pre-dawn taste of terror from the air left them the more determined to fight to the last drop of British blood—and victory.

Shoot Down Seven Bombers

Seven of an uncounted number of German bombers were shot down by British fighter planes and anti-aircraft guns which blazed away at the dark shapes spotted by searchlight beams.

Four hours thundering with explosions and the rattle of anti-aircraft fire passed from the first alarm until the all-clear signal.

Many Britons scurried to air raid shelters. Some stayed in their homes. Some watched the skies and cheered when enemy bombers plummeted in flames.

The air ministry reported several airdromes were attacked "without success" by the raiders and an oilwharf fire was started in the Thames estuary which was extinguished quickly. The rest of the damage was to homes.

Creates New Tax Payers

Aside from the newly-inserted La Follette amendment, the tax measure would create 2,000,000 new income taxpayers by reducing existing exemptions; raise all corporation taxes by one percent; increase individual income taxes by a flat ten percent of the ordinary tax; increase surtaxes between $6,000 and $100,000 and raise numerous so-called "nuisance taxes," such as those on gasoline, automobiles and tires.

HERE' WHAT THE AXIS DICTATORS CONSIDERED

Meeting at Munich to decide their terms for peace with France, Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini had an empire second only to Britain's to divide, as illustrated on the map at top. Hitler has always declared Alsace-Lorraine and a large share of the African colonies rightly belong to Germany. Mussolini, in addition to cities along the French Riviera, also wants African colonies. Bottom, diagram shows how powerful is the French Navy with its 819,000 tons. This does not take into account the number of auxiliary warships.

Willkie's Stock Climbs Sharply In Maryland

Majority of Convention Delegation Approve of Indianan

BALTIMORE, June 19 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie's stock as a possible Republican presidential nominee climbed sharply in Maryland today, with reports a majority of the state's convention delegation had expressed their "personal" approval of the Indianian.

At the same time, the Willkie headquarters here issued a statement, aimed at the delegation, warning that the voters would not tolerate "deals" in the selection of the G.O.P. nominee.

One high-ranking party leader, hitherto firmly aligned with the supporters of Senator Robert A. Taft, offered a straw-in-the-wind opinion today that Willkie would get Maryland's sixteen votes.

He said an unofficial canvass of the delegation, which must vote as a unit, showed nine of the sixteen members personally favorable to Willkie and ready to switch to his bandwagon if and when Thomas E. Dewey fails to win the nomination on the first ballot.

The delegation is pledged to Dewey until he is nominated or put out of the running.

The spokesman, who asked that his name not be used, said a pre-convention survey from Maryland's viewpoint indicated Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) was out of the running, that Dewey was on the way out "because of the war and his youth," that Senator Taft (R-O) would split the Dewey vote, and that Willkie would come in ahead on a growing landslide.

"The whole thing depends on how much strength the practical politicians will have at the convention," he predicted.

Two weeks ago, a similar unofficial survey of the delegation by the same spokesman gave Willkie only four sure votes on the convention delegation.

CIO Hosiery Workers Endorse Roosevelt

MILWAUKEE, June 19 (AP)—The American Federation of Hosiery Workers (CIO) unanimously endorsed President Roosevelt for a third term today, after CIO vice presidents Emil Rieve and Van A. Bittner urged the move in short addresses before the convention.

"Ninety-five per cent of the workers in America, no matter which union they belong to are standing behind President Roosevelt," Bittner declared.

Rieve told the convention that "it is doubly imperative that the next president of the United States should be Franklin D. Roosevelt."

John L. Lewis Says Depression Was Laid on Hoover's Doorstep

Asserts Roosevelt Has Made It Chronic Fact in American Life

PHILADELPHIA, June 19 (AP)—John L. Lewis, CIO leader, said here that Herbert Hoover had "nothing whatever to do with" the depression and that President Roosevelt had made it "a chronic fact in American life."

John L. Lewis

In an address prepared for the 31st annual conference of the annual Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Lewis declared that the Roosevelt administration "even now has no suggestion to offer for national unemployment, except that possible involvement in a European war may relieve them from the responsibilities of unsolved domestic problems."

"Mr. Roosevelt," Lewis asserted, "made depression and unemployment a chronic fact in American life. It was a slogan of the 1932 presidential election that Herbert Hoover was responsible for that the workers of the United States realize that he had nothing whatever to do with it. It was laid on his doorstep when he came to the White House.

"It is only self-seeking politicians that blame Mr. Hoover. The policies he pursued, in cooperation with other nations, had a powerful effect in the start at recovery in 1932. The New Deal did not fulfill their promises or complete their undertakings. It was their policies and their weaknesses which have kept this country in depression for seven more years."

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

The great struggle for the "Tight Little Isle" of Britain has started in deadly earnest even before France's fate has been revealed to her by her German-Italian conquerors.

Formal notice of that was served on East coast England in a rain of German bombs that fell even before echoes of Prime Minister Winston Churchill's defiance of Germany's "air weapon" had died away.

It may mean that Germany has decided on a siege of England by air and U-boat to starve her into submission. It could foreshadow ruthless and unrestricted war in the air over England in a terroristic campaign to break the fighting heart of the English people, or it might be the first move in a German effort to surge across the narrow English channel and invade the island.

Whatever its place in the German scheme, however, that intensified raid on Britain is evidence conclusive that Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini are well aware that their victory over France is incomplete and tentative until England has been mastered.

Home Defense Respected

There are several factors about the raid which are worth noting. For one thing, it was staged in the dark hours, just before dawn. That implies that Germany's war captains have a healthy respect for Britain's home defense.

It is recalled that in the dramatic rescue of more than 300,000 allied trops from the closing German trap at Dunkerque, Britain's home defense air force saw action. British spokesmen, including Churchill, have claimed that it scored heavily, at a ration of four to one, against German flyers seeking to destroy the escaping armies massed on the beach at the French port.

The first German air assault in the "Battle of Britain" was in direct contrast to the situation during the fighting in Norway, in the low countries and in France. In those cases German air mastery was so complete that the Nazis ruled the skies in the daytime.

Retains Outmatched Fleet

Through it all, Britain necessarily retained at home an important part of her numerically outmatched air fleet. It has been joined now by Britain air forces heretofore devoted to protecting Allied troops in France.

There is another circumstance to be noted. London acknowledges that the German raids on England's East coast shipping and industrial centers were directed at military objectives. They did not constitute an air blitzkrieg against British public morale.

That tends to support the widely held opinion that it is an air-and U-boat siege to destroy England's sea life lines and contacts with her far-flung empire that Germany is planning, not invasion or ruthless air war. The risks of invasion against an England armed as never before in her history still seem too great.

AFL Would Assist Allies

The committee, endeavoring to write a plank expressing the party's viewpoint on foreign relations, was informed by Green that the AF of L favors "every ounce of assistance and supplies" to European democracies "short of our entry into the war."

A statement from the Manufacturers' Association declared:

"Currently disturbed labor relations and uncertainty as to future labor relations are a major obstacle in the national preparedness program; their existence tends to prevent capital from working and providing employment."

Mr. Roosevelt's compulsory service idea was the subject of much discussion, mostly unfavorable, throughout the day. There was talk of writing a plank on the subject.

Alf M. Landon, the Republican presidential standard bearer in 1936, declared:

"This is an example of the half-cocked way the president has been doing things lately x x x it seems he has to have an idea a day to keep Hitler away."

The former Kansas governor is chairman of a sub-committee named to write a foreign affairs plank.

After Lewis had concluded his speech to the committee, Landon asked for his opinion of Mr. Roosevelt's proposal. When Lewis had made his reply, Landon inquired whether it did not involve "organization of the youth of this country into labor battalions."

"That's my opinion of it," Lewis answered.

Berates Both Parties

For the rest, the C.I.O. leader impartially breated both the Republican and Democratic parties for their past records on labor and unemployment.

He warned that if neither party "measures up," it was "not unreasonable to expect that both would lose the confidence of the people."

PHILADELPHIA, June 19 (AP) Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, said tonight President Roosevelt's proposal for compulsory national service is "insanity and nothing less."

Making an unscheduled appearance before the Platform committee of the Republican National Convention, McCormick reviewed the military record of the World war and urged:

With this record before you I hope you will not heed the hysterical appeal for immediate conscription. x x x It would be a tragic blunder to call away from their occupations millions of civilians whom we cannot clothe for months or arm for years."

Writer Says Democracy In Europe Is Doomed

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., June 19 (AP) — Democracy in Europe is doomed, even if England is able to defeat Germany in a long war, the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia was told tonight.

R. H. Markham, foreign correspondent and special writer for the Christian Science Monitor, said in a prepared address that Great Britain and France have been chief inspirers of Democracy in Europe and British sailors and French soldiers its only guarantors.

"It sems quite certain that one of two things will now happen," he said. "First, Hitler may triumph . In that case, Democracy will be as a torpedoed ship, physically annihilated. . .

"Perhaps England will hold the fort. Maybe, Germany will partially exhaust herself in crushing France and attacking England. In that case, the war might drag on, as during Napoleon's era. Under such circumstances, England will fight with a fanatical fury and the British people in their desire for elemental self-preservation will forego all Democratic forms. They will devote all their energies to fighting and making implements of war. So, in that case, also, Democracy will be dead in Europe."

Russia Moves Troops To German Border

BUCHAREST, June 20 (Thursday) (AP) — Government circles received reports today that a large number of Russian troops are being transferred from the Bessarabian frontier with Rumania to the German-Russian border.

These circles said more Russian troops were being concentrated on the frontier in Russian Poland opposite the frontier with German-protected Slovakia.

German motorized columns are being sent to East Prussia, opposite the Baltic states where Russia recently sent huge forces in a military occupation, it was reported.

(Unconfirmed reports of German troop movements in East Prussia also have been circulated in the Baltic states.)

Ford To Contract With Government

Knudsen Says Sixty Per Cent of Warplane Engines Are for Allies

WASHINGTON, June 19 (AP)—An apparent hitch developed today in the plan to have the Ford Motor company turn out Rolls Royce engines to drive American and Allied warplanes.

After it had been stated here and in London that the company would produce 6,000 engines for Britain and 3,000 for the United States, Henry Ford declared at Detroit that he would contract solely with the United States government and for "defensive purposes only."

Hearing of this, William S. Knudsen of the National Defense commission made the following statement:

"In negotiations with the Ford Motor company it was made plain that sixty percent of the order for Rolls Royce engines was for the Allies and the balance for the United States government.

"I was assured by Mr. Edsel Ford, president, that this arrangement was satisfactory to the Ford Motor company. No contracts have been signed as yet. They are still in negotiation."

No Ground for Fear Liberty Is Lost in U. S., Declares Hoover

NEW YORK, June 19, (AP), Former President Herbert Hoover, writing in the July issue of "The American Mercury", declares that "predictator periods" in Europe are analogous to 'some recent years and events in America."

Under the title, "it needn't happen here", Hoover discussed reasons for the rise of dictatorships in Europe, based his observations during a continental tour two years ago, and compared them with conditions in this country.

Nevertheless, he insisted, "There is no ground for defeatist fear that Liberty is lost in America."

Hoover said he found in Europe that "the universal pattern" of nations preceding totalitarian rule "was the general despair of the people that democracy could solve their economic and governmental problems."

The result, he added, was that "the dictatorship was established by powers conferred upon the man on horseback by parliamentary leaders or confirmed by electoral action. x x x Liberty committed suicide."

Gang Quarrels over Loot Victim Tells Police

ELKTON, Md., June 19 (AP) — Found beside a road in a dazed condition, a young man, who said he was Dannie Delmont, of Tampa, Fla., today told police he was the victim of a gang quarrel over booty taken in a series of robberies.

Sheriff David said Randolph told him he had been riding with two men from Chicago and was knocked unconscious by one of his companions after a quarrel over loot.

W. Doudon Reynolds, of the Elkton police force, found the man, badly cut and bruised. The officer said he was armed with a revolver. The victim told officers he either fell or was thrown from the car.

A F.B.I. agent questioned the man at the local hospital where he received treatment. Later he was taken to the Cecil county jail.

Sheriff Randolph said the man told him his companions were enroute "to Syracuse to pull another job" when they reached here.

Germans Encourage Marriage with Loan To All Newly-Weds

Deduct $100 for Each Child, Mrs. Hampton Tells Rural Women

COLLEGE PARK, Md., June 19 (AP) — To encourage marriage and large families, Nazi Germany loans newly-weds $400, Mrs. Wade Hampton, Washington lecturer and educator, told rural women today.

For each child born, $100 is deducted from the amount owed, Mrs. Hampton declared in speaking on "the meaning of the German revolution as the folk revealed to me".

Women taking the annual short course also heard addresses this morning by Albert Warner, Washington news commentator; Lyle O'Rourke, national director of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, and Miss Easlene White, honorary president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Womens' clubs.

O'Rourke said too many college youths know about Communism, Nazilism and Fascism and "not enough about Americanism." America has a far greater challenge from within than from without, he asserted.

Dr. John C. Krantz, professor at the University Medical school, and Dr. Harold Benjamin, dean of education at the university, spoke at the afternoon session.

Tomorrow is visitors' day at the "homemakers' " college, with the families and relatives of the students coming here from all parts of the state.

At night a music fiesta of nations will be staged by county groups in front of the library building. Approximately 250 women, dressed in costumes of various nations, will sing folk songs and dance.

The program includes a bag-pipe solo and songs by a native Swiss yodeler.

Following the music fiesta, souvenirs from the counties will be sold. A soft-drink bar will be set up.

The principal speaker tomorrow afternoon will be Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen Rohde, former congresswoman from Florida and former United States minister to Denmark.

Spain To Claim Share Of War Spoils

Madrid, June 19 (AP) — Spain claimed tonight a share in any division of the spoils of war from France.

Responsible quarters said flatly that Spain's part in peace negotiations was "not just that of go-between" but the role of a nation which expected a voice in any territorial realignments.

Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini already have pledged Spain would have such a voice, it was said.

The road to empire already laid out by Spain's fascist government leads first to the south. Spokesmen have said Spain's "vital interests" in the Mediterranean require that she be given control of the African coast across from the Iberian peninsula.

The press has said, too, that Spain should have from Britain control of Gibraltar, and should take over the little principality of Andorra in the Pyrenees on the French - Spanish frontier.

Meanwhile, through those mountains, a steady stream of refugees snails into Spain from France. Among these have been the former Empress Zita of Austria and her son, the Archduke Otto, pretender to the non-existent Austrian throne, and the three children of King Leopold III of Belgium. Many were headed for Portugal.

Myron Taylor Reported Seriously Ill

ROME, June 19 (AP) — Attendants described the condition of Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's representative to the Vatican, as serious tonight, but not alarming.

Hiss illness, laid partly to overwork, has kept Taylor at his villa in Florence, confined to bed most of the time.

Japan Is Urged To Take Over Indo-China

May Occupy 'Protectively' in Anticipation of Collapse of France

By The Associated Press

TOKYO, June 20 (Thursday) — Powerful political factions urged the Japanese government today to turn to Southeastern Asia and even occupy "protectively" the rich French possession of Indo-China, in anticipation of collapse of the French empire.

Already the government, timing its action to coincide with discussion of the French armistice terms, was reported reliably to have dropped a reminder in Berlin and Rome of its "concern" over Indo-China.

This reminder, it was understood, was accompanied by recollection of the friendly relations between the three powers.

A reliable source disclosed, moreover, that Germany has reiterated to Japan that she will not ask for the return of Japan's mandated islands, stretching many miles east of the Philippines, above the equator.

These islands, the Marshalls, Carolines and Mariannes, were mandated to Japan under the treaty of Versailles.

It is not known whether Japan is asking the axis powers for a continuance of the status quo in the 281,000 square miles of Indo-China, or desires a "blank check" from Germany and Italy, to use as she will. Japan is linked to the axis powers by an anti-Comintern pact.

When Japan asked Germany about the Dutch East Indies, Germany said she was "uninterested" in the problem, and some people interpreted that as an invitation to Japan to take any action she desired.

At any rate, the Tohokai, influential political party, urged the government to occupy Indo-China first, because it is a major channel of munitions supply for the Chinese central government, Japan's Asiatic enemy, and second because the collapse of the French government allegedly casts Indo-China loose without control.

(British authorities in Hongkong, crown colony, however, warily stopped clearances of all ships intended for French Indo-China until the situation is cleared up).

Destroy Trojan Horse, Urges Uruguay

MONTEVIDEO, June 19, (AP)—Little Uruguay called today upon her two million people to destroy the Trojan horse.

The government summoned all men and women to voluntary enlistment for military training or for Women's Auxiliary services.

Officials acted to sharply limit the influx of so-called "tourists."

The man-on-the-street took heart from the approaching visit of the United States Cruiser Quincy, due tomorrow on a good neighbor tour.

Uruguay is the Achilles heel of South America. A parliamentary commission just has issued a thirty-three-point indictment of Nazi infiltration. The commission said it disclosed a Nazi plan for military occupation of the nation.

Disclosures from the report said evidence had been found of a scheme to make over Uruguay's national life and create a "little Germany" in South America.

The German legation in Montevideo was said to have directed Nazi propaganda. Twelve German leaders were detained. The army was ordered to stand ready, although spokesmen said the report seemed to show no immediate threat to national safety.

Night Flights

One of the most recent, and most difficult, phases of training carrier pigeons for war service is teaching the birds to fly at night. Like most birds, a homing pigeon goes to sleep at night. At present, some Army birds can successfully negotiate up to 50 miles a night, which is way below their daytime cruising range. —From the American Wildlife Institute.

German Conquests and The Monroe Doctrine

CONGRESS has passed a resolution expressing its opposition to the transfer of any of the European-owned territories in the Western Hemisphere to any other power.

This is a restatement of the Monroe Doctrine in newly-defined terms respecting the conquests of Germany in Europe. It embodies the realization that islands and colonies owned by France and the Netherlands in this hemisphere are not only at this time within Germany's grasp, but may at any moment be formally annexed by it. In addition to the Dutch West Indies, there are a number of territories included in the French colonial empire on this side of the Atlantic. They are French Guiana, on the mainland of South America; the islands of Guadeloupe and Martinique, with a few small dependencies, lying athwart the approaches to the Panama canal, in the Lesser Antilles, and, off the coast of Newfoundland, the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon.

If Germany should conquer Britain, then this menace would be far greater. In such event Germany would be in a position to help itself to any of the British West Indies; could combine the British, French and Dutch Guianas under the Swastika; could take Bermuda, could ask for special concessions in the Azores and the Cape Verdes; could help itself to Freetown, the present aviation base on the West African coast whence commercial air liners take off for Brazil and other Latin-American destinations.

Thus is the European war brought nearer to America in a way more sharply than ever impressing its need for strengthening its home defenses, in which the Panama canal stands as a vital factor. The congressional resolution calls for "consultation" with the Latin-American nations in case the protested transfers should be attempted. It is obvious that some consultations should be started at once and the State department is already arranging for a conference.

Under the Monroe Doctrine as originally formulated, the United States committed itself to resist European nations seeking permanent territorial aggrandizement at the expense of Latin-American nations. Under the Monroe Doctrine, as further developed after France's ill-starred attempt to make Maximilian emperor of Mexico, the United States committed itself to oppose armed European intervention in Latin-American internal affairs, even when territorial annexation was not an objective.

Under the Monroe Doctrine as still further elaborated by Grover Cleveland, in the Venezuelan controversy with Great Britain, and by Theodore Roosevelt in another controversy — again involving Venezuela—with Germany, the United States assumed the position of arbiter of Latin American differences with European powers. Cleveland and Roosevelt both virtually warned all overseas nations that they must not take direct military or naval action against a South or Central American country under any pretext or on any provocation.

Naturally, this interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine carried with it a new obligation on the United States government—an obligation to act as a sort of Pan-American policeman. Obviously we could not forbid European nations in Latin-America, unless we, ourselves, were willing to take over the duty of such protection. It was because of this implied obligation that, during the turbulent days of Carranza and Villa, the American State department became apparently more agitated over the killing of one British subject than it was over the killing of several Americans. It happened that the Wilson administration had backed Carranza and Villa (later our own principal Mexican problem child) against Huerta whom the British preferred; and Washington was anxious then not to give London any excuse to say: "If you can't protect British subjects in Mexico, we shall have to do it, ourselves."

Under President Franklin D. Roosevelt's "good neighbor" policy, however, the United States renounced the role of Pan-American policeman. That left to each European nation the problem of protecting its own citizens and property in Latin-American nations. But the United States has not renounced the Grover Cleveland-Theodore Roosevelt interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine, whereby we committed ourselves to prevent European nations from taking the law into their own hands in Latin-America. In other words, we still are pledged to protect Central and South American nations against punitive action by European countries. Under the new definition we are obligated to this protection not only to prevent European aggrandizement and to prevent punitive action by European countries, but also to protect ourselves and particularly our own vital home defenses.

Have You Been Listed In the New Census?

QUITE NATURALLY the people of Cumberland want to see this city take its proper ranking in the new decennial census of the United States that is now under way. It is important, therefore, that all local citizens be included therein.

The News understands that the Cumberland census is now approximately ninety-five per cent complete. The total figures will be ready for announcement within a few weeks. It is quite likely—indeed this has been found to be the case in other communities of comparative size—that citizens who should be listed have not been listed. Some have been away from home and have not as yet been contacted by the census takers, or they have been missed for other reasons.

There is yet time for inclusion of all those persons who have not been missed. Unfortunately, owing to the population ranking of the city, there is no supervising headquarters here to which the names of persons missed may be reported. The work of district supervision is being carried on at Hagerstown.

Census officials and workers are anxious to have their work complete. They have advised The News that they will include any of those who have not as yet been recorded in the census. They have suggested that, until such other arrangements may be made, such persons leave their names and addresses with the local chamber of commerce and that district census representatives from Hagerstown will pick up these names on future visits to Cumberland and see that census takers get in touch with the persons and obtain the necessary information. The chamber headquarters is on the fifth floor of the Liberty Trust building, but it may be reached by telephone No. 1698.

The population of Cumberland in the fifteenth United States census (1930) was 37,747. Under the new census of 1940 it should run well above 40,000, in view of the known growth of the community. But, for obvious reasons, it should be as complete as possible.

Our Picturesque Language

"TIPS will find a variety of pitches at the New York World's fair this season," a fair authority has explained. "The grinds will be fighting blow-offs with bally. The shills, or sticks, will be precipitating the turn for the scope joints, whistle workers and the like. But nary a mitt joint or a mitt worker will be found in the place."

Now what is all that about, anyway? Well, a glossary identifies these strange terms as follows: Mitt joint means a palmistry concession. Tips are crowds. Pitches are sidewalk concessions or booths. Grinds are spielers or talkers. The blow-off is the desertion of the concession, or pitch, by the crowd. Bally is useless sales talk. Shills, or sticks, are assistants planted in the crowd who start the rush to purchase the things offered for sale by the pitchmen. The turn is the psychological moment when the crowd is in a buying mood. Scope joints are booths where horoscopes are read. Whistle workers are those who sell whistles, horns and other noise-making devices. The mitt worker is a palmist.

Thus does the American amusement world furnish a strange though novel nomenclature. All these terms are clear enough when explained, but the uninitiated needs a glossary when running into several of them. Reduced to its lowest common denominator, the announcement means simply that the palmists have been banned from the fair.

A side show man ought to make a good newspaper headline writer.

A prophet is not only without honor in his own country, but Brigadier General Billy Mitchell, who back in the 1920's insisted that "air power in the future will be a determining factor in international competitions, both military and civil," got court martialed and the Injun sign.

Add Horrors of War: Hollywood reports that because of a shortage of false hair for wigs and such, heretofore obtained from the Balkans, a musical comedy picture "with the world's most beautiful girls" is being delayed.

It's a sad world, indeed. If you tell the truth you make enemies. If you don't tell the truth you can't make any real friends.

Now that he's in the war Mussolini may discover that a balcony is no place to be during a blitzkrieg.

I Remember ---

By MARSHALL MASLIN

I never feel very old, and yet that other war of which I was so small a part seems to me today to be so very long ago.

Marshall Maslin

I remember, as though the drifting fog and the bitter smoke of burning cities, those younger years of '17 and '18 and '19. . . . I remember the day I enlisted and in some indirect way managed to "bribe" an examining officer into allowing me to get eye glasses and become at least an ambulance driver. . . . I remember the camp to which we went and the long drills in the almost unbearable heat beneath the blazing sun—and that dark night in which we marched upon a transport and headed out across the Atlantic—and the long days at sea—and the submarine scare as we came in sight of France.

I remember the restless waiting at the port of St. Nazaire and then, at last, the exciting trip across France and up to the front. . . . I remember that first winter on the line near Verdun of bloody memory . . . remember the first snow I had ever seen and the stillness of the nights in that winter of 1917 . . . and the slow business of becoming soldiers.

And I remember that harsh and dreadful spring of 1918—when the Germans drove and drove and we went back and back and back. I remember the tearing, ripping sound of millions of shells passing overhead and the frightful explosion when they landed nearby . . . and the acrid smell of burned powder and the sweet deadliness of gas and the unforgettable smell of a land in which hundreds of thousands of men had died.

I remember courage and a little cowardice. I remember danger and security. I remember excitement and boredom. And I remember profound discouragement and heightened hopes, contempt and respect, gallantry and hatred, tested friendship and deepened resolution. Some fear but more of a strange curiosity to learn how much the human spirit could endure.

I, an old soldier, remember it all so well. And I remember coming home ready, I thought, for a settled life. Only a little shocked by the experience I had had, but changed in the respect that all soldiers who survive are changed—permeated with a solemn pride in that they have seen and endured the awfulness of war.

So I remember a world wrecked and restored, and hopeful once more. And now I see it torn apart again, broken and crying out in agony—and all my memories of those other years seem little and the experience I gained is a futile and trivial thing.

What part is mine—and yours—to save this good world of ours again for decent and honorable living?

Communist Talk Only Impresses Land of Freedom

By EDWIN C. HILL

Edwin C. Hill

Various persons recently criticized the three major broadcasting chains for affording time to the Communist leader in this country, Earl Browder. But the chains had no alternative. As the head of a legally constituted political party, Mr. Browder had a legal right to radio time. There wasn't a thing the radio people could do about it.

The aftermath of Mr. Browder's radio talk—in which, incidentally, this leader of a group devoted to the ideologies of Hitler and Stalin denounced the president's preparedness program—revealed that the public at large had paid scant attention to the Browder talk. It turned out to be a dud.

In these days when men are thinking straight, going to the heart of actualities, they are realizing more than ever what America means—the America of opportunity, the America that gave the poor boy, Henry Ford, the poor boy, William S. Knudsen, the poor boy, Thomas A. Edison, the poor boy Abraham Lincoln, and a thousand times a thousand times such poor boys, their chance to climb the hill of success.

Unforgettable Picture

It was Mr. Owen B. Winters, one of the great advertising men of this country, who once drew an unforgettable picture of that America.

"The reflected rays of the noonday sun," wrote Mr. Winters, "flash from the panes of the great factory. A siren sounds. The whir of machinery stops. From his office window the 'Old Man' looks out at the smoking chimneys, across the tarred roofs of the far-flung plant whose products are shipped by rail and sea to every nation. A boy brings a tray, with a raw apple, a bottle of milk and some crackers. The 'Old Man' lunches at his desk.

"As he watches the workers swarming out of the factory, he sees a crowd collecting at the gate. A man who is standing on a packing case begins to wave his arms. He is a swarthy little man with a black mustache. The 'Old Man' can't hear what he is saying, but he can guess. The 'Old Man's' salary was published in yesterday's newspaper. His income runs into six figures, more than the salary of the President of the United States. The man speaking from the packing case is a professional agitator. It is his job to make the workers discontented with their lot.

"'Soak the rich,' he cries. He doesn't care how much the 'Old Man' pays out in taxes. 'Down with capital!' he is shouting. 'Down with the 'Old Man'!'

Young Man's Reaction

"At the fringe of the crowd a young man is eating a sandwich from his dinner pail. The 'Old Man' recognizes the young man. He is the son of Charlie Pedersen, a foreman in the tool room. He has been studying mechanical engineering at night school. Young Pedersen is not paying much attention to the man on the packing case. As he munches his sandwich, he is thinking excitedly. 'A salary like that is something to work for! The 'Old Man' started at the bottom just like me. It's ability that counts. I have ability. Some day my pay check will be as big as that!'

"The 'Old Man' did start at the bottom, and he is proud of it. Five thousand men and women work for the great company and he holds the helm. Their trust, their hopes are in his hands. The 'Old Man' never went to college, yet his laboratories are filled with graduates from the best schools in the land. His alma mater was a backwoods schoolhouse where he trudged through the snow in copper-toed leather boots, McGuffey's Reader in his hand.

"With most of the men and women who work for the company, 'Old Man' is a term of genuine affection. They are puzzled when they hear the agitator on the packing case describe him as an octopus. There are white-haired men on the payroll who can remember way back when the plant was a little one-story building, and the 'Old Man' was a tow-headed boy who carried water for the foundry.

Not Worried

"As the 'Old Man' looks out the window he is not worried about the man on the packing case or what he is saying. He has met his kind many times before. He is worried more about what is happening in America today, and about the eager, bright-eyed son of Charlie Pedersen. He is worried lest the sickness that has seized upon the rest of the world spread its infection through America; worried lest all the isms and insidious doctrines of alien places destroy our greatest heritage, Land of the free, and home of the brave!

"He thinks of Washington and Patrick Henry, of Jefferson and Lincoln. He thinks of the thousands of brave Americans who have faced the wilderness, who have laid down young lives on Freedom's altar. He thinks of his own father walking beside his creaking wagon, crossing the Alleghenies, with a rifle in his hand. He thinks of his birthplace, a humble cabin on an Ohio farm chopped out of the hardwood. He reviews his own life, from its lowly beginning to his present proud position in industrial America.

Land of Freedom

"'Isn't the essential difference,' he asks, 'between this America of ours and all the polyglot nations of the earth, that this has always been a free land where men of ambition may scale the dizziest heights?'

"The social register of American business is filled with the names of men who came into the world with empty hands. Is the man on the packing case right? What does he offer in exchange? There must be bosses under any system. Isn't the better boss a man who has worked his way from the bottom to the top, a man who is a good boss because he understands the problem?

"It would be too bad, the 'Old Man' thinks, if the son of Charlie Pedersen should miss the opportunity that is his by heritage. It would be too bad if America should become like other countries, so regimented and politician-ruled that it would no longer be possible for a man to toil and climb and pluck the prime fruits of reward. For then this country would cease to be—America, sweet land of Liberty.—"

URGES WAR POWER

Sen. Claude Pepper

Suggestion of Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida, to the Senate that President Roosevelt be granted "full war time power to prepare and defend America," is only meant for duration of present emergency, he said. He recommended the President be empowered to suspend laws and government regulations.

THIS SHOULD BE INSTRUCTIVE

Need of a Better Exchange of News Between the Americas Is Discerned

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

Uncle Sam knows exceedingly little of Latin American sentiment of any sort, which is a matter particularly of concern just now due to talk of totalitarian activity in that part of the world.

Charles P. Stewart

It isn't so much that Uncle Samuel is uninformed diplomatically speaking. Our neighbors' foreign offices are quite willing to keep our state department posted as well as they can.

What we don't understand is Latin American news.

What we need is a competent corps of correspondents in the Latin field, keeping us in touch with developments in that area.

Contrariwise, an equally competent bunch of Latin American reporters is needed in our own midst, dishing out news to us in terms that we can comprehend.

Obviously a candidate for one of these posts must be saturated in the atmosphere of both halves of the western hemisphere.

Well, who is there who fills the bill? The answer is that John W. White is precisely the individual for the purpose. John has been a newspaperman in Buenos Aires, the Argentine capital, for approximately 25 years. He was a newspaperman in this country earlier than that, first migrating to Latin America as a member of the United States consular service.

But he had the newspaper germ already so prevalent in his system that he couldn't get rid of it; therefore quickly drifted back into the field of journalism.

He Knows Americas

For a long time past he has been chief correspondent for the New York Times on the South American continent. In fact, I surmise that he has been virtually the Times' sole correspondent; I never have seen any of his signed stuff that bore the earmarks of a product by an assistant. It would be hard to find any inhabited part of the republics between the Rio Grande and Cape Horn, the Atlantic and Pacific, that he has not visited.

John White is precisely the type of newspaperman needed to introduce the Americas to one another.

But there isn't enough of him. The demand is fo ra sizeable staff of these international scribes, and John is just one. He's the whole list. Training perhaps a dozen others (and that would be a skimpy number for what's required) would take eight o rten years; airplane pilots can be ground out in a few months at a time, but not the newspaper boys to fill these jobs.

Oh, yes, we have international correspondents alright, and some them in the European field are good, but Europe presents an entirely different situation from the Pan-American one.

An Illustration

In Europe certain rules prevail of a sort approximately the same as those in the United States.

Now let me quote an incident illustrative of the peculiarities of the Latin American game.

This was a number of years ago, when I was newspapering in Buenos Aires. One day the then Argentinian president, Doctor de la Plaza, was reviewing a procession from a front balcony of the Casa Rosada, the local White House.

Down in the crowd an Argentine anarchist, with a pistol, fired three shots at the doctor before he could be overpowered.

The shots didn't hit the president, but they missed him very narrowly.

I submit that, had such an attempt been made in Washington, the next editions of the American press would have had to publish supplements to get their full stories of the affair before their readers.

Just a Few Lines

The Buenos Aires newspapers dismissed that de la Plaza incident in rather less than half a dozen lines each and in not every instanee were those few lines even on the front page.

I had a loose business affiliation with the big Beunos Aires daily, La Nacion, and so outraged was I at this cavalled treatment of an attempt to kill the president, that I submitted my complain to Don Jorge Mitre, the editor.

Don Jorge looked up in surprise. "Why, the shots missed him," he said.

I just mention this incident to illustrate that an American reporter who considers himself pretty good at home may not rate so hot on the other side of the Equator. And vice versa. John White knows the game from both angles. He's the only newspaperman in the world who does.

Help for the Job Seeker

Magazine Writer Says Worker Should Never Lose Sight of the Real One

"If you and your job are out of tune," writes Esther Eberhardt Brooke, in Your Life Magazine, "you will proceed just about as harmoniously and end just about as right as a discordant orchestra rasping its way through Beethoven's Fifth Symphony."

"There is only one excuse for taking the first job you can get—in order to eat three square meals a day. If circumstances compel you to do that, do it, and give that job the best that is in you. But never, never lose sight of the real job—the job you want, the job you fit, the job that gives you a chance to be yourself."

"There are nine main fields open to you: Agriculture, clerical occupations, commercial occupations, mining, personal and domestic service, professional occupations, public service, skilled mechanical occupations, and transportation. In these nine classifications some authorities estimate as many as 20,000 different jobs. Select the job that interests you most, that seems to have the most interesting possibilities for you—then go after it!"

Sanity Our Watchword

From the Connellsville, Pa., Courier

The more effectively we impress upon Europe and the rest of the world the potential might of America, the less we shall have to fear from Hitler and others of his ilk. So long as the preparedness program is kept within the bounds of national sanity, the people will be found willing to sacrifice to make it possible. They want nothing of one-man rule — of a dictatorship set up in Washington. There is no emergency to demand that step.

In all the hustle and bustle there is naturally the fear of becoming involved militarily. That should not be allowed to influence our thinking to the extent we become resigned to the so-called inevitable. The dominating thought must be that we are sirtivng for peace and not for war. We have no ambition for conquest.

Before the world menace arose from the Reich, leaders of nations outside the growing dictatorships were hopeful the day of disarmament might be at hand. The horror in Europe has pushed that day back a generation, maybe several generations. Our hope lies in preparing so effectively none will have the hardihood to attack us.

But sanity should be the watchword.

Johnson Scores Reported Gang Plan on Willkie

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Hugh Johnson

WASHINGTON, June 19—According to reports from Philadelphia, the Republican politicians are ganging up to "stop Willkie." There is even talk of Dewey, Taft and Vandenberg acting as a triumverate, like Caesar, Crassus and Pompey, by pooling their interests to control the convention, name each other as candidates or in commanding positions and divide the spoils.

How would they decide on the main prize? Maybe they would shoot craps for the presidency—to stop Willkie!

These reports seem incredible, although they come from newshounds whose skill and judgment are entitled to respect. They seem incredible because they suggest a design for political hari-kari by a great party of opposition whose services, in full vigor, whether in victory or defeat, this country now needs as never before in its history.

Would Be Tragic

Under our great stress, our people are properly and increasingly distrustful of political shysterism. Any such blatant grandstand parade of it as this would bury the Republican party as deep as did the catastrophe of 1936. That would be tragic, not only for that party but for this country.

In this night of war, this sweep of European revolution toward National Socialism and the pressures of thinly disguised Socialists—some not so "National"—all around the president, another 1936 "overwhelming mandate" would project us into war, give us a war dictatorship no milder than Hitler's and probably perpetuate it.

The totalitarian threat to the "American way of life" which we are supposedly fighting, could be the very thing we might thus accept.

Would Be Proof

Talk about the "inefficiency of democracy", any such hamstringing of it at Philadelphia at the hands of those who could best defend it would be important proof of the charge.

Mr. Wilkie went his present astonishing distance without benefit of either politics or patronage. He owes nothing to anybody. The rising flood of spontaneous popular support of him is the richest expression of pure democracy in recent times. It may well be that it is not strong enough to nominate him, but it deserves a trial without being strangled in its cradle by any such sleazy, selfish, small-time politics.

Seen as Best Chance

Mr. Willkie's candidacy is, I think, the best chance we have to maintain a respectably strong party of "His Majesty's Loyal Opposition", which we so badly need just now. Mr. Roosevelt and his crew of masterful ghost-writers could make a monkey out of the Boy Scout, bean shooter, smart Aleckism of Tom Dewey. They would dance around the hippopatamoid lethargy of Senator Taft like a cooper around a barrel. They would make a Homeric joke of the weathervane veerings of Senator Vandenberg.

You can't give a political Joe Louis a respectable work-out with a featherweight—however clever—with a Republican Tony Galento—however heavy—or with a slap-happy political veteran, however experienced.

No Fair Sample

It is true that it is impossible truly to appraise a presidential white hope until he is actually a candidate right out on his own in the limelight, under the anxious eyes of 130,000,000 people. Willkie's preliminary workouts have been spectacularly successful, but it is no fair sample of what he can do on the big time.

He combines at least some of the appealing homely and common sense qualities of Abraham Lincoln and Will Rogers. He is a match for the president in any public appearance and an overmatch in logic and debate.

As I have said elsewhere: "I am not nominating him." I might not ever be able to support him. I am by no means sure he could win. But win or lose—he could provide that kind of vigorous, fair, able and patriotic opposition to wartime tendencies dangerous to our peace, democracy, defense and safety.

That is perhaps our greatest single need in this perilous moment. No other present Republican possibility, in my opinion, could.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Morning Motto

In time we hate that which we often fear.—SHAKESPEARE.

Little Fellow Is Guided by Real Teacher

Commendation Not Condemnation Is Motto in One Schoolroom

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH.D.

From a teacher comes this letter:

"Dear Dr. Myers: As a country school teacher, I believe with you in celebrating children's successes. A real teacher of my acquaintance has as her classroom motto, 'Commendation not condemnation.' It is mine, too, but once this past year, under the repeated advice of my superintendent, I reversed my method and nearly brought disaster into the life of one youngster, who is below par mentally. He has been in first grade three years, but this delay in promotion has not diminished his great joy in his school work, and his face beams like the sun as he busily works away at the few things he is able to accomplish successfully.

Balks Completely

"Much against my convictions, I ordered him to 'hard labor in a prison work shop.' He did his level best (no more than he had always done, for he had always tried so hard), but I scowled and scolded, and demanded more and more while he felt himself sinking in defeat and humiliation.

"He stood it bravely until one day, when he balked completely and when punished, cried out, "I hate this old school. I never want to come to school any more."

"Then I said to myself, "I have committed a crime if I cannot bring back to this child the joy that has been his through his small successes. How would I feel in his place?' He readily responded to old treatment and in June passed from the A division into second grade, his confidence in his ability to succeed in top notch. He will be two years at least in this grade (teachers can't make brains), but he will be happy if I teach him."

Solving Parent Problems

Q. My boy of four will strike at me when displeased with my command of a diciplinary sort.

A. Try to make fewer commands, but when you do and the child strikes at you turn him over your knee and give him such pain as he will remember. Do this for every such offense and do it instantly, until the offense wholly disappears.

Q. I have a baby nine months old. He goes about on his kiddy car and pulls everything down he can lay his hands on. Is there any way I can train him he must not touch things except his own toys?

A. Spend several short periods each day while he is on his kiddy car explaining to him what he can touch and what he must not touch. Center on a few things he must always avoid. Give him instant physical pain when he touches them. Merely keep him from other things or put them out of his reach, bringing them back gradually as he learns to avoid certain other things permanently. Otherwise, don't let him have the kiddy car when you can't supervise him. No sense in punishing him for touching any particular object at all unless you can be sure he always will be punished when he touches it. Be sure he has a number of things he can freely handle and enjoy.

Getting That Book

If you have loaned a friend a book and he or she has had it a long time, and you want it back, a good method to employ is to visit the friend's home, find your book and ask lightly if she (or he) is finished with it, and then offer to take it home with you to save the friend the trouble of returning it.

Girl Scouts To Present Pageant On the Life of Juliette Low

There will be an important meeting of the Juliette Low group, the Girl Scout Choral Club and registered day campers at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at Girl Scout headquarters, Greene street.

The climax of the day camp will be reached Monday, July 1 with the Juliette Low troop representative attending the day camp assisted by the Girl Scout Choral Club under the direction of Miss Mary Robb. A pageant of the life of Juliette Low will be presented and the work being done by the Red Cross for girl guides and Girl Scouts throughout the war-torn countries with the Juliette Low municipal fund.

Heretofore this fund was used to bring members of the girl guides and Girl Scouts together at the International camp, "The Chalet" at Adelboden, Switzerland, the gift of Mrs. James Storor of Boston, one of the pioneer sponsors of girl scouting in the United States. This is now impossible so in 1940 the money is being used to assist refugee Girl Scouts and guides in their forced exits from their native land. The largest number of refugees are in Devonshire, England, which is in charge of the Polish Boy Scouts executive.

In climax, there are about 50,000 Girl Scouts of tenderfoot ranks. Last year through the association, the American National Red Cross and Madame Chiang-Kai-Shek tranamitted $804 in gold ($5,000 in Chinese currency) for the relief of Girl Scouts in the devastated provinces.

Women in charge of the Juliette Low pageant include Mrs. Wyand F. Doerner, Mrs. A. L. Rogers, Mrs. W. L. Ramsey, Mrs. Richard Coulehan, Mrs. Pauline Fisher, Miss Mary Robb, Miss Althea Birchard and Miss Jane Showacker.

Tuesday, June 25 the Day Camp opens on Haystack Mountain with each girl providing her own needs. The last day of camp will be July 1 at the Celanese pool. Registration must be no later than Friday.

If You Boast Coppery Top

Like the thatch of the blonde baby, the coppery girl's hair is apt to darken at the roots as she gets older.

By HELEN FOLLETT

ONE SHADE of hair that is extremely rare and which is considered unusually attractive is the copper colored mop. In strong sunlight, the shafts glitter like copper wires.

Like the thatch of the blonde baby, the coppery girl's hair is likely to darken at the roots as she gets older. Which is a pity. Too bad Mama Nature doesn't give us color guarantees. But much can be done to ward off this change act.

The hair should be shampooed every ten days or every fortnight with a bland soap that has been melted. There should be three soapings and as many rinsings. If soap remains on the hair the gloss will disappear.

Use Lemon Rinse

After the last rinsing, add the strained juice of three lemons to a quart of water, pour over the head again and again. Let it run into a washbowl, and dip it up with a cup. Get a durable permanent so that no setting lotion need be used.

In beauty shops, one can have a touch-up with a mixture of henna and peroxide in proper proportions. No, my friend, I am not going to give you the formula. Home dyeing and bleaching are hazardous. Too risky. Treatments should be given by a specialist.

When women lashed themselves into steel riveted corsets there was a reason for shallow breathing. Not now when the figure is softly bound, has freedom of movement.

A girl is healthier, has a better complexion and wears her clothes more beautifully if she puts up a good front. She won't be able to do that unless she has a well developed chest which is the result of proper breathing and muscular activity.

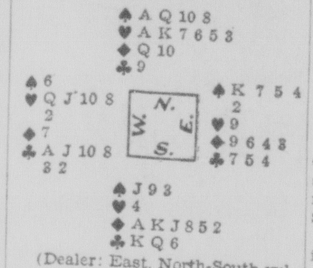

Five minutes of lung ventilating night and morning will do wonders in course of time. Stand tall, hands on hips. Inhale through the nostrils, lifting the chest and pulling in the abdominal muscles. Exhale through the lips and relax. Repeat forty times.

CREATING AN ILLUSION

SOME OF the neatest caprices in the game are those whereby an opponent is deliberately coaxed into believing the situation entirely different from what it actually is. An odd characteristic of plays involving such a principle is that some of them will work against a fine player and not against a run-of-the-mine one. The truly skilled cardsman will make the logical inferences which cause him to build up a picture of the situation, thereby causing him to fall victim to a trap prepared by a skillful adversary. The non observant, not-thinking, lackadaisical, careless performer, playing his cards almost "any old way," may thwart the finest play of this kind without knowing why.

(Dealer: East. North-South vulnerable.)

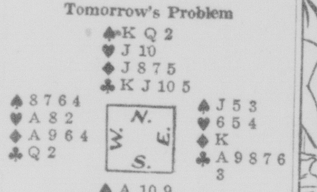

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♦	1 ♥	Dbl
Pass	2 ♦	3 ♣	3 ♥
Pass	4 ♦	Pass	4 ♠
Dble	5 ♦	Pass	6 ♦

West led the club A, then made a bad switch to the heart Q, when he should have led the 6 of the spade suit which had been doubled by his partner. Declarer, of course, won in dummy, then ran four diamonds, West discarding two clubs and a heart.

Clearly the hand depended on prevention of a losing trick in spades. Also the finesse was marked as virtually certain to lose, by East's having doubled that suit. The wily declarer studied a while, then saw a way to create an illusion. He led his spade J to dummy's A and returned the 8. East thought plenty. Finally he counted South as having held a singleton in spades, two hearts, four clubs and six diamonds, and his partner three spades, four hearts, one diamond and five clubs. If that was right, playing his K on the spade 8 would get it ruffed, then the rest of the suit would be good. So he played low on the 8. South then put on the 3, letting the 8 win, and he now discarded his spade 9 on the heart A, clearing his hand of everything except sure winners. Had East been a less skillful card reader, he might have beaten the contract with a careless play of his spade K.

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)

If West leads the spade 4 against South's 3-No Trumps, why should the declarer seek two of his tricks in clubs instead of in diamonds?

THE DAILY STORY

SURE THING

He Was Unlucky in Everything—Even in His Attempt To End It All; and Then His Luck Changed

By MEVA COCHRAN

Frank Trask perspired copiously while the last dollar of a fat paycheck (acquired two hours previously) found its way into Mr. Mike Correlli's coffers.

This was an old story with Frank—donating his pay to Mr. Correlli. As usual, two little red cubes had bounced around on a green cloth and, as usual, the right numbers didn't come up at the right time.

Frank euphoniously called that "shooting craps."

He Jumped To The Cinders

He pushed his way through the Saturday afternoon crowd and got out of the gambling house. Then he headed for the outskirts of town, determined to carry out a prearranged plan. Frank was leaving home.

To face again the wrath of Sandra, his wife, without his pay, was unthinkable. Sandra's icy contempt for patrons of Mr. Correlli far outweighed any repugnance Frank could feel for his own craven actions as he scurried out of town.

Walking along, scuffing up dust in the hot sun, he regretted too late that he had neglected to get carfare from the "house." Or from Sandra's brother, John, who had been at the same table as himself, apparently winning heavily.

Three hours later Frank hoisted himself stealthily into a boxcar and pulled the door shut. It was dark inside. He had no way of knowing where the train was going. He had been afraid to accost anyone in the railroad yards.

Suddenly, with a jerk that sent him sprawling on the floor, the freight started to move. He got to his feet and steadied himself in the swaying boxcar. He couldn't help feeling excited and fascinated at the prospect of going someplace. But he was irked by a sudden, dawning realization that something was wrong.

In the first place, the train had got under way entirely too rapidly for a long, cross-country freight. In the second place, he heard noises that seemed obviously not to come from the countryside. Frank readily recognized these sounds as the honking of automobile horns and the clanging of streetcar bells.

More in curiosity than apprehension he pulled back the door a little to see what it was all about. The first thing that swam into view was the big electric sign of Ruben's Suburban Theater several blocks away. With a panicky feeling Frank realized that the freight was going back toward town.

His first impulse was to make a jump for it, but the speed of the train vetoed this form of madness. Better wait until it slowed up a bit, he thought. Then hop off and start the long wearisome walk back to the railroad yards.

This gloomy prospect occupied him while the freight rumbled on and the lights of the city loomed brighter in the gathering dusk. Houses with cheerful, glowing windows flashed by in the half-light. He glimpsed through a lighted window, a family at their evening meal.

The scene brought a moist longing to his eyes as he thought of Sandra and little Freddie. They, too, would be sitting down to supper and (horrible thought) he would not be there. Instead, he would be on his way to some distant, unfriendly city. He wondered what they would think—what they would do.

Well, it was gone and no use wishing it back now. But it did seem a little foolish to throw up everything just because of losing $94.00. And poor Sandra and Freddie. How they would worry when he didn't come home.

"I'm a coward! That's what I am—a coward!" he blurted out. Then in a calmer tone of voice he added, "And I'm just about fed up with being a coward." He stood erect and stared belligerently at the darkness.

A little farther on the train slowed down. Frank glued his face to the opening in the door and debated the problem of railroad dicks. He had never been arrested in his life, and didn't especially care to be now. The train stopped and without thinking, he pushed back the door and jumped into the cinders.

In a jiffy he had scrambled from the embankment and was in the street again, directly under a light. The street sign said "Railroad avenue," and he knew then that his bungalow was only a few blocks away.

The front door had creaked, but at least no one had seen him come in. Then the door to the kitchen opened and John, Sandra's brother, stood there.

"Hello, Frank," he said, "just in time for supper."

Sandra was just as casual. In a voice that had no hint of sharpness in it, she said, "Hurry and wash, dear. We're just about to eat. How did you ever get so dirty?"

Frank had a distinct feeling that, for some reason he couldn't fathom, he would have no need for his hastily planned speech to smooth over the loss of his pay.

At a sign from Sandra, John announced, "I won $94 today. Easy pickings at Mike's joint, Frank."

Then Sandra said, "The evening papers say they are going to close up every gambling joint in town within the next 24 hours, so I suppose we might just as well tell him, John." She turned to Frank and explained, "You see, Honey, every time you went to Correlli's place John was there, too, playing for me. You always lost, so John simply made bets exactly opposite to yours. That way we couldn't lose. We practically had a sure thing, Sweetheart."—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

At the Gallery

When visiting a picture gallery, try to be considerate of the "other fellow." If a person is standing at a little distance from a certain picture, trying to get a proper perspective of it, don't plant yourself in front of him or her, close to the picture, blotting out the other's view.

Etiquet Hint

No person of good breeding ever makes disparaging remarks about husband or wife to anyone.

Rude Practice

Men who smoke in elevators are being rude because in such close quarters the smoke is likely to annoy the other occupants and also because there is danger of burning another person or his or her clothes if the elevator is crowded.

Correct Address

If a man sees a lady drop her glove, he should pick it up and hand it to her, if possible, not say, "Lady, you have dropped your glove." It is not correct to address a woman as "lady," but as "madame."

Nazi Papers Comment

But the mood of the Nazis was clear in press comment.

"France won't escape atonement" the Berliner Borsenzeitung bannerlined. "It must bea the consequences of defeat and its politics."

The authoritative editorial service, Dienst Aus Deutschland, emphasized the significance from the German point of view of steps toward French capitulation.

"It cannot be doubted," he said, "that on the German side no reprisal tendencies exist, that on the contrary a historical settlement with our opponent should be undertaken with complete calmness—a settlement in which not only the necessities for continued warfare against England but all questions insuring the future peace of Europe should be considered."

An indication of the direction in which this "continued warfare against England" may develop was seen in the high command's announcement that German battle planes overnight bombarded and set afire oil tanks on the Thames estuary and raided "numerous British airports."

"And now for England!" said Hitler's newspaper, the Volkischer Beobachter.

"Now for the first time the world will experience the interesting spectacle of how the British fight in the open field when they cannot misuse any foreign peoples as a breastwork for attack and as a rear protection for flight."

Negro Escapes from Jail In St. Mary's County

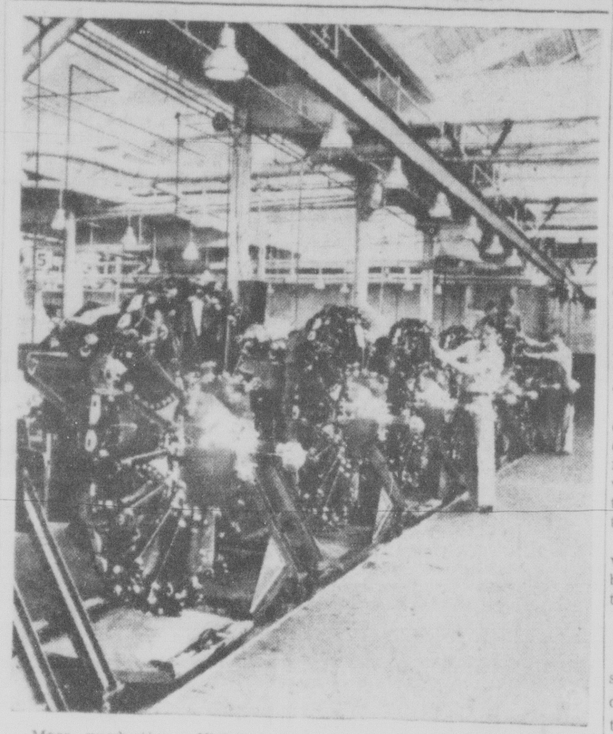

LEONARDTOWN, Md., June 19 (AP) — St. Mary's county police were searching today for Percy Hopewell, 23, Negro, who escaped from the jail here, where he was being held on a charge of breaking into the Ridge postoffice.

Hopewell was believed headed for his home in the lower part of the county.

Jailer Howard Buckler said the diminutive Negro wormed through a small trap door through which prisoners' food is passed, opened a hall window, made his way to the roof, jumped to the ground and disappeared in the woods.

Earl of Athlone Reaches Canada

HALIFAX, June 19 (AP)—The Earl of Athlone, his secret voyage to Canada completed and his simple welcoming over, rode by special train toward Ottawa tonight to be sworn in as Canada's sixteenth governor-general.

After a reception that had no vice-regal parallel in its simplicity, the Earl and his Lady, the Princess Alice, headed toward the national capital for the installation, little more than an hour after touching Canadian soil.

War's stress cut the traditional brilliant ceremony to the bare matter of a few handclasps and salutations.

Serious Developments May Come Out Of Investigation

BALTIMORE, June 19 (AP) — State's Attorney J. Bernard Wells said today information he received from the investigation of the State Industrial Accident Commission involved implications "which might lead to serious developments."

"We are not in any position to send anything to the grand jury yet", the prosecutor asserted.

Charles E. Moylan, Accident Commission chairman, gave Wells new information not included in the report made recently by the governor's Special Investigating committee.

Two conferences were held today by investigating officials but they declined to comment on details of the case. Moylan and Wells conferred and then met with governor in a second conflab.

Governor O'Conor said, "we have assured Mr. Wells that we will give him the fullest cooperation in supplying him with information in connection with present developments or any future developments that may arise."

Plans for Monster Tank Submitted by Engineer

ATLANTA, June 19. (AP)—The Atlanta Constitution says plans for a monster 100-ton tank, more deadly than anything yet designed in mechanical warfare, have been submitted to the United States War department by a Georgia Tech military engineer.

The paper says plans and specifications for the proposed tank, described as a "trench on wheels", were prepared by Major A. A. Casewn associate superintendent of shops at the Georgia School of Technology.

Major Case would not confirm nor deny the Constitution's story.

The paper said the tank would be armed with 75-millimeter cannon, and would carry defensive armor from five to six inches thick. It would be approximately twenty per cent larger than the great Nazi "growlers" now being used in France, the paper continued. Its speed was estimated at "just about equal" to that of the 80-ton German tanks.

United States

their answers were favorable. The other seven are expected to reply by tomorrow.

Meanwhile, the administration's latest move to give material aid to the Allies met with opposition on capitol hill.

Soon after the Navy had announced the release of a score of torpedo and submarine chasing boats to the British, Chairman Walsh D-Mass) of the Senate naval affairs commitee termed the transaction a "grievous wrong, especially to the American youth who may be called upon to fight for the defense of our country."

The Navy said it had changed a contract with the Electric Boat company Groton, Conn., to provide for delay in delivery of twenty such vesels to the United States fleet so that the manufacturer could sell the craft to the Allies.

Senator Byrd (D-Va) said he would ask that the naval committee be given a full explanation of the transaction.

Transaction Approved

Stephen Early, White House press secretry, told reporters that President Roosevelt had approved the transaction inasmuch as torpedoes for the ships could not be ready before late fall. He also said the United States would benefit because of expanded facilities for producing such craft.

In a day replete with defense preparations, these other developments occurred:

1. Chairman Vinson (D-Ga) of the House Naval committee announced that President Roosevelt favored the new $4,000,000,000 naval expansion legislation. After the House Rules committee had paved the way for consideration of the measure tomorrow, Rep. Rayburn (D-Tex), the Democratic leader, said it might not be considered for some time.

2. The federal communications commission ordered 100,000 commercial and amateur radio operators to prove they are United States citizens.

3. The Senate Appropriations committee approved at $1,777,489,788 emergency defense bill carrying appropriations for various types of arms and other fighting equipment.

4. Louis Johnson, assistant secretary of war, announced reorganization of the Army Industrial college to triple its training of officers in methods of mobilizing industry for defense. The school will function all year with three four-month courses, instead of nine months with a single course.

5. The War Department, through Major Cyrus Q. Shelton, of the army's general staff, contended that formation of a "home defense force" would hamper preparation of a "first line denefse." Shelton testified before the House Military committee in opposition to a bill by Rep. Anderson (D-Mo) creating a defense force, which would accept enlistments of CCC boys and others. Anderson replied that the War department opposed it because "it was not the brain child of some department satelite."

6. Senator Harrison (D-Miss) chairman of the Senate Finance committee predicted during the debate on the $1,007,000,000 emergency tax bill that Congress would receive within thirty days a second revenue measure containing provision for a war profits tax.

7. Members of the National Defense commission were reported to have told the Senate Naval committee that a committee-approved proposal to limit profits of airplane and ship builders to seven per cent might retard production.

8. Secretary Morgenthau disclosed that the French government had made available to the United States the designs for the Hispano-Suiza airplane motor. This followed recent transfer by the British to this country of patent rights on their Rolls-Royce airplane engine. The Ford Motor company will produce the Rolls-Royce motors, but no manufacturer has been chosen to build the Hispano-Suizas.

demand, and that a German-Italian army of occupation probably would go into France to make certain that she had no slightest opportunity to aid England.

(Diplomatic circles in Madrid heard reports that Germany and Italy were demanding unconditional capitulation and the surrender of the French fleet.)

So far as news from the field was concerned it was to the effect that the scattered and broken French armies were continuing resistance wherever possible — fighting on while the cabinet prepared for a last decision—but unsuccessfully in the main against the Nazi engulfing movement.

The possibility that some Frenchmen, at least, might be prepared to continue resistance away from the homeland if they felt it made necessary by the axis terms was seen in a declaration over the French radio that France's maritime communications had been assured in the Western Mediterranean.

This appeared to mean that Algeria was standing fast and that the French might be in position to fight on in North Africa, should a last attempt be made.

(In German-occupied Paris associates of William C. Bullitt, the U. S. ambassador, were understood to have urged him to return to the United States, telling him that he could do more good there than in German-occupied France.

(Three Germans who had known the city well before the war were declared now to be in important posts in the occupying forces. These were: Capt. N. Von Grote, who was Paris director of the official German news service; Otto Abetz, husband of a Frenchwoman, who was expelled in 1939 as a Nazi agent; and Dr. Achenback, secretary of the German embassy in Paris.)

Sarazen's 1922 Victory In Open Golf Surprise

In 1922 Gene Sarazen, who was scarcely out of caddy ranks, astonished the golfing world by winning the open. He said at the time that he was twenty-two years old, but actually he was twenty, writes Shirley Povich in "The Washington Post." He couldn't win another open until 1932, but in that year he made golf history by winning both the British and the American.

Patient Training Will Help Save "Incurables"

Humanitarian Trend Is One of Encouraging Things about Medicine

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The humanitarian trend is one of the encouraging things about modern medicine. Not so much startling discoveries or sweeping methods of cure, but the patient application of help. People who twenty-five years ago would have been dismissed or shunted into the general catalogue of incurables, are now being studied and aided by intelligent special groups of workers. They may not be 100 per cent curable, but it has been found that even apparently the most hopeless can be helped and at least given a new viewpoint on life.

One of the most distressing forms of crippling is the so-called spastic paralytic, whose nervous system has been injured at birth so that he cannot coordinate his muscular movements. We see these cripples everywhere, lurching and stumbling along the street, with slurred and unmanageable speech. Mentally they are, in most instances, quite alert, but their plight gives an entirely false impression in this respect.

Training Is Slow

They cannot be entirely cured because nerve cells once destroyed can never be restored, but areas of the nervous system which are still intact can often take up the work of the damaged sections, and be trained to do some of the useful work in life. They have to be trained slowly and carefully to make certain muscular movements and it is found that with this training they often can do so.

In a case of this kind, a mother taught her spastic son to move first one finger and then another. It was slow work, hour after hour. After the fingers she moved to the arms, the toes, and the feet. Eventually she transformed him from an almost helpless, lurching cripple to a human being who had about fifty per cent control over his movements.

Emergencies sometimes cause these people to realize that they have more control over their muscles than they suspect. One boy who was being trained, was taken out in a boat by his father, coaxed into the water and told to swim. He thought at first it was a joke, but his father rowed away and insisted he swim for himself.

Gains Confidence

When he saw the situation was serious he said to himself, "Now is the time to show what your training has done for you" and grimly struck out and swam far enough so that by the time his father decided the lesson had been learned, he had gained confidence in himself and can now swim with pleasure and benefit to himself.

At the Neurologic Institute in New York, a special clinic held for these unfortunates, teaches them slowly to make purposeful movements. They are taught to walk by focusing their vision on a chalk line on the floor or a painted point in the distance. A story related of one case is of a boy who was not able to walk at all until one day the clinic doctor, to his surprise, found him walking pretty well and noticed that he had on white shoes. The way his feet stood out to his eyes taught him how to use them.

Doctor Osler said once that "Most of us walk by faith." A great many cripples have to walk by sight but that is better than not walking at all.

In many faults—stammering, mental defectiveness, hard of hearing—this sort of training is bringing gratifying results.

Questions and Answers

F. D.—"I have heard of the treatment of duodenal ulcer with a series of shots. How successful is this treatment?"

Answer — I presume by "shots" you mean hypodermic injections. The use of injections of non-specific proteins was introduced several years ago but I believe has largely gone out of fashion, and of course the reason it has gone out of fashionn is that it was not as successful as the treatment by diet and neutralization with soda or aluminum hydroxide.

Stocks Hold Steady in Face of Wall Street's Worry over Terms of Peace

Transactions Total 560,350 Shares, Lowest Figure in Two Weeks

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, June 19 (AP)—Stocks held steady today in the face of Wall Street's worry over terms of the Hitler-Mussolini peace dictum.

The market received a degree of stabilization from the rails which generally rose.

The Associated Press average of sixty selected stocks gained .2 of a point at 41.3. Transactions totaled 560,350 shares, the fewest in two weeks, compared with 18,810 yesterday.

Aircrafts took an upward trend.

Gains of major fractions to more than a point were recorded for such leaders as Sante Fe, Southern Railway, Great Northern preferred, Chesapeake & Ohio, Boeing, Glenn Martin, Lockheed, Case, Harvester, Sears Roebuck, Chrysler, American Telephone, Dupont, Allied Chemical, American Can, Loft, Canada Dry, Westinghouse and American Woolen.

In the curb, where only 82,000 shares were traded compared with 109,000 yesterday, advancers included Aluminum of America, Jones and Laughlin Steel, Pennsylvania Water & Power, Humble Oil, and Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea.

Juvenile Find Is Starred at Liberty

Presenting the new juvenile find, John Sheffield, in the title role, RKO Radio's "Little Orvie," brings Booth Tarkington's delightful kid character to the screen of the New Liberty theater starting tomorrow.

The picture is based on the humorous tales about the eight-year-old lad who disrupted the peace of a whole community in his fractic efforts to save a dog.

In Orvie's case, the trouble lies chiefly with his mother, who has no sympathy for his desire to have a dog. Orvie's father is indulgent but unable to do anything about it, so when the youngster finds a huge Great Dane waiting for him on the sidewalk one morning, he promptly takes possession of the animal for the day.

But the dog refuses to leave him when he comes home after a hectic day of broken windows and indignant citizens. The homecoming is disastrous and Orvie is ordered to take Tiger to the pound, but on learning that the dog will eventually be electrocuted he resorts to blackmailing the colored maid into keeping Tiger at her home.

The consequences of this move, and the boy's efforts to aid a little girl in disposing of a litter of puppies, make for a conclusion that mixes laughs and tears.

Two More Features Are Billed at Embassy

Another double feature is scheduled for tomorrow at the Embassy theater.

One feature will be "The Arizona Kid," starring Roy Rogers, and the other will be "Amazing Mr. Williams," with Melvyn Douglas and Joan Blondell.

Another chapter of the serial, "The Shadow," will also be offered.

The double bill closing today includes a return showing of "South of the Border" with Gene Autry and Smiley Burnette and "Nick Carter, Master Detective," with Walter Pidgeon and Rita Johnson.

The first episode of the serial, "Drums of Fu Manchu," is also on the bill.

FOUR GOLDEN GATE GIRLS

These attractive young ladies are among the fourteen Golden Gate Girls chorus featured in the stage hit, "Egyptian Follies." This is the Elbern Calvert production which includes the illusion scene in which Hitler is beheaded. It is scheduled for an engagement at the Strand Friday and Saturday.

COMEDY CO-STARS

She writes books in praise of spinsterhood; he is a doctor who hates all career women. But in Columbia's "The Doctor Takes a Wife," co-stars Loretta and Ray Milland are forced to pretend they are married and, eventually, they discover that the title of her book, "Marriage Ain't Measles," is singularly apt! Reginald Gardiner, Gail Patrick, Edmund Gwenn and Georges Metaxa are others in the cast of the Maryland theater attraction opening today.

"The Doctor Takes a Wife," with Loretta Young and Ray Milland starred, now showing at the Maryland theater, is an account of a girl who writes books in praise of spinsterhood and a doctor who believes all women are . . . well, not poison perhaps, but fairly close to it.

In order to continue their careers, this perfectly matched pair of haters are forced by circumstances beyond their control into pretending domestic felicity. They bill and coo in public, they battle and clash in private.

Complicating the lives of this embattled twain are Reginald Gardiner, as Miss Young's somewhat eccentric publisher, who doesn't want to lose his favorite author even if he has to marry her himself, something he would very much like to do, in fact; Gail Patrick, as Ray Milland's financee, who is willing to accept the strange situation in which the doctor finds himself, just so long as the doctor doesn't mind if she goes out with Georges Metaxa, a playboy.

But the doctor does mind. Edmund Gwenn, as Milland's father, adds further excitement to the scene, and further comedy.

Also in the cast are Frank Sully and Gordon Jones, as dim-witted football heroes who regard the doctor as the greatest guy in the world because he pronounced them eligible for the big game of the season.

Twentieth Century-Fox Drama Is at Strand

Don Ameche, Eugenie Leontovich, Beth Hughes, Alan Curtis, George Ernst, Robert Lowery, Lionel Royce and Sig Rumann are featured in "Four Sons" the Twentieth Century Fox film drama which shows for the last times today at the Strand theater.

The picture was produced by Darryl F. Zanuck and has been witnessed by large audiences the past two days.

Entertainment of a different type is promised local theatergoers when "Egyptian Follies" comes to the Strand tomorrow and Saturday.

Currently on a coast-to-coast American tour, following its engagement at the Savoy theater, London, "Egyptian Follies" has been labeled "the show of the year."

Many of the stars and production numbers in "Egyptian Follies" are already known to the American public as a result of news pictures and articles carried in Life, Look, Pic, Variety, The American Weekly and other national publications.

Among the specialties in production numbers featured in "Egyptian Follies" is Lady Godiva's illuminated ride astride a stream-lined stallion and clad only in her golden tresses out over the heads of the audience; the 600-mile an hour human flight of pretty Louise Richter and "Enchanted Egypt."

On the screen will be "Charlie Chan's Murder Cruise," starring Sidney Toler and Marjorie Weaver.

Cesar Romero Makes Debut as Cisco Kid

Making his debut as the Cisco Kid in "The Cisco Kid and the Lady," closing today at the Garden Theatre, Cesar Romero gives an effective performance of the likeable outlaw, suggested by the O'Henry creation. The picture abounds with action and there is plenty of romance. Others in the cast include Virginia Fields, Marjorie Weaver and Gloria Ann White.

Also on the Garden program is the first-run RKO picture, "Everything on Ice," in which the young skating star, Irene Dare, is given every opportunity to prove her prowess on the ice. The cast includes Roscoe Karns, Edgar Kennedy, Lynne Roberts, Eric Linden and Mary Hart.

Magallanes, Chile, is the southernmost city in the world. It was formerly Punta Arenas.

Feminine Wiles Face Harsh Test In Battle for 38,000,000 Votes

By SIGRID ARNE
(AP) Feature Service Writer

WASHINGTON — Every trick in the feminine kit will be used this autumn to get out the feminine vote. Both Democrats and Republicans have women's divisions going full tilt, with two handsome women of 40 billed as opposing generals.

Mrs. Thomas McAllister—a slim, vivacious brunette from Michigan—leads the Democrats. She's a veteran of many home-state legislative fights: repeal, minimum wages, unemployment compensation. Married to a judge. Mother of two children.

Miss Marion Martin—a reserved, scholarly, prematurely grayed woman from Maine—leads the Republicans. She's a Phi Beta Kappa and a veteran of two terms each in the Maine Senate and House.

At Stake: 38,000,000 Votes

Statistics burst from both headquarters. They're both after the same cache of new voters: the 8,000,000 who have come of age since 1936 and the 30,000,000 too indifferent to vote in the last presidential election. That will mean a lot of door-bell ringing. But the ladies promise that no door bell will remain unrung by November.

The Democrats have a six-part organization that should send the un-politically minded scurrying for the quiet of the hills. Here it is:

1. The "reporters" — 30,000 of them, to study the Roosevelt program in the local setting.

2. The speakers' bureau — 600 groups of women rehearsing for speeches.

3. Publicity — 1,200 state and county directors.

4. Radio—1,000 state and county radio directors, who rally crowds for fireside chats, write scripts and wangle free time for local programs.

5. The Democratic Women's Digest, a monthly magazine with 27,000 circulation.

6. The Donkey Banks — 80,000 little donkey-shaped banks which gather up the campaign dollars.

To tie it all together there are 105,000 precinct workers.

Tea Parties Are Out

The Democrats have held 16 regional two-day conferences since 1936 and wound up recently with an institute in Washington that swamped the hotels with women Democrats.

So much for the energetic, determined Democrats.

Now for the energetic, determined Republicans.

They're rather newly energetic. In 1932 they were giving genteel parties. That still was partly true in 1936. But in '37 the Republican big-wigs invited Marion Martin to come to Washington to needle her sister Republicans into door-bell ringing.

Now no one would presume to suggest that the Republicans got excited about the women's vote because the Democrats did. Not at all. It probably was just spontaneous combustion following two defeats in presidential years. At any rate there will be more Republican women working in this campaign than any year previous.

To begin with they're going to set a precedent by holding a Republican women's convention in late summer. It will be built around the candidate.

The Republicans — and that means Miss Martin—work through a National Federation of Republican Women's clubs. Some 250,000 members pay dues. In return they get a monthly study program for their meetings, reprints of important Republican speeches and digests of Washington's law-making.

The Republicans also have their radio staffs that write skits, their publicity chairmen, their little elephant banks to collect money. But they count heavily on the last day wind-up. On election day they organize into telephone and auto crews to get out the voters.

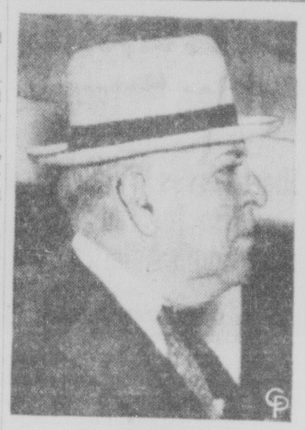

Two Important Votes

Here's how much a single vote can mean. The story comes from Rhode Island Republican headquarters. They phoned one woman who answered sweetly, "Just can't make it today. I'm making jelly. But I'll be down tomorrow." They explained the facts of election day to her. You just vote on one day. Then they sent a jelly-watcher to her house while she was rushed to the voting booth.

The Democrats top that with the West Virginia story of the lady precinct voter who knocked at a mountain shack. The woman of the house was shy. She wanted to go to the polls but couldn't. Why? Well—she just couldn't go to town because she didn't have no step-ins. That was easy. No woman Democrat would lose a vote that easily. The lady vote-getter ripped off her own step-ins, handed them to the mountain woman, piled her into a car and drove her triumphantly to the polls.

That determined Democratic lady is a postmistress now.

BIG NAVY ADVOCATE

Sen. David Walsh

Senator David Walsh of Massachusetts, chairman of the Senate naval affairs committee, leaves the White House after informing the president his committee is doing all in its power to speed up armament production. He said: "Our objective is to get navy yards and arsenals on a three shift basis immediately."

CHAPTER FORTY-ONE

TWO JAY BIRDS, battling desperately for a piece of gristly meat filched from a garbage can, settled on a gable roof near Bill Bailey's window to fight it out. The hour was approximately 6 a. m.

"Squeee-e-e-er, squeeee-e-e-e-er, chirek!" one blue fellow called the other, and apparently it was an ornithological insult. The second bird cursed even louder, squeaking and shrieking to high heaven. Their wings were fluttering and they dived at each other, clattering against the roof and even against the window screen.

"For pete's sake, what the devil's going on?" Bill growled.

They ignored him. Unafraid of man, much, anyway, the jays went on fighting, almost within his arm's reach. He sat up to be a spectator.

They made such an unholy springtime clatter of it that Jeremy Tucker awoke in the next room also. Bill heard Jeremy laugh.

"I'm betting on the blue one!" Bill called.

"I say—see here, they're both blue, Bill!"

"That's what I know. I can't lose."

Wide awake now, the two youths put on robes and house slippers and came out on the broad second-story porch of the mansion, a roofless expanse with banisters and chairs and hammocks, commanding exquisite views around two sides of the house. They talked of the birds, watched them fly garrulously away.

"Grand morning," Bill declared, inhaling prodigiously. "Wouldn't mind fighting myself."

He squared off in a mock attack on Jeremy, jabbing, feinting, ducking, grinning and cutting up like the healthy boy he was. Jeremy responded in kind, albeit, a bit awkwardly.

"You ought to box, Jeremy. Ought to know how. I wish we had some gloves."

"I—I say—ah, there are some. In the attic. Hanging on a nail. Quite dusty, no doubt. Mr. Weems said they were father's."

"Let's go get 'em!"

The gloves were old, none too strong now, but serviceable. Bill showed Jeremy how to get them on, began teaching him the rudiments of self-defense.

"No, when you see a chance to hit—hit! Don't swing in an arc, Jeremy. If you do, your opponent'll dart straight in and smack you down. Hit straight, hard! Like this."

He demonstrated, jarring Jeremy considerably, but not painfully. "Now get the feel of it. Try a quick, hard jab onto my chest. See how it feels."

Jeremy jabbed weakly.

"Come on, man, punch!"

Jeremy let go. It was a good punch this time and Bill was jolted backward, but he took it grinning. "That's the stuff!"

For a half hour they exercised, stamping, stepping, blowing, talking and laughing, and striking at each other as only youths can. Both turned pink from the exertion and the exultation as well. The morning air was cool, the exercise invigorating.

Both of them had dropped lounging robes, skinned off pajama tops, and were boxing naked to the waist. Slap! Smack! Slap-slap! They had no timed rounds, just practice ad lib, with Bill instructing. Then their bodies hit an iron table and overturned it, and all at once they laughed and stopped to blow hard.

"Round two coming up!" a voice called.

They turned to see Gayle, Mr. Merrifield, Mr. Weems and even the butler, staring at them with deep interest. Mr. Merrifield suddenly laughed heartily. Gayle, looking ever so lovely in her powder blue robe, came out and slapped Jeremy lightly on the back.

"You're dripping!" she declared. "Both of you."

"If any boss asked us to work this hard," Bill laughed, "we'd complain to the government."

Gayle observed then that Jeremy was critically embarrassed. She looked at him an instant in surprise. "Oh, I forgot!" she suddenly exclaimed. "You boys aren't dressed! I—I guess I'm not used to being prudish. But—but look, Jeremy, you promised a long time ago to teach me to swim. Meet me at the pool in 10 minutes, will you?"

She ran through the door, and Bill pushed embarrassed Mr. Tucker after her, then waited to talk a while with the older men.

Gayle was at the water edge when Jeremy came there. His swim trunks, dark blue, hid far less of his nakedness than his pajama pants had concealed, but he was more at ease—so strangely inconsistent are human conventions.

Jeremy's concern for himself was suddenly diverted, anyway, by the appearance of Gayle. That devlish young lady had on the new swim suit Bill Bailey had selected for her. She had told no one that Bill chose it; she did not mention that now. She just smiled at Jeremy—and waited.

The suit was extremely becoming on her, because it was white. White, under the straw-to-honey hair which the rubber bathing cap only half concealed.

It clung to her like a mold. Mr. Tucker swallowed. He couldn't quite control his voice, even if he had thought of any satisfactory greeting. He couldn't get his eyes off the bright red rosette which was her suit's sole ornament, a shimmery rose of rubber petals in the center of her breast. It was like a crimson magnet, drawing him. He swallowed again.

"You are still flushed a little from boxing," she said then.

"I—I say—yes! Um huhm!" That was inadequate and he knew it—no way to converse with a beautiful girl.

They walked to the water at the shallow end.

"Do I just hold my breath and jump in, Jeremy? Will you save me if I am about to drown?"

He had no idea how to start teaching her. He couldn't remember how he himself had learned to swim. He decided it best to demonstrate first.

"No," he said, in desperate seriousness. "No, you—I—you crawl like this first. Look, I'll do it in the pool. This is the crawl. It's a good stroke, I—see here, I'll just do it first."

As if in relief from his embarrassment, he turned and dived in. Then he really did swim gracefully, from the nine-foot part of the pool down to the shallow end and back again. He climbed slowly back up the ladder toward her.

"That looked awfully easy, Jeremy. You are a good teacher."

And instantly she, too, dived in. Right into the deepest part.

Jeremy was appalled. He understood that she knew nothing of swimming, and yet she had mistaken his conversation and tried instantly to emulate him! He almost cried out. He was literally too petrified with fear to move; he just stood, stooping a bit, mouth open, staring.

As if she were timed by machinery, however, Gayle came to the surface, struck out down the pool in a perfect crawl, emulating his every move, and making an exact copy of his "demonstration" in the water. She maintained the utmost poise and seriousness. Nor did he speak until she had finished her beautiful swim, climbed the ladder and stood near him again. She bent one knee a little in front of the other, lifted her hands ever so coyly, and looked at him.

"Now, what next, teacher? Will you teach me to dive?"

Only then did Jeremy relax—in a sudden laugh of exasperation.

He reached out to grab her, but she dodged. She ran, and he ran.

She darted, shrieking, through the bushes, with Jeremy in pursuit. She made for the house. Her legs, slender but strong, had the smooth co-ordination to run swiftly, but for once (perhaps for the first time) young Tucker was wrought up. He dug in. He drove his own legs, and half way across the lawn he caught her, but in that moment she tripped and both of them fell and rolled. The grass was clean and wholesome. Both of them lay there and laughed. And in Jeremy Tucker now, there was no whit of embarrassment, nothing of his scholarly reticence.

They sat five minutes in the sunshine and talked, and then they walked, swinging hands together, back to the mansion. They passed Bill Bailey on the porch, spoke and yet seemed hardly to notice him.

Certainly they caught none of the quiet resignation in Bill's dark eyes. Or was it, perhaps, not resignation to fate, but a smouldering jealousy which threatened to slip beyond his control?

Guy Named Mike Goes to the Fair And Out-Ziegfelds Billy Rose

By TOBY WIANT
AP Feature Service Writer

NEW YORK—A year ago, Michael Todd was just a guy named Mike. Now he's the World's Fair amusement king—producer of four big attractions, compared with Billy Rose's two.

Huge signs proclaim "Michael Todd's Streets of Paris" (condensed version of last season's Broadway success) . . . "Michael Todd's Gay New Orleans" (huge village with three smooth revues) . . . "Michael Todd's Dancing Campus (jitterbugs' paradise) . . . "Michael Todd's Op'ry House" (streamlined meller-drammers).

One of Eight

Who is this one-man blitzkrieg? Nobody in the Broadway haunts knew the answers, so I called on Todd.

I saw a determined-jawed, husky, young (32) man, dressed like an oldish college boy, sweater instead of a vest and all that. He stuck out his hand, midwestern style, and blurted, "Glad-ta-meecha."

I pryed this out of him:

Born at Minneapolis, one of eight children; he didn't go to school any more than he had to; never went to college; landed a job in the building trades and worked in Chicago and California; "posed" as a sound studio construction expert, got away with it and made a "pile"—but "dropped it"; decided to "nail" some of the entertainment business's "easy money."

Came east five years ago, wrote gags for Olsen and Johnson; made enough money to "buy a piece" of the "Hot Mikado," staged at the fair last summer; collected enough from that to spread out this summer.

He has 800 employes and a $40,000 weekly pay roll, but rarely has enough coin on his person to pay for a shine—too busy to go to the bank.

Two Slices A Day

"I've put all of my dough into these shows," he told me. "If they click (and they have so far), I'm in the money. If they don't, I'll be back on two slices a day.

"I'm having a lot of fun. The minute it stops being fun I'll quit. I'd rather make two bits pleasantly than a buck unpleasantly.

"People are smart these days. There are very few suckers left. People are looking for bargains, and if you give them what they want, they'll be happy—and you'll make a lot of money."

He plans to do a Broadway musical this fall "while resting up from the fair!"

TODAY'S GARDENGRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY
(Distributed by Central Press Association)

Euonymous vines, shrubs or trees are usually grown for their showy fruits. Other species of the euonymous are prized for their evergreen foliage. The flowers of the euonymous, which bloom well into June, are rather inconspicuous.

Euonymous alatus is one of the most distinctive and finest Autumn shrubs for foliage effects. It is unique for its cork-barked, or cork-winged bark, illustrated in the Garden-Graph.

In the Autumn the leaves of this euonymous turn pink and crimson. After the foliage drops, the shrub's brightly-colored berries make a showy display.

Euonymous is not particular in regard to soil or exposure and will grow well in shade. The fact that it holds its colored berries long into the cold months also makes it a desirable shrub for Fall and Winter color.

Kansas farms sold products and bought farm supplies worth $69,000,000 through co-operative organizations in the 1937-38 crop year.

Persons Suspecting Espionage Should Notify F.B.I.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 19 Persons suspecting espionage, sabotage or any violation of neutrality regulations should exercise restraint to protect the rights of "loyal and innocent citizens," Ernest L. Bailey said today.

The state director for the office of governments reports urged, however, that any suspicions of "Fifth Column" activities be reported to the nearest Federal Bureau of Investigation office.

His statement was issued after advices were received from the Department of Justice, whose duties in national defense were outlined by the president in a statement issued September 6, 1939.

At that time, Mr. Roosevelt directed the FBI to take charge of investigative work in "matters relating to espionage, sabotage and violations of the neutrality regulations." He also requested all law enforcement officers to cooperate.

The FBI district headquarters are in Huntington.

Agreement Reached On Ferry Squabble

BRUNSWICK, Md., June 19 (AP)— A delegation of Brunswick citizens reported today after a conference with the State Roads commission in Baltimore that a tentative agreement had been reached for operation of a toll-free passenger ferry across the Potomac river here.

The ferry would remain in operation for ninety days, pending completion of repair work which forced the closing of the Brunswick bridge.

Spokesmen for merchants here told the commission that thirty or thirty-five per cent of Brunswick's business came from Virginia citizens using the bridge. If that trade were cut off for ninety days, they asserted, it might be permanently rerouted into Leesburg and Charles Town, W. Va.

The commission agreed to make a formal offer to Brunswick authorities to provide a boat and all needed equipment for a passenger ferry, provided the town would finance its operation.

The ferry contemplated would be a flat-bottomed shallow-draft boat, guided by cables and powered by an outboard motor. Virginians coming to Brunswick would park their automobiles on the Virginia shore and cross in the ferry.

One of Two Escaped Convicts Is Captured by Officers Near Keyser

KEYSER, W. Va., June 19.—One of two escaped convicts was nabbed here last night, and the other was expected to be recaptured soon by state police and prison camp guards surrounding a mountain along New Creek about two miles south of Keyser where he is thought to be hiding.

Robert Queen, 24, Richwood, was captured on the "cut-off" road at the top of Knobley mountain, about seven miles south of here, last night by State Police Corporal Paul Vassar, Charleston, Trooper L. W. Kelly and Constable L. O. Kesner.

Queen, in company with Walter Worthy, 22, Marshall county, escaped last Friday afternoon from a road gang near Baker, Hardy county. A guard from armed camp number 73, at Baker, said the two men suddenly broke for the brush at 3:15 Friday afternoon. He said it was impossible to shoot at them, as his line of fire was blocked by a passing road truck and another group of convicts.

A pair of men whose actions were "suspicious" had been reported to police here yesterday afternoon by D. A. Arnold, who lives at the top of Knobley mountain on Route 50. Arnold said the two left the road and hid every time an automobile approached.

Queen had just been given food at the home of County Superintendent of Schools Paul C. Rouzer, on the "cut-off" road, when he was apprehended at nine o'clock. Mrs. Rouzer said the man had come to the door asking for something to eat. She gave him food and asked him to leave, she said.

The men had been traced as far as Moorefield Junction on Route 50, about seventeen miles east of here, where they were reported to have broken into the store of Charles High Sunday night and had taken clothes and pocket knives. Saturday night they broke into a store owned by Roy Corbin, near Romney, and stole food and cigarettes.

Queen, who spent last night in the Mineral county jail here, was returned to the camp at Baker this afternoon in the custody of prison guards Mark M. Hill and Abe Grubbs. He will be taken back to the penitentiary at Moundsville tomorrow, the guards said.

Jailer F. G. Davis said Queen showed no ill effects from his five-day flight through the mountains. He said the prisoner asked for something to eat the first thing.

Queen was committed two years ago to serve an eight-year sentence for robbery, and Worthy began a sentence of from one to ten years last February for automobile theft.

High Waters Blamed for Four Deaths in West Virginia

Mother and Two Year Old Child Drown in Creek

Two Brothers in Elk River as Rains Send Streams on Rampage

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 19 (AP)—A young mother, her two-year-old son and two teen-aged boys were listed as victims of high waters today while drenching showers in Southern West Virginia sent small streams to flood stages.

From the Great Kanawha river south, streams were high as a result of two days of rain. Creeks in some sections were out of their banks and threatening damage to lowland property.

Mrs. Mary Smith, 19, fell from a narrow wooden footbridge near Logan and carried with her into swollen Dingess creek her two-year-old son, Everett Lee.

Searchers from Clendenin dragged the Elk river near Birch Run for the body of 14-year-old Jack Jenkins, who fell from a boat and drowned last night.

The body of Earl Jenkins, 16, who despite his inability to swim tried to save his younger brother, was recovered early today.

The boys were in a boat at a spot ordinarily used as a swimming place. The beach, however, was under ten feet of water.

R. A. Jenkins, father of the boys, also unable to swim, was rescued from the swollen river by neighbors after he had dived into the water in a despairing gesture toward saving his sons.

Mrs. Smith, wife of a miner at MacBeth, Logan county, had started home after visiting the home of her brother in Freeze Fork.

Raymond Bradley saw her fall from the bridge. He reached the child a few minutes later but the baby died shortly after reaching the shore.

Mrs. Smith's body was recovered three hours later at a point where the creek passes through a Logan suburb. Mrs. Smith, mother of another child, had been married six years.

Almost three inches of rain fell in twenty-four hours in Logan county.

Dingess creek, Main Island creek and others were out of their banks, although there was no indication the Guyan river would reach flood stage.

Passing Prairie Chicken

At one time, before man exploited the range, Attwater prairie chickens were more abundant in the gulf coastal prairie section. Today, with more than 93 per cent of its former range depleted, the Attwater prairie chicken is on the verge of extinction. In Louisiana the birds are practically gone and only about 8,000 remain in a few widely scattered spots in Texas. — From the American Wildlife Institute.

Pytlak Leaves Cleveland and Goes Fishing

CLEVELAND, June 19 (AP)—Frankie Pytlak, mite Cleveland Indians' catcher who unexpectedly went home to Buffalo last night because "I don't seem to be feeling well," apparently has decided on a fishing cure.

Buffalo scribes who went to see Pytlak today located him in a fishing boat. From that wobbly point, he declared he expected to spend the remainder of the baseball season at home "because of my health."

Physicians who examined the 31-year old catcher here found nothing wrong with him, declared C. C. Slapnicka, Indians' vice president. But Frankie, as he has done before, went home anyhow, leaving only Rollie Hemsley to handle the catching duties. Henry Helf, third-stringer, is in a hospital.

Pytlak described his ailment as "upset nerves and in general, I don't seem to be feeling well." He said he hoped to return to baseball next year, but would not say as to whether he wants to rejoin the Indians.

Bill Swing Wins W. Va. Golf Open

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 19 (AP)—Climaxing 12 years of effort, lanky Bill Swing, pro of the Guyan Country club here, won the West Virginia Open Golf Championship today.

Playing over his home course, Swing put together a spectacular 33 for his afternoon round with a 39 carded in the forenoon for a final total of 293.

Just two strokes off the pace in the nip and tuck battle came Arnold Browning, assistant pro at Guyan. Browning set the forenoon pace but his putting faltered on the home stretch.

Larry Wiechman, assistant pro at the Logan Country Club, who was tied with Swing and Browning with 144 after yesterday's 36 holes, finished in a tie for third place with Johnny Javins, of the Southmoor Country Club, Charleston. Both had cards of 296.

In the amateur ranks, Perry T. Taylor, of Huntington, posted a 76-76-82-76—309 score to gain possession of the A. F. Thompson trophy. His victory came only on the 19th hole of a playoff with Steve Jupinko, the Moundsville machinist. On that extra hole, Taylor holed a tough putt for a four and victory. Billy Campbell, also of Huntington, finished third among the amateurs after a decidedly low start.

Campbell, a 17-year old preparatory school student, was in a five-way tie with Ward Wilkinson, of Huntington; Braxton Davenport, E. E. Jones and Roy Blizzard, all of Charleston, at the end of the 72-hole match play. All had 310's. A toss of a coin decided the winner.

Paired with Charles Hare of England, he also hurdled the first round in the doubles competition. The two defeated Harris Everett and Aleo Guerry of Chapel Hill, N. C., 7-5, 6-1, 6-2.

Meantime, Miss Marble reached the women's singles semi-finals with a 7-5, 6-3 victory over Mary Arnold of Los Angeles, her doubles partner.

The only dent in the seeded ranks resulted from Everett's victory over Henry Prusoff of Seattle. Prusoff, who was seventh in the rankings, lost 7-5, 6-3, 6-3.

Frank Parker of Pasadena, defending champion in the singles, erased his fellow townsman, David Freeman, 6-2, 7-5, 6-2; Don McNeill of Kenyon College eliminated another Californian, Jack Kramer, 6-1, 6-4, 8-6; Bryan Grant of Atlanta was forced into a 24-game set with Jimmy Evert of Chicago before emerging victor, 6-3, 6-3, 11-13, 6-2.

Garner Mulloy of Coral Gables, Fla., went four sets to defeat Robert Peacock of Los Angeles, but the third-seeded Welby Van Horn of Los Angeles, had the most difficult siege. He finally turned back Chicago's Gardner Larned, 1-6, 6-4, 7-5, 4-6, 6-4.

Browns in Uphill Win over Boston

ST. LOUIS, June 19. (AP)—Yes, believe it or not, the Browns beat the Red Sox again today, and they did it the hard way.

Overcoming a 4-run handicap, the fighting Brownies scored runs in bursts of two and passed the league leaders, 6 to 4, for their second victory over Boston and their fourth in a row. They took a double-header from the Yankees before the Red Sox came to town.

Walter Judnich, the young outfielder whom the Browns obtained from the Yankee chain, and Roxie Lawson, former Detroit pitcher, were the men of the hour in the Browns' victory.

The Red Sox had teed off against Bob Harris, who started for St. Louis, getting three triples, two doubles and two singles for four runs before Manager Fred Haney decided it wasn't Harris's day. Lou Finney hit two of the triples and Bobby Doerr got the other.

Lawson then went in to pitch and he held the powerful Boston bats in check while his teammates, Judnich in particular, began working on Herb Hash.

In the fourth inning Judnich came up with Harland Clift on base and drove out his seventh home run of the season. The Browns loaded the bases in the fifth on Roy Cullenbine's single, Rip Radcliff's double and Clift's base on balls. Judnich came through with a single, scoring two more runs.

DICK TRACY—Short Change Shorty

Fashions Should Be Pretty and Not Just Smart

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The dictionary defines the dowager, among other things, as an "elderly woman of dignity."

In this stage of the world's history—we can hardly call it "development", the way things are going in Europe—there are admittedly no elderly women. Beauty parlors, beauty columnists, face-lifters, no-older-than-you-feel philosophies, and religions claiming that age is a state of mind have eliminated the elderly woman.

But you can't do away with the older woman, no matter how hard you try. When she attends a fashion show and sees a charming young mannikin pirouetting in a hoopskirted gown, if she's sensible, she'll murmur to herself, "Not for me." Those lovely bouffant affairs that add to the witchery of Sweet and Twenty are not for the older woman, unless she is doing penance for her former sins.

When Bulges Come

They make the birthdays sing out; they add to the general tubbiness which is apt to accumulate layer upon layer after fifty. That cruel bulginess which comes in spite of dieting, rolling and the gym. Chins bulge, chests bulge, stomachs bulge, then why in the name of goodness add a bulging skirt?

You'll tell me women don't care how they look as long as they're in style. I'll grant you the hats we've been wearing for the past three years carry out your argument, but brims are back again, thank goodness—becoming alike to dowagers and debutantes.

Mrs. Roosevelt, always suitably and becomingly dressed, without a suggestion of the prevailing grotesquerie in hats, skirts, shoes or anything else, reminded women to cultivate taste when she opened the New York Fair's Fashion World.

Pretty, Not Smart

Fashions should be pretty and not just smart, and made available to all women in America, Mrs. Roosevelt reminded her hearers, after she had cut the red, white and blue rope across the building's silver doors. And she went on to say:

"This exhibit should show what you can do with taste, even if you haven't much money. Women must decide whether fashion is really becoming before they definitely adopt it, since it is going to reach down to every group of American women."

The highly unbecoming styles women have adopted for the past few years brings up that old question, Do women dress to please men, or to keep up with other women?

It would seem to be the latter, since the men have made untold fun of our hats, slacks and brief skirts.

The men, bless 'em, sighed with pleasure when "Gone with the Wind" brought back the billowing skirt,—but, alas! that's the thing the older woman may go in for only at her peril.

Can't Give Things She Deserved

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I met a very charming girl about two years ago. I took her out several times and decided I had better break with her, as I didn't have enough money to do the things for her which she deserved.

After I had been away for about a year, I realized I cared a great deal for her. She went out with other men, which is only natural for a girl when a man breaks off with her. While I was away I sent her a Christmas present, for which she thanked me, asking me to write to her.

Just before I returned home she met a young man I know, of whom her parents do not approve, and she wants me to arrange a date for her with him. She knows she shouldn't see him, but I'm sure she cares a little for him. She means everything to me, but I have so little to offer her that I don't know what to do. Please advise me. I am 28 and she is 25.

F.

I should not be the go-between in this case, if I were you. Her family disapproves of the other man, and in arranging meetings you are betraying their confidence in you. She must have some interest in you, or she wouldn't have taken you back after you broke up. Let her see she has a friend in you, and try hard to get ahead so you will have more to offer her. Take up a course in Vocational Training or Adult Education, which will give you a chance to advance yourself, thus earning more money. You have youth, which in itself is capital. My best wishes to you.

Didn't Keep Promise

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A certain young man has been dating me, and we always had good times together. He made a date with me to come over a week ago, and never showed up—didn't even telephone me. As he lives near me, I see him almost every day, but have acted coolly. He hasn't made any explanation as yet. What should I do, as I am very much interested in him?

WONDERING.

He's old enough to know better than break a date and make no explanation or apology of any sort. I don't blame you for acting coolly, and I'd give the young man the same temperature treatment until he does the right thing in the way of explaining his action.

Stop Your Quarreling

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been married ten years, and we have three lovely children. I am 30 years old; my husband is 35. After we were married a year or so, I discovered that I never really loved my husband; but as time goes on, I find myself staying with him just for the sake of the children. It seems to me we do nothing but fight until it is almost unbearable. Would you advise me to leave him?

UNHAPPY MOTHER.

Nothing could be worse for children than the effect of squabbling and fussing going on before them. It would almost be better that a home be broken up—and that is always the last resource—than that a child's first years should be filled with the memories of quarreling parents.

Why don't you stop quarreling? You know it takes two to fight, so why not make up your mind to be the silent partner in these rows? Think of your children—surely, they are entitled to a normal home where they may develop, instead of one where there is constant wrangling. Make things pleasant for them.

Tied to Mother's Apron Strings

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Girls often make fun of me for being so devoted to my mother. They say I'm tied to her apron-strings, and that isn't so at all. My father died when I was a baby, and mother has gone through a great deal to raise me, and I want to be grateful. I take her out to the movies once or twice a week, and to concerts.

But I really don't care whether the girls kid me about this or not. I'm not going to wait until it's too late, and then regret I didn't give mother most of my time.

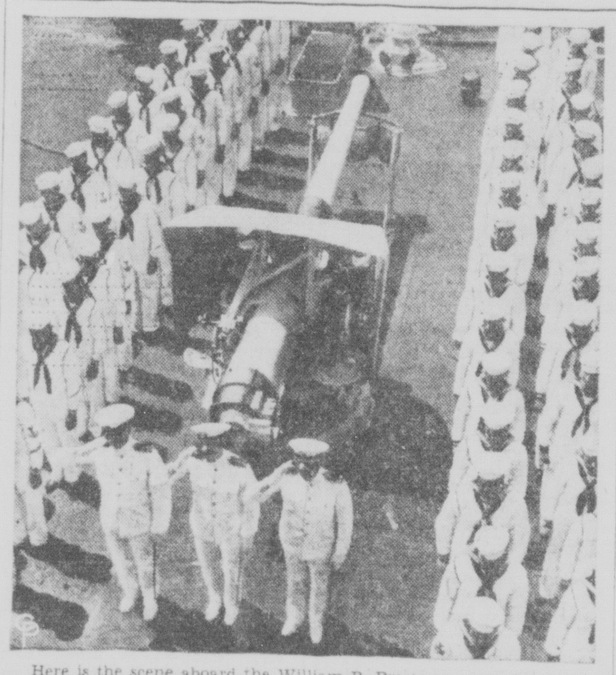

Then, too, the modern girl is too fast for me. I like the out-of-door type, and a home girl—one who knows something about running a home and can cook without resorting to the can-opener. I intend to wait until I meet the right one.

GENE

The girl who lands you as a husband should be congratulated. Also, the hopes of a good many girls who write and say that men are no longer interested in sensible girls should be re-awakened upon reading your letter.

It is popularly supposed that the gold resources of Alaska have been pretty well exhausted. Recently, however, a Harvard explorer reported discovery of a "lost world" of minerals, probably including gold, under 2,000 feet of ice.

Durocher and Owen Fight in Night Game

Flaming Feud Breaks Out at Ebbets Field

Brooklyn Defeats Cardinals 8 to 3 To Break Losing Streak

By JUDSON BAILEY

BROOKLYN, June 19. (AP)—The surge of the St. Louis Cardinals collapsed under the strain of seven errors tonight and the Brooklyn Dodgers fought their way to an 8 to 3 victory that lifted them into a virtual tie for first place in the National League.

Both clubs showed the tension of hard feelings and harsh words that followed yesterday's "beaning" of Joe Medwick, but the Cards were affected most.

Catcher Mickey Owen was banished from the game in the third inning for getting into a fist fight with Manager Leo Durocher of the Dodgers and shortstop Martin Marion was so jittery he made four errors, three of them in one inning.

Each team made nine hits, but Whitlow Wyatt kept his quota spaced except for two singles and came out of the wild west show with his sixth victory of the year, to the noisy satisfaction of 31,249 fans who jammed Ebbets Field to capacity.

Pittsburgh Beats Boston as Bowman Goes Route, 5 to 1

Pitches Effectively To Aid Bucs Move into Sixth Place

Boston, June 19 (AP) — A heavy shower interrupted the Pittsburgh Pirates for 45 minutes today as they moved into sixth place in the National League by drubbing the Boston Bees, 5-1, behind the effective pitching of righthander Joe Bowman.

Bowman did not give a single pass and kept the Bees' nine hits scattered in all but the sixth inning. The Pirates subjected Dick Errickson to his first defeat in five starts by chasing him after five innings and then were checked by Manuel Salvo, pressed into relief service as soon as he reported from Jersey City.

The Pirates scored all their runs against Errickson and clinched the game with a three-run barrage in the second inning. With two runners on in that frame, Wilbur Brubaker lashed out a two-bagger, and then scored himself after Al Lopez singled.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, June 19. (AP) — Billy Southworth gave his Cardinals a scare the other day, but otherwise things have been quite all right with the St. Louis club since the dapper little guy took over where Ray Blades left off.

Fibber Bill McGee was pitching against the Phillies when, with two down, a batter smacked out a clean hit. The next two batters hit boopers which had to be scored as hits, and the outlook was none too rosy for the Red Birds.

Suddenly little Billy popped out of the dugout and bustled toward the mound where the apprehensive Fibber Bill stood, memories of similar situations in recent months flashing through his mind.

"Bill," said Southworth, "they aren't hitting you. Those last two were lazy bluebirds if I ever saw any. Now get in there and throw the ball past this next guy."

McGee's shoulders went back and his teeth clamped. He fogged three pitches over the plate to retire the side.

That incident tells the story of the recent Cardinal successes; a story which has as its text mutual confidence. Gone are the jitters. In their place is something of the old Cardinal whoopde-do, the slashing, confident, chance-taking play that brings victories.

The team is just starting its season. When Southworth took over he told his players to forget the past, to concentrate on the future. He found a bunch of willing amnesia victims, who today are playing their heads off for the pleasant little fellow who asks only cooperation and a love of the game.

Southworth, frankly outlined his ideas as the Cards waited for their second crack at the Brrooklyns. In no way did he criticize the work of Blades. They used to be roommates.

"The team got away to a bad start because of the weather," he said. "The players would have a couple of rainy days to ponder a defeat. They got jittery, and pressed, and the harder a team presses the more jittery it becomes.

"The weather helped me when I took over. We had a couple of postponed games which gave me a chance to get my pitching staff set for rotation. I figure on five starters—Bowman, Cooper, McGee, Warneke and Shoun. I know most teams use four starters, but Warneke and Bowman will need a longer rest between games.

"How did I happen to start Shoun? Well, one of the boys came up to me and said it would please Shoun greatly if he could start a game, so I asked Clyde if he'd like to start. He said: 'I'd give my right arm.' He's left handed, you know. So I told him we'd set a date, and for him to get ready. The date was the first game with Brooklyn. You know what he did. Pitched four-hit ball to win. He's a starting pitcher if I ever saw one.

"Regarding the Medwick deal, I was asked my opinion before it was made, and I okayed it. I think Joe will do better with Brooklyn, but I won't miss him because I never had him. And I like Ernie Koy. In fact, I think that in a couple of years they may be thinking the Cards made a steal in the deal. Koy is fast, a power hitter, a fine fielder, and a great team player."

The Cards all seem to be great team players now, for that matter. They liked Blades. They are crazy about Southworth, who tells them to have a good time and play the game free from worry. They're fielding better, and running the bases with old-time exuberance. And in their happiness they're really slapping that ball. Just slap happy, that's all.

Lacy's, Trozzo's and Golden's Win Games

Trozzo's Whirlwinds were sluggish in their battle with the Davis Gassers and almost lost the game but finally squeezed through for a 3 to 2 victory.

Lacy's Delicatets won an easy 13-3 game from the Candy Kitchen aggregation with Campbell pitching a three hit masterpiece.

Golden's Bakery rallied in the late innings to snatch a 6-5 victory from the Post team. Each team had seven hits and one error.

Liberty Dairy won an easy tussle from the King team 17 to 4.

Detroit Defeats A's Twice To Go Into Second Place

Tigers Run Streak to Six Straight with 5-4 and 9-4 Wins

DETROIT, June 19. (AP)—The Detroit Tigers climbed into second place in the American League standings, ran their winning streak to six games and helped two of their pitchers better impressive records by thumping the Philadelphia Athletics twice today. Detroit won the nightcap.

Louie (Buck) Newsom chalked up his eighth straight pitching triumph in the first contest, Hank Greenberg singled Barney McCosky home from second with the winning run off Nelson Potter. Newsom, who won 20 games last season, has not been beaten since opening day when he bowed to the St. Louis Browns. Frank Higgins, of the Tigers, and Sam Chapman, of the A's, hit homers in their game.

In the second contest Lynwood Rowe, unbeaten in his comeback bid this season, scored his fifth consecutive victory. Rowe retired after yielding four runs in the eighth, Alton Benton finishing.

Medwick "Beaning" under Investigation

National League Awaits Inquiry by District Attorney

League President Holds Off Action after Hearing

Bowman Declares He Did Not Throw To Hit Ex-Teammate

NEW YORK, June 19 (AP)—An early decision by Ford C. Frick on charges that the "beaning" of Brooklyn outfielder Joe Medwick by Bob Bowman of the St. Louis Cardinals was deliberate appeared remote tonight as the National League president declared he would take no action until the results of an investigation by District Attorney William O'Dwyer's office were known.

Hinting that baseball could keep its own shirts clean, and that he was not interested in the civil aspects of the case, Frick said:

"Even if I do make up my mind, I would not make any announcement under the circumstances. Suppose I should suspend Bowman. That would be taken as proof of his guilt."

Frick spent four hours today interviewing everyone who might throw some light on yesterday's incident, when Medwick was felled and suffered a concussion.

Crowd into Hearing

He said he had asked only Leo Durocher, Brooklyn manager; Bowman; Johnny Mize, Cardinal first baseman; Pepper Martin, Cardinal outfielder; and Larry MacPhail, Brooklyn club president, to the hearing, but practically the entire Cardinal team trooped to the league office and before the lengthy testimony was ended many other players, as well as two or three Brooklyn fans, had been called in.

Bowman obviously was nervous. He was called in twice. He later reiterated an earlier statement that Medwick was his friend and the beaning was unintentional.

"I tried to put too much stuff on the ball and it got away," he said. "If I live a thousand years I'll still think that Joe stood there waiting for the ball to curve, and it didn't."

MacPhail was as emphatic in his opinion that the beaning was intentional.

"We presented our case to the effect that we believed it was intentional," he said, "and backed it with the statements of two St. Louis players.

Allen Hurls Tribe To 4-1 Triumph

CLEVELAND, June 19 (AP) — Johnny Allen hurled steady ball today for a 4 to 1 victory over Washington, helping the Cleveland Indians in their drive to overtake the league-leading Boston Red Sox.

It was the Tribe's fourth straight triumph, and its sixth in seven starts since a dozen Cleveland players aired unhappiness in the wigwam by complaining to the front office tney couldn't play winning baseball for Manager Oscar Vitt, who still is boss.

Allen allowed eight hits but never was in serious danger. Cleveland's nine-hit attack on Ken Chase and two successors included Hal Trosky's 15th home run of the season, which followed a three-run outburst in the second inning. Allen's double drove in one of the tallies.

Lous A 6-1 Favorite To Win Against Godoy

NEW YORK, June 19—Joe Louis is about to defend his world's heavyweight championship against Arturo Godoy at Yankee Stadium, fifteen rounds. My set of Farthingale tea leaves—with men who know tea leaves best, it's the slower-burning Farthingale—tell me that Godoy will not come up for the tenth round.

No man with the courage and cool resourcefulness of this Chilean can be licked before the fight starts. Godoy will display no hysteria. He will not exhibit the cold funk of John Paychek, Louis's last opponent, who scuttled backward with a clacking of teeth when Louis advanced to the kill last Spring.

Mr. Godoy will fight the best he knows how, and since he possesses certain gifts, I will not advertise the result of this brawl as a foregone conclusion. But Louis should win, and win by a knockout.

The Only Secret

The weights of these two assorted nougats are known. They're about the same. Their respective hitting quotients are known. Louis hits six times harder. Their records are open to inspection, and Louis has the better record. Thus, there is only one unknown factor in the whole panorama, and that is Godoy's secret weapon, as developed by his manager, the sinister Alsatian, Monsieur Armand (Weskit) Weill.

Monsieur Weill says that Godoy has a scheme of attack which will shake the great arena upon its foundation with surprise when revealed, thus postponing the baseball adventures of the New York Yankees for two weeks, until they can get the Stadium back in place.

"There will be no crouching," promised the Weskit recently, "and no lunging."

"No lunging?" barked Mr. Godoy in dismay. "What do you want to do, starve me to death? That means I gotta eat twice as much breakfast."

"I do not refer to lunging in the sense of the midday meal," said Monsieur Weill coldly. "I refer to your tactics in the last affair with Louis, when you lunged forward and tied up the bum at close quarters. I am merely pointing out that your strategy in the coming bout will not be the same, not at all. I am hinting that you will take the champ by surprise with a form of attack so new that Hitler don't even know it's on the market."

"All right," said Mr. Godoy. "Just so I get my lunge, with two scuppsa coffee."

Joe Sat It Out

This is a very formidable threat to Louis, with the brain of Mr. Weill linked to the brain of Mr. Godoy—all the more so when you consider that Mr. Weill cannot possibly be hurt unless somebody steps on his toe in the corner. This may account for the fearlessness of Mr. Weill. The nonchalance of Mr. Godoy is another matter. I do not know how to account for it, except that Louis was so much off form the last time they met that he made n impression upon the rhumba expert from Chile.

Joe was pretty bad that night. As mentioned before, he won the fight without much trouble and left his calling-card on Godoy's chiseled Chilean countenance. But he was something short of a homicidal maniac. Frankly baffled by the South American's new dance steps, he elected to sit this one out. Even as a kid in dancing school, Joe was a wallflower.

He landed a few punches that seemed to be flush on the button, but they didn't bother Godoy, and I'm inclined to think that this was less because of Godoy's powers of absorption, great though they are, than because Joe was consistently off balance. Usually he caught his man going away, or ducking, so that the blow either lacked full strength or slithered off the South American's noggin.

This time, with a bit more fixity of purpose, Louis should be able to bring Godoy out of his crouch with uppercuts and stab him properly. He should be able to, but will he? I do not know what's got into Joseph these days, if there is any truth in the ugly scandal that he picks his clothes out of Esquire.

The betting is roughly 6 to 1, or write your own recipe, that Louis will win, and even money that he will knock Godoy out. That is a fair proposition, and your correspondent, posed on the springboard for his customary swan with a half twist, predicts that the champion will level his man at approximately 2 minutes 20 and 6-10 seconds of round eight.

Louis Declares for Kayo and Godoy for Decision

NEW YORK, June 19 (AP)—Facing the most dangerous foreign challenge to the world's heavyweight championship since Max Schmeling and Primo Carnera grabbed the brass ring, Joe Louis makes the 11th defense of fistiana's richest prize tomorrow night in Yankee Stadium against rough, tough Arturo Godoy of Chile.

Some 30,000 are expected when the shooting starts at 9 p. m. (E.S.T.). They'll contribute to an anticipated gross gate of more than $150,000. Of the net, Louis receives 40 percent. Godoy wil get 17½ for the tussle of 15 rounds or less.

What They Say

From the "just before the battle, mother" statements of both men, it appeared there would be two winners. Louis, who took a split decision over the Chilean fisherman last February, although befuddled by Godoy's peculiar crouching style, predicted he was "going to make this one as short as possible." Arturo, recalling he was weakened in the last meeting by a cold which had affected him for six days before the bout, insisted he would be the "first heavyweight champion from South America" when the firing ceases.

Nevertheless, the Broadway bookmakers and the "experts" were virtually unanimous in picking Louis to turn the trick again. The Bomber was 1 to 5 to do it any way, and 1 to 2 to do it the hard way—chilling the Chilean before the 15 rounds were up.

This corner goes along with the majority in this one. I pick Louis to flatten Arturo within seven rounds.

"Yep," Louis stated flatly, "this is gonna be a different kind of fight than last time. I'm ready for any style Godoy uses. He'se gonna have to straighten up if he wants to win, and when he does—that's all I want. But if he tries to fight the way he did and stay down in a crouch, then I know what to do. I'll keep my title."

Five Prelims

Godoy, as confident a punching man as ever jumped into the ring, laughed this off. "I'm in much better condition this time," he pointed out. "I'm not predicting I'll knock Louis out, but I'll be in there trying. And if it has to go the full 15, then Louis will be a beaten man."

Five preliminary bouts will support the main go. Steve Belloise, young middleweight knocker-outer from the Bronx, takes on Wicky Harkins of Philadelphia in the chief eight-rounder. In the event weather forces a postponement, the battle will be postponed one day.

The proceedings will be broadcast over the WJZ-NBC (Blue) network.

Dempsey Wants 6-Ounce Gloves

ATLANTA, June 19. (AP)—Jack Dempsey the one-time Manassa Mauler, wants to use six-ounce gloves when he trades punches with a Tampa (Fla.) wrestler here July 1.

Promoter Jim Downing said Dempsey wired his request after the grappler, Cowboy Luttrell, suggested pillow-like 18-ounce gloves.

The ten-round bout was arranged here as the aftermath of a wrestling match several weeks ago in which Referee Dempsey backed up a decision by clouting Luttrell's jaw.

Downing indicated the Atlanta Athletic Commission would determine the weight of gloves to be used.

Medwick Badly Hurt by Pitched Ball

Grimacing in pain, Joe (Ducky) Medwick, recently sold by the St. Louis Cardinals to the Brooklyn Dodgers for $200,000 is shown lying on the ground at Ebbets Field, immediately after he was hit by a ball pitched by Bob Bowman, of the Cardinals in a game between the Cardinals and Dodgers at Brooklyn. Bowman's first pitched ball struck Medwick in the head. He was rushed to hospital and under X-ray examination to determine the extent of the damage.

White Sox Upset Yanks in Fourth Straight by 1 to 0

Thornton Lee Outlasts Russo in Southpaw Mound Duel

CHICAGO, June 19. (AP)—Thornton Lee outlasted Marius Russo today in a lefthanded pitching duel to give the Chicago White Sox a 1 to 0 victory over the New York Yankees. It was the World Champions' fourth consecutive setback and second straight by a southpaw.

For seven innings young Russo allowed the Sox only two hits, but in the eighth Mike Kreevich and Joe Kuhel opened with singles and after Taft Wright grounded into a double play at third, Luke Appling singled Kuhel home.

The Yanks pecked away at Lee for seven hits, but only in the seventh did they get as many as two in an inning.

Beggs, Red Hurler, Holds Arts Degree

The Cincinnati Reds gained heavily in brain-power when they traded Southpaw Lee Grissom to the Yankees for Joe Beggs.

Joe has his bachelor of Arts degree from Geneva College; furthermore, the has his record of 21 victories against four defeats with Newark in 1937 to offer as evidence of brain-work in action on the pitching mound.

The Chance For a Knockout

The job of chopping down Arturo Godoy as one would an oak tree isn't as simple as it seems. Joe Louis discovered this melancholy fact once before, and he is likely to discover it again.

The large and stately oak can't assume as many postures or gyrations as Godoy can handle. The oak has to wait for the axe, while the Godoy chin is always in motion from the floor to neck high. It is an elusive target, even for a sharpshooter.

When the champion and the challenger meet at the Yankee Stadium tonight the betting will be around even that Louis will close out the performance inside of ten rounds. Louis has too many guns for the entry from Chile. But these howitzers, meaning a right and a left, must first locate their highly-elastic target.

It is a war of movement with Godoy, and when you get a big, game, rough, active fellow whose main idea is to spoil the other side's attack, the problem is no simple one.

The Louis Advantage

It could be quite different if only Godoy packed a punishing punch. He doesn't. Louis does.

Louis can afford to take certain chances in locating the Godoy chin, whereas Godoy can afford no such luxury.

I believe this time Louis will finally catch up with his man and flatten him. I believe the Louis fighting mood will be many notches above the baffled and bewildered status of the Bomber in their first whirligig or merry-go-round.

Louis has yet to fall in a return engagement and while part of his old keenness may be dulled, enough remains to turn the trick if Louis will only move his offense into higher speed, and keep it going.

Godoy is hard to hurt and even harder to bring down, but the champoin is still a stunning puncher with either hand. Unpleasant memories smoulder in the Louis system until at last they are ready for the flame.

If you recall the details, Louis was sore at both Schmeling and Pastor in the second engagements, and sore at Galento in the first. There was nothing lethargic or listless attached to the Louis mood on these three occasions. He lost no time in opening vicious assaults that were highly damaging from the start.

Tougher Target

Conceding the fact that Louis will crowd his opponent from the start and attempt to erase the Godoy frontispiece as rapidly as possible, it must be admitted that the invader is much harder to surround and manhandle than Schmeling, Pastor or Galento were. His legs may carry no greater bulk than Galento's underpinning, but they can move about at a faster pace.

When you get a big, awkward party whose main intention is to go the limit, only a great amount of hustling will turn the trick.

"Joe was caught napping and off guard in that first fight," Jack Blackburn tells you, "but he will be another Joe this time. He knows now the kind of fight he has to make, and he is in a better fighting mood. Joe's only at his best when he is mad. You can't keep on being keen forever, or mad all the time. He wasn't either keen or mad in their first fight, but he'll be out after his man this time and right from the start."

"Yes, but can he catch him?" Blackburn was asked.

"I think he can," Jack replied. "And so does Joe. Maybe not in a hurry for this fellow is not only a tough bird, hard to hurt, but he also knows what it's all about. If he could punch like Joe can it might be all different, but he can't. I still say we never had a fighter who could punch as hard as Joe can with both hands."

At least, this time neither Blackburn nor Louis have underrated the Chile visitor with the elastic piano legs and the granite jaw. Louis has been told that he must keep after his rival from start to finish, that he must throw many more punches than he fired before.

I look for this to happen, starting with the opening canto. If it doesn't happen this way we will have definite proof that Louis has slipped well back and that the job of being champion has reached the boredom stage.

"Louis is two entirely different fighters," an old-timer remarked around fight headquarters yesterday, "meaning when he is sore and when he isn't. Godoy may have startled and surprised Joe in their first meeting, but I believe this time it will be Godow picking up the surprise package, just as Max Schmeling did in their second round-up."

All of which sounds righly reasonable. There always comes a time in every champion's career when he is over the hill and on his way down. It has happened to them all, barring Gene Tunney who retired before his peak.

It is a difficult point to spot in advance. Even when John L. Sullivan had become only a wreck of his former self, few believed he had gone back.

Louis isn't the savage young animal he was some years ago, but he is still something to beat when he gets steamed up against someone he yearns to annihilate.

He had better be in that mood against Godoy tonight, or lose a large patch of ground when it comes to ranking the heavyweights of all time. For he isn't facing any puff ball or any flutter of thistledown in this elastic entry from Chile who hasn't the slightest fear of the Bomber's bombs.

1939 Chev. Mast. Dlx Tn. Sed.

This car is equipped with radio, heater, defroster and clock. 11,000 miles of usage has hardly broken this car in. To appreciate the value this car offers you must see it and drive it. Plan your Fourth of July trip in this car. Your old car will probably be the full down-payment.

Retired Engineer Killed by Train At Union Street

'Growler' Coniff Meets Ironic Fate; Was 77 Years Old

James S. Coniff, 77-year-old retired B&O engineer, died early today in Allegany hospital after he had been hit and run over by a shifter train at the Union street crossing.

Affectionately known by the nickname of "Growler", Mr. Coniff had many friends in Cumberland and all along the line.

By a strange twist of fate, he met his death as a pedestrian after fifty-seven years of active service on the railroad without a serious accident.

Officers Carl J. Stouffer and Walter P. Crabtree, who investigated, said Coniff stopped on the lower side of the crossing until a passenger train left the station. Then, not seeing the backing shifter, he stepped in front of it and was thrown to the ground, his arm going under the coach's wheels, they said.

The train came to a halt immediately.

He was rushed to Allegany hospital, badly cut and bruised about the head. His left arm, which was nearly cut off by the train, was amputated at the hospital.

Coniff was apparently enroute home when the accident occurred about 7:15 p. m., he said.

Relatives last night said Mr. Coniff, who retired about a year ago, celebrated his 77th birthday Tuesday.

Hospital attendants reported his condition as "serious" early today.

Another Man Injured

Yesterday morning, Guy E. Shuck, 40, of Pinto, a Western Maryland Railway trackman, was injured when struck by a B&O train after he fell asleep on the tracks near his home.

He was admitted to Allegany hospital at 4:20 a. m., suffering from injuries about the chest.

Hospital attendants said Shuck told them he was walking home when he fell asleep on the roadbed while bending down to extinguish a cigarette. He was bumped off the track by the train some time later.

His condition was "fairly good" last night.

Cars 'Painted' by Mistake, Owner Asks Damages

Magistrate Frank A. Perdew is expected to return a verdict today in a $110 damage suit filed against the owner of a used car lot by a parking lot proprietor.

Charles Waingold, 416 North Mechanic street, is being sued by Kenneth Feight, of 311 Fayette street.

Feight, proprietor of a parking lot on Pershing street, is attempting to be reimbursed for his money and labor necessary to restore automobiles to good condition after they allegedly were coated with aluminum while a paint job was done at the used car lot adjoining.

Waingold, owner of the used car lot, had a fabricated steel office building erected last April and had it painted with aluminum paint, applied with a spray gun. During the painting Feight claims the spray was blown onto cars parked on his lot.

Feight had the cars cleaned and restored to the original condition and then filed suit against Waingold and his associates to collect the money he claims to have spent on the automobiles.

Thomas B. Finan, Jr. represents Feight, and Morris Baron is attorney for Waingold.

Golfers Prep for CCC Tourney on Saturday

Cumberland Country Club golfers are chorusing the salt water chanty of "Rain, Rain Go Away" as they prepare these days between downpours for the annual President-Vice-Presidents Golf tournament which is on tap for Saturday over the local course, providing the Weather Man does not have another deluge of double-duty dew-drops on tap that afternoon.

Pro Carroll Boggs announces that there is keen interest in the scheduled executive session and that, whether the weather is wet or what, the warriors are whetting their appetites for the function that follows the fairways' frolic, and usually winds up with fowl for the winning warriors at the expense of the conquered caddy-critics.

So keen is the interest, Boggs reports from his bomb-proof shelter in the bogs off No. 1 tee, that captains of the opposing forces have been changed with Bill Bibby and Bob Barnard giving way to Jake Brown and A. M. "Pee-Wee" Widener.

Citizens in Washington To Discuss New Airport

Plans for immediate procedure toward financing and construction of a $200,000 airport at Wiley Ford were discussed yesterday in Washington at a conference of Cumberland citizens and Washington officials.

James C. Shriver, Cumberland postmaster, headed the Cumberland group, which conferred with Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, Representative William D. Byron, of Maryland, and officials of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce and other government officials.

The Cumberland delegation was expected to arrive back in Cumberland early this morning.

James P. Karns (above), formerly of Cumberland, now of Baltimore, received the University of Maryland gold medal, awarded annually to the medical school senior with the highest average during the four-year medical course.

Dr. Karns was graduated from Allegany high school here in 1932.

For three years he was a member of the student school council and finally became president of the class. Dr. Karns will begin his interneship in the University of Maryland hospital July 1.

War or No War, Babies Must Have Milk

LONDON (AP)—A Belgian woman refugee told how she milked a cow in a Belgian field while German planes flew overhead.

During one of the train's frequent halts between Antwerp and Ypres, Mrs. Renee Thorn jumped out to get some milk for three babies. Bullets fell around her as she filled several empty beer bottles and then ran back to the train.

"The babies had to be fed," she said.

Robber Missed Payroll But Was Lucky, at That

CHICAGO, (AP) — A robber who walked into a bakery and took $15 while a $2,000 payroll was being delivered to another bakery two doors away was lucky at that.

He met no resistanuce while grabbing the $15. He would have found an armed messenger and a policeman waiting for him if he had aimed for the higher stakes.

Garden for Safety

LOS ANGELES, (AP) — Fifty children are transforming a borrowed lot into a garden in the "Bunker Hill" district here, directed by Mrs. P. M. Alcantara. A high accident toll and a high percentage of juvenile delinquency in the district convinced her the children needed to be kept off the streets. A Boy Scout troop is helping.

Members of 1890 Class Show Up At Reunion

There were only seven in the class.

Confederate Veteran Is Now 96-Years-Old

FRANKLIN, W. Va., June 19 (AP) —George W. "Uncle George" Hammer, who was taken prisoner by Union troops before he even was in the Confederate army — and that was before he was eighteen—has reached the age of 96.

The Confederate veteran, last in Pendleton county, celebrated the anniversary in bed, but until early in May he read without glasses and rode horseback over his farm.

In the 1861-65 war of the states, he was a member with two of his brothers of company F, sixty-second regiment of Virginia mounted volunteer infantry. Two other brothers were in the twenty-fifth Virginia regiment.

He took part in the Gettysburg campaign, helping to cover Lee's retreat across the Potomac. After the battle of cold harbor, he marched with General Early to the relief of Lynchburg and then into Maryland within sight of the capitol at Washington.

The sixty-second disbanded at Fincastle, Va., when it was headed off by Stoneman in an attempt to join General Johnson in North Carolina after Lee's surrender.

Hammer is a great grandson of a George Hammer who settled a few miles north of Franklin in 1761 and built a loopholed house.

Each son for the four generations bore the name of George and all in succession owned part of the land on which the pioneer Hammer settled.

Industrial Workers Make More Money

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 19 (AP)—The shift from 1939 to 1940 meant $2.13 more a month for the average West Virginia industrial worker, a statistical breakdown indicates.

For the first three months of this year wages averaged per man about $108.83 a month, swelling the total wage figure to $92,421,777.

Based also on workmen's compensation commission figures, the average monthly wage for the January-March period, 1939, was $106.70.

Total wages for the three months last year amounted to $81,804,726.

Accompanying the sharp rise in aggregate pay checks, the commission said, was an increase in the number of workers, tending to hold the average gain down.

During the first quarter of last year there was a monthly average of approximately 255,535 persons on the payrolls.

This year the monthly employment figure jumped to 282,867.

Wages for the first quarter in 1938 amounted to $76,758,351 and in 1937 to $94,024,952.

House, Never Moved, Has Been in 3 Counties

SPARTA, Ga. (AP)—Three different counties have collected taxes on the home of Alonzo Frank Butts, although the dwelling stands on the same rural spot selected by his grandfather before the Civil war.

First taxes were paid to Washington county. Then the Georgia legislature created Greene county, and the boundaries embraced the Butts residence. Later, a third county, Hancock, was created and the Butts homesite was included.

OTTAWA, Kas. (AP)—It was a close race that Miss LaVergne Flora, 18, had with the measles. Graduated recently from Ottawa high school, she had attended school 13 years without being absent or tardy. The day after her graduation she became ill with the measles.

Tunnel Men Finish Job, Invited to Celebration

"Holing through" on a tunnel job means a party.

And that tradition, generally observed the world over, will be maintained Saturday at the Savage River Dam.

For a crew of WPA workers this week blasted through the last layer of rock to complete the 1180-foot control tunnel through which the waters of Savage river will flow when the big dam is completed. And the 100-odd tunnel workers, with their families—or a total of nearly 500—will be given a party Saturday, Daniel S. Pelletier, superintendent of construction, announced yesterday.

The party, which will be featured by a barbecue, a baseball game and old-fashioned square dancing, will be held in one of the state forest recreation areas near the dam. It is scheduled to begin in early afternoon and continue throughout the evening. Refreshments are on the Upper Potomac River Commission, sponsors of the project.

Three crews have been working twenty-four hours a day for almost three months to push the hazardous, arduous job to completion on schedule.

There's much to be done before the tunnel is actually completed, but the main job was "holing through." It will have to be cleaned up, ditched and the walls lined with from twelve to fifteen inches of concrete.

Horse-shoe in shape, with a level bottom, the tunnel will be ten feet in diameter—sufficiently large to permit a maximum flow of 1,000 cubic feet of water per second.

Meanwhile, work was proceeding at a rapid rate on other phases of the huge project, and Pelletier stated work would begin about Aug. 15 on actual construction of the dam.

WPA Officials Inspect Savage Dam Today

The Savage river dam, construction of which is progressing rapidly, will be inspected today by WPA officials, Daniel S. Pelletier, superintendent of construction, said last night.

Among the officials scheduled to make the tour of inspection are Major Harloe, of Washington, chief engineer for WPA; State Administrator Francis H. Dryden, Charles F. Bornefeld, director of operations for Maryland; Harry D. Williar Jr., deputy state administrator, all of Baltimore, and F. W. Springer, of Frederick, area supervisor.

The group will be accompanied by Chairman John J. McMullen and Owen E. Hitchins, of the Upper Potomac River Commission.

Deaths

James W. Murray

James William Murray, well known traveling salesman throughout the Tri-State area, died Tuesday night at his home, 218 Cumberland street, following a heart attack. He was 72.

Mr. Murray, who had been a resident of Cumberland for forty years, was at work in Oakland Tuesday when he became ill. His son, C. Athey Murray, of Cumberland, brought him home, and his death followed several hours later.

Mr. Murray was a native of Hancock and a son of the late James P. and Margaret Light Murray. His paternal grandfather, Joseph Murray, was a private banker at Hancock in the early seventies and was prominently identified with Western Maryland affairs during and after the Civil War.

He was a grandson of the late Joseph Light, a pioneer hotel proprietor of Hancock, who conducted the old Light House which was torn down to make room for the Western Maryland Railway station.

John Johnson, chancellor of Maryland and father of the great Reverdy Johnson, of Maryland, died suddenly in the Light House during July of 1824. He was enroute to Berkeley Springs as a commissioner for Maryland in a boundary dispute with Virginia. He was buried in Hancock.

Mr. Murray was a warm friend of David Hunter Strother, famous under the name of "Porte Crayon" as an author and artist.

He was a life-long member of the Protestant Episcopal church.

Surviving, besides his son, are his wife, Mrs. Mabel Athey Murray, and six grandchildren, all of Cumberland.

Louis H. Turner

Louis Howard Turner, of Buffalo Mills, Pa., died yesterday afternoon at Timmins hospital, Bedford, Pa., where he had been a patient for two weeks. He was 64.

A sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Hichue, of Cumberland, is among those surviving.

Liquidating Church Debt

CHARLOTTE, N. C., (AP) — A devout church trustee told City Judge Frank Sims, unabashed, that the church had to have money and that was why he was selling drinks at home at a dime a throw from a half-gallon jar of moonshine liquor. He drew a suspended sentence.

Nab Coney Couple As Moonshiners

Federal Agents Arrest Man and Wife in Raid

A Lonaconing couple was arrested yesterday on moonshining charges after federal agents raided their home.

Cecil Crowe, a miner, was lodged in the county jail to await a preliminary hearing this morning before United States Commissioner James Alfred Avirett. His wife, also charged with violation of federal liquor laws, was not jailed, but was cited to appear at the hearing.

The agents reported finding a 25-gallon still, 125 gallons of mash and a half-gallon of liquor in the basement of the Crowe home, in the Detmold section of Lonaconing. They claimed the Crowes managed to dump out fifteen gallons of liquor before they could prevent it.

The raid was made by Charles E. Cushwa and David H. Walker, of the federal alcoholic tax unit, and Deputy United States Marshal Howard P. Loughrie.

Firemen Warned Against Fifth Column Saboteurs

STOCKTON, Md., June 19 (AP)—Worcester county volunteer firemen were urged today to guard fire equipment against "fifth column" saboteurs by Curtis C. Larrimore, Easton, regional instructor for the University of Maryland Extension service.

Larrimore spoke on arson and sabotage at the thirteenth annual county firemen's association convention. About one hundred attended.

"Firemen form the first line of home defense in these critical times," he asserted. "We are today susceptible to the fifth columnists. In view of the large percentage of migratory labor in Worcester county today I suggest all firemen keep alert to any subversive activity.

"Guard your water and power plants now and do not allow strangers to loaf around your fire departments or equipments."

Percy S. T. Reinwall, Easton, president of the Maryland State firemen, spoke on formation of the National Firemen's association. Six states already have affiliated and the need for such an association is urgent, he said. Reinwall started working for a national association several months ago.

County Tax Basis Has Skyrocketed

BALTIMORE, June 19, (AP) — County tax basis skyrocketed as a result of the 1939 reassessments, Chairman Harry O. Levin of the State Tax commission reported today.

Nine counties of the fifteen in which reassessments were ardered by the 1939 legislature have turned in the new figures. Eight reported a broadening of the taxable basis totaling $80,800,296. The ninth — Worcester county — reported a reduction of $810,914.

Baltimore, Montgomery and Prince Georges counties together produced seven-eights of the total increased basis, headed by a $30,306,812 jump in Baltimore county. Montgomery added $29,057,479 to its books and Prince Georges, $11,557,959.

Other county increases were: Carroll, $561,595; Harford, $6,457,941; Talbot, $1,194,210; Queen Anne's, $434,141; and Dorchester, $1,230,159.

Counties still to report are Cecil, Somerset, Calvert, Washington, Howard and Charles.

Statute Is Missing From College Campus

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 19 (AP)—John Marshall is missing from the Marshall college campus and students say things aren't just the same.

They miss the grave statue of the famous jurist for whom the college was named, look forward hopefully to its return.

James L. Mullen, superintendent of the grounds, cleared up the slight mystery about its disappearance from a campus pedestal—last winter's cold weather snapped off part of the nose, and repairs had to wait until spring.

The granite company making the repairs promises a speedy return.

Smart Boy Swims Free in Park Pool, But 'Them Days Are Gone Forever'

The management of the Constitution Park swimming pool has taken steps to thwart the slick scheme of a youngster to swim free of charge all summer.

The lad, said to be about ten or twelve years old, was apparently wise beyond his years in the ways of the world, according to Pool Manager William H. Buchholtz, who explained the scheme this way:

The youngster appeared at the pool several days ago, bought his ticket and received a basket in which to check his clothes. He placed his only garment, a pair of overalls, in the basket, checked it and received in return a numbered pin.

But instead of claiming his overalls at the end of the day, he left without them. Next day he appeared in bathing suit, after having "checked" his clothes elsewhere, presumably behind a tree or some such place.

He flashed the check-pin he had been given the day before and was admitted to the pool, the doorman figuring that he had just stepped out of the pool enclosure for a little while.

But attendants finally noticed the same pair of overalls remaining in the checkroom every day. They set a watch, but so far have been unable to catch the lad.

They expect to catch up with him, however. In the meantime, a new system has been inaugurated to prevent a repetition of such occurrences.

Hereafter, showing of the check-pin will not be sufficient to gain entrance to the pool. If a bather wishes to leave the pool enclosure for any reason and wants to return, attendants will stamp the date, together with the words, Constitution Park pool, on his wrist with ink.

At the same time he announced the new arrangement, Buchholtz also pointed out that the water in the pool was changed yesterday.

Many would-be swimmers were turned away yesterday afternoon as the big pool was drained and half a million gallons of fresh water pumped in.

Changing of the water began at 12:20 p. m. and took eight and one-half hours.

Rev. W. F. Atkinson

Methodist Pastor Dies Suddenly At Parsonage

Rev. Atkinson Had Been Here Only a Year

The Rev. Walter Franklin Atkinson, pastor of Kingsley and Park Place Methodist churches, died about noon yesterday at the parsonage, 248 Williams street, after a sudden heart attack. He was 56.

The Rev. Mr. Atkinson had been in ill health off and on since January, when he was stricken with pneumonia and heart trouble. He underwent a major operation three months ago at Sibley hospital, Washington.

The Rev. Mr. Atkinson, who had been in the ministry for thirty-five years, came to Cumberland in June, 1939, from the Dumbarton Avenue Methodist church, of Washington, D. C. He had been pastor there for five years.

Born in New Jersey

He was born August 2, 1883, at Clayton, N. J., a son of the late George and Mary Atkinson.

In 1905 he was graduated from Taylor University, of Upland, Ind., and two years later married Miss Rovilla Fry. He was graduated in 1909 from the University of Pennsylvania, where he received an A. B. degree.

The Rev. Mr. Atkinson was a 32nd degree Mason of the consistory of Free Order of Masons, of Camden, N. J. He was a member of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics and of Hope Council, of Bridgeton, N. J.

He was a member of the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist church for thirteen years. Previously, he held membership in the New Jersey Conference.

Attended Conference

The Rev. and Mrs. Atkinson celebrated their thirty-third wedding anniversary June 4 with a trip to Conference at Westminster.

Surviving, besides his wife, are a son, the Rev. Lowell M. Atkinson, pastor of the East Hartford Circuit; two daughters, Mrs. Ardis Atkinson Cannon, of Hyatsville, Md., organist-director in the Petworth Methodist church in Washington; and a half-sister, Mrs. Ada Atkinson Hafer, of Fullerton, Cal.

Services will be held tomorrow afternoon at the Kingsley church, where the body will lie in state from 1 to 3 p. m. Burial will be in the Harleigh Cemetery, of Camden, N. J., Saturday.

The official boards of the Kingsley and Park Place churches will act as honorary pallbearers.

Quarry Worker Hurt In Explosion

A 35-year-old stone quarry worker was painfully injured about the eyes yesterday morning in a dynamite explosion at the Corriganville quarry.

John Porter, of Corriganville, was tamping a shot into a hole preparatory to blasting some rock when the cap exploded and set off the dynamite.

Porter was unable to see when he was admitted to Allegany hospital at 8 a. m. for observation, but his injuries probably were not serious, hospital attendants said.

X-rays were taken to determine the extent of the injuries to his eyes. The outcome will be known today.

Porter's condition was reported "fairly good" last night.

Real Estate Man Gives Boy Scouts 150-Acre Tract

Aaron Lazarus Deeds Site near Oldtown To Potomac Council

A 150-acre tract of land, two-thirds wooded, was presented to the Potomac Council, Boy Scouts of America, for a camp site yesterday by Aaron Lazarus because he "wanted to do something for the boys of Cumberland."

The gift of the property, located four-and-a-half miles northeast of Oldtown, marks the first time the Scouts have received a donation of this kind.

The deed to the property was recorded yesterday in the office of Circuit Court Clerk Robert Jackson after Mr. Lazarus had approached Raymond C. Lalor, scout executive, regarding the gift.

Wanted To Help Boys

Mr. Lazarus, Cumberland real estate dealer, of 14 South Lee street, told the scout executive he "wanted to do something for the boys of Cumberland and felt the Boy Scouts, because of their outdoor training and character building program, could use the land to best advantage."

Boy Scout leaders were elated over the gift since the property will offer an ideal camp site for weekend hikes and will make a splendid location for numerous Scout activities.

"Mr. Lazarus is the first public-spirited citizen of the community to realize the importance of a camp site for boys," Miles G. Thompson, Cumberland Scout leader, declared. "We are much indebted to him, not only for the gift, but for the spirit in which it was offered."

1,000 Scouts in Council

Scout leaders emphasized the fact that such gifts were most acceptable to the council, which supervises a vast program for approximately 1,000 Scouts in the area, including 350 in Cumberland.

Since much of the Scout program consists of getting boys outdoors, leaders were hopeful that other citizens might follow Mr. Lazarus' example in providing camp sites throughout the area.

"We can't stress the Scout program too much," Mr. Thompson said last night. "Today, in Europe, boys are being taught a way of life entirely alien to the democratic principles with which all Scouts are imbued."

Not Permanent Camp

The Lazarus tract, located on the Definbaugh road about a mile from Oldtown creek, will not be used as a permanent camp for the Council, although the donor was hopeful that it might be. However, the tract, while suitable as a camp site for this immediate area, is not central enough for the entire district and is not located close enough to a lake or stream, it was said.

But leaders are confident that the site will prove popular as a camping ground since it is rugged, wooded and "off by itself."

"This tract was donated to be used," Scout leaders said last night, "and the more it is used, the better.

Deeded to Scouts 'Forever'

Formerly, the Scouts leased property on the South Branch and Blue Lick for their activities, since they have never actually owned any land.

According to the transfer drawn up by Attorney George Henderson, the tract has been turned over to the Scouts "forever", an indication that the donor is confident that the American way of life will be safe as long as such programs as the Scout movement carry on.

The land was deeded to three trustees representing the Scout council: Dr. Arthur H. Hawkins, Miles G. Thompson and Victor D. Heisey.

Boy Scout Leaders Win Certificates

Credit certificates for Boy Scout leaders who completed training courses in recent weeks have been mailed to a large number of scout leaders this week. Those completing Elements Part I course are as follows: Robert E. Metger, T. Edward Krantz, Earl F. Brain, John Alexander, J. Hopwood Wooddell and Earl C. Savage, of Frostburg; L. L. Shanholtzer, C. M. Bennett and L. R. Grover, of Moorefield; Harman Hartman, Eston K. Feaster, G. Leonard Smith and E. H. Coberly, of Petersburg; H. S. Adams, C. H. Collette, W. B. Michael, Dr. A. E. Krause and Stanley Roth, of Romney.

Those completing the troop camping course include: Ray Reel and Chester Bishoff, of Keyser; George Angle, of Piedmont; John Kyle and Howard Ward, of Frostburg; and Andrew Burrell, of Cresaptown.

Certificates are also being prepared for men who attended the "Introduction to Scouting" course recently conducted at Piedmont high school and the "Principles of Scout Leadership" course recently conducted at Allegany high school in Cumberland.

FRENCH PLAN RETREAT TO ALGIERS

Senate Approves "Excess Profits" Levy, 41 to 31

LaFollette Amendment Is Designed To Raise $500,000,000 Annually

Tax Would Reach Those Corporations Benefitting from Nation's New Defense Program

WASHINGTON, June 19, (AP)—The Senate passed the defense revenue bill tonight after adding an excess profits levy to raise between $400,000,000 and $500,000,000 annualy and inserting a drastic war profits tax which would provide additional billions in the event of war.

Approval of the two changes in the measure, which had called for $1,007,000,000 of new taxes took administration lieutenants by surprise. They opposed the excess profits tax, which would be effective at once, but many voted for the proposal to impose heavy additional taxes in the event of war.

Senator Connally (D-Tex), sponsoring the latter amendment, estimated that it would raise $8,000,000,000 a year from individuals alone and possibly as much from corporations. It would become effective automatically upon a congressional declaration of war.

The vote on final passage of the bill was announced as 75 to 5.

The dissenting votes were cast by four Republicans — Austin (Vt.), Gurney (SD), Hale (Me), and Taft (Ohio)—and one Farmer-Laborite, Lundeen (Minn.).

Goes to Conference

The measure next will be sent to a Conference committee of senators and representatives to consider the tax increases voted by the Senate alone. Democratic leaders indicated that both the excess profits and war profits proposals would be thrown out in the conference.

They said that such legislation should be enacted only after full study by both the House Ways and Means and the Senate Finance committee. The conference group will meet tomorrow or Friday.

Connally's war profits levy was adopted, 51 to 28, as a substitute for a similar amendment offered by Senator Bone (D-Wash.) Connally said it had been worked out by treasury experts and would put the country on a "pay-as-you go" basis automatically at the outbreak of war.

The excess profits tax, which would go into effect along with the higher income and excise taxes provided by the bill to finance defense expenditures, was adopted by a surprise vote of 41 to 31.

The amendment was sponsored by Senator LaFollette (Prog-Wis), who told the Senate it would "be a sham and delusion" to enact revenue legislation which contained no levy on excess profits.

La Follette said his proposal would reach those corporations benefiting from the new defense program. Chairman Harrison (D-Miss) of the finance committee and others urged that such legislation be delayed until Congress can consider a new tax bill — a step which Harrison predicted would be taken shortly. Harrison said he hoped excess profits taxes would be written law by Jan. 1.

Exemptions Are Granted

The La Follette amendment, imposing taxes similar to those in effect between 1917 and 1922, would grant corporations specific exemptions on profits and then would impose special excess profits levies. A corporation would have a flat exemption of $3,000 plus an additional exemption equal to eight percent of its invested capital.

A corporation with $100,000 capital thus would have a total exemption of $11,000.

Profits in excess of the exemptions but not in excess of an amount equal to twenty percent of invested capital would be taxed twenty percent. Profits in excess of the exemptions and exceeding twenty percent of invested capital would be taxed 40 percent.

Earlier the chamber stripped proposals for government economy from the tax bill. By a vote of 62 to 14, it reversed a decision of yesterday and eliminated a proposal authorizing the president to cut non-defense expenditures by ten percent.

Also rejected were proposals to instruct congressional appropriations committees to restudy non-defense spending bills with a view to reducing them by $500,000,000 and to require a flat four percent

England Reports Twelve Dead from Bombings on Coast Towns

By The Associated Press

LONDON, June 19, The battle of Britain is on.

It burst with a fury of bombings, Germany's heavest air raids of the war on England, just as Prime Minister Churchill predicted it would come—hard on the heels of the Battle of France.

Blow for blow, bomb for bomb, the little island of empire struck back.

At almost the same time, in the hours before dawn, waves of Nazi planes blasted at England's east coast towns and shipping along the lower Thames.

In reply squadrons of heavy British bombers smashed rail centers and industrial concentrations of northeastern Germany and the Rhineland.

Nazi Mechanized Forces Reported To Have Reached City of Lyon

German Sources Indicate Troops Are 200 Miles from Marseille and the Mediterranean

Strasbourg, Toul and Luneville Are Added to String of Nazi Military Successes in France

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, June 19—German pursuit of the shattered armies of France assumed the proportions of a gigantic and tragic chase tonight as Berlin and Rome awaited French decision on the axis powers' crushing peace terms.

Strictest secrecy was observed in Berlin regarding the precise nature of these terms. But inspired press comment indicated their acceptance would mean not only the partition of France but the harnessing of that country's resources to the great German drive against England.

The string of German military successes lengthened with bewildering rapidity.

The great seaport of Cherbourg, the industrial city Nancy and Rennes, vital railway junction in Brittany, were reported in German hands.

In their southward thrust Nazi troops were near Lyon, 200 miles from Marseille and the Mediterranean.

(A German bulletin heard in New York by the NBC short-wave monitor service said Nazi mechanized troops already had reached Lyon.)

Three Fortresses Fall

The high command reported three more fortress cities in the Maginot line defenses had been captured.

Strasbourg, bulwark on the Rhine opposite Kehl fell, and the swastika fluttered from the city's impressive cathedral.

Directly west of Strasbourg on the inner side of the Maginot line the Germans took Toul and Luneville, both key fortresses. They lie on either side of Nancy, which the high command repoted seized earlier today.

Luneville is historically significant as the city in which the peace of 1801 was signed, between France on one side and Germany and Austria on the other — a peace in which all Germany west of the Rhine was ceded to France.

There was no indication as to when or where the French plenipotentiaries would be handed Hitler's and Mussolini's armistice terms.

Authorized sources denied pointblank the five-point peace conditions outlined by the newspaper Popolo Di Italia and added that any other such erroneous publications regarding the Munich agreement were "unauthorized combinations."

First Conditions for Armistice Accepted by The French Government

General De Gaulle Publicly Rebuked for Speech Urging Continuance of Resistance

By The Associated Press

BORDEAUX, France, June 19—The French government accepted the first German-Italian condition for an armistice today and publicly repudiated a recent cabinet member for having urged from London a continuance of resistance against Germany.

The rebuke was addressed bluntly to General De Gaulle, the undersecretary for national defense in the Reynaud war cabinet which resigned Sunday.

It left open the door for early peace negotiations and it followed the appointment by "Old Marshale" Premier Henry Philippe Petain of agents to hear the extent of the national surrender demanded by the conquerors to give peace to this scarred, unhappy country.

General De Gaulle was taken to task specifically by Interior Minister Charles Pomaret, for having advocated in a London broadcast last night a French-British union, with the industrial help of the United States, "to crush our enemies."

Pomaret said De Gaulle had been ordered to return to France from London.

Fighting Continues

The French armies, still in the field in a last stand, reported German planes southward through Brittany in the direction of Nantes, at the mouth of the Loire river—occupation of which would cut off lower English channel ports like Brest, and St. Nazaire.

South of the Loire, Nazis drove below Tours to the river Cher and still farther east approached Lyon, Roanne and Amberieu.

The cabinet, with Spanish Ambassador Jose Felix Lequercia, the axis intermediary, reported sitting in, appointed a group of plenipotentiaries to go to whatever place is designated by Germany and there to learn the price fixed by Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini, and to accept or reject it.

The names of these emissaries were not disclosed officially.

(Dispatches from Madrid indicated, however, that Henry Berenger, former French ambassador to the United States, would head them.)

Unofficial reports mentioned Madrid, and specifically the residence there of Generalissimo Francisco Franco of Spain, as the likely meeting place.

The French communique said nothing on the questions of when and where, beyond this:

". . . The government of the Reich will make known the date and place where these plenipotentiaries will be received."

Bordeaux, Capital Of France, Bombed By German Planes

Important Buildings in City Appear To Be Main Targets

BORDEAUX, June 20 (Thursday) (AP-Via Radio)—An undetermined number of persons were killed and wounded this morning as low-flying German planes bombed Bordeaux, provisional capital of beleaguered France. Two of the bombs scored hits on refuge shelters.

Important buildings in the city, which the French government has declared an open city, appears to be the main targets.

Bordeaux was bombed four times a little after 1:30 a. m. (7:30 p. m. E.S.T. Wednesday.)

(Two Associated Press staffmen in Bordeaux, W. J. Humphreys of Salisbury, Md., and William McGaffin, a Nebraskan, told of the raid in broadcasts carried by NBC.)

Newspaper correspondents were forced to take refuge in a cellar during the raids.

They heard the German planes sweeping over the open city at low altitudes, bombing the streets and buildings jammed with refugees.

The thunder of exploding bombs came just as the townspeople, waiting for word of an armistice, had begun to hope they had found refuge and were safe.

Bordeaux has a normal population of approximately 250,000 but is jammed now with refugees bringing the number it shelters to perhaps five times that many.

There was no immediate indication where in the city the bombs fell.

Johnson Tells of Mistake Made by Allied Official

WASHINGTON, June 19 (AP) — Louis Johnson, assistant secretary of war, said today that Allied government representatives sixteen or seventeen years ago rejected urgent advice that they place mass orders in the United States for war planes.

Addressing graduates of the Army Industrial college, Johnson said a high official of one of the Allied governments, whom he did not identify, expressed belief at the time heavy purchases such as undertaken subsequently would be "a wastage of money."

The assistant secretary said he recalled the proposal with a "heartache because his sympathies were entirely with the British and French.

Democrats May Name Bankhead As Keynoter for Convention

Alabaman Favored for Post by President Roosevelt and James Farley

CHICAGO, June 19 (AP)—Speaker William B. Bankhead seemed destined tonight for the important post of keynoter at the Democratic national convention.

Bankhead appeared to be the likely choice after James A. Farley, chairman of the party's national committee, announced that both he and President Roosevelt favored the fluent Alabaman.

Bankhead

Farley told reporters that he would recommend that Rep. Bankhead be named temporary chairman and keynote speaker when the twenty-one member committee on convention arrangements meets here tomorrow to make the selection.

He also disclosed that he would suggest that Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky be endorsed for permanent chairman of the convention, opening here on July 15.

"I discussed this with the president," Farley stated at a press conference, and he has agred."

Farley said that Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, would be considered for the position of chairman of the resolutions committee.

United States Cautions Italy And Germany On Possessions

American Republics Are Called to Parley; Senators Demand Probe of Sale of Sub-Chasers

WASHINGTON, June 19 (AP) — The United States cautioned Germany and Italy to keep hands off British, French and Dutch possessions in the Western hemisphere today and then moved to array the twenty-one American republics in a great united front for military and economic defense.

Without waiting for disclosure of the terms which Adolf Hitler and Benito Musolini will demand of France as the price of peace, the State department made known that Secretary Hull had sent notes to Berlin and Rome on Monday declaring the United States was opposed to transfer of any possessions in this hemisphere from one non-American power to another.

Notes Sent to Europe

The notes were sent to the American embassies in Berlin and Rome for communication to the German and Italian governments soon after word reached Washington that the new French government had sought to negotiate an armistice which might involve the future of French territorial possessions.

The views stated in the notes, constituting a reaffirmation of the Monroe Doctrine, were the same as those set forth in a resolution which has been approved by both branches of Congress but is now pending in the Senate again for consideration of minor house amendments.

Sumner Welles, assistant secretary of state, disclosed that this government had proposed that all the American republics meet soon in extraordinary session in view of European war developments. Although he said the agenda had not been formulated, he added, that it probably would include a proposal, now virtually ready for President Roosevelt's study, for disposal of export surpluses in this hemisphere. This proposal was understood to embrace a plan for marketing Latin-American exports through a United States financed corporation, designed to bolster hemisphere economy against the challenge of the Nazi barter system.

The timing of the notes to Germany and Italy and the proposal of a Pan-American conference indicated that defense of the hemisphere also would have an important place in the discussions.

ARRIVES BY PLANE

Reports in Bordeaux Say President LeBrun and Other Leaders Have Gone

Masses of French Planes Are Africa-Bound; Rome and Berlin Say France Must Surrender

By The Associated Press

A fighting French government, finding Adolf Hitler's demands for a "pure and simple" subjugation to Nazi rule too onerous, may yet flee to Africa to battle with the British, it was reported in Boredaux last (Tuesday) night.

At the moment Nazi wheeled legions rushed to slice the country to ribbons and Nazi bombing planes fought the opening skirmishes of the "Battle of England."

Reports widely circulated in Bordeaux said President Albert Lebrun and other leaders had gone, or were about to go, to Algiers in North Africa and thus carry out the first step of former Premier Reynaud's threat to retreat fighting to Africa, and even to America, before submitting to Germany.

These reports, which were not confirmed from official sources, said nothing of Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, who succeeded Reynaud as premier last Sunday and who immediately sought peace terms.

Already masses of French planes were in flight to North Africa. Some of them were forced to alight at Spanish ports and islands before reaching their destination.

The Germans, taking French capitulation or rout as a foregone conclusion, pressed on England with little respite, and their planes bombed that country for the second successive night.

The bombs fell near a town on the northeast coast, and numerous alarms were sounded shortly before midnight, south of London, on the southeast coast and on the Northeast. Anti-aircraft guns roared and fighter planes went up.

Radio Stations Silent

While the German planes were bombing England, the Hamburg and Bremen radio stations went off the air for the third successive night, indicating Britain's bombers were on their way to return the Germans' visit with bombs for calling cards.

The British said yesterday that they had bombed numerous German cities Tuesday night, including Bremen, Hamburg, Essen and Hanover and had dropped 250 bombs in ten minutes on military objectives at Bremen.

On blitzkrieg schedule the German high command enumerated a new string of great French cities and fortresses fallen into its hands, Nancy, Rennes, Le Mans, Strasbourg, Luneville and Toul.

The Nazi iron cavalry was reported but twenty miles from Lyon in Southeastern France, the nation's third largest city.

There the Germans were but 200 miles from the Mediterranean and in position to flank the Alpine army out of it's positions and join hands with the Italians around Switzerland.

Crossings had been forced over the Loire, last natural line of defense for the peace-bidding French government and its shattered remnants of armies backed up in less than half of their territory against the Atlantic, the Mediterranean and the lofty Pyrenees border with Spain.

Advance Beyond Loire

The Nazis were forty miles beyond the Loire in one place.

They had moved 100 miles south after taking Cherbourg, and striking to cut off Brest and St. Nazaire, two remaining ports.

Drastic as German-Italian peace conditions may be, the French government gave indications it has no alternative but to surrender France.

Interior Minister Charles Pomaret repudiated General De Gaulle, recent cabinet member who urged continued resistance and French-British union in a speech in London Tuesday. De Gaulle was ordered home.

The French cabinet, meeting in an early session in Bordeaux appointed plenipotentiaries to learn

Senator Walsh Rebukes U. S. Navy For Releasing Boats to British

Profits for Shipbuilders also Are Stressed by Naval Chairman

WASHINGTON, June 19 (AP) — Senator Walsh (D-Mass), chairman of the Senate Naval committee, rebuked the navy on two matters of policy today, contending that it was prepared to "guarantee" a ten percent profit on $1,000,000,000 of pending ship-building contracts and that it had made a "grievious error" in releasing twenty boats to the British.

He told reporters that the profit disclosure, which he termed "sensational" in its implications, was made to a closed session of the committee by Rear Admiral S. M. Robinson, chief of the bureau of engineering.

"This means," Walsh said, "that if the law is not changed and the methods now contemplated are used, ten percent profit will be guaranteed to these shipbuilders on a non-competitive contract let by negotiation. The law never contemplated anything like that."

Under the Vinson-Trammel act, bill,

he said, profits of shipbuilders holding government contracts are limited to ten percent, but he added that this was a maximum and could not be considered a guarantee.

Walsh's criticism of the British transaction followed a Navy department announcement that it had made it possible for Great Britain to take delivery on twenty torpedo boats and submarine chasers being manufactured for the navy the Electric Boat company, Groton, Mass.

"If war should come in the next few weeks and an enemy submarine approaches our harbors," he said, "no one can estimate the consequences that may follow as a result of this disposal of these vessels."

Meantime, the Senate appropriations committee made public testimony that some of the nation's largest industrial concerns had hesitated to undertake large-scale plant expansion for mass production of defense equipment because of treasury interpretations of the tax laws.

This was disclosed after the committee had approved a $1,777,000,000 emergency defense appropriations

FRENCH PLAN RETREAT TO ALGIERS

Senate Approves "Excess Profits" Levy, 41 to 31

LaFollette Amendment Is Designed To Raise $500,000,000 Annually

Tax Would Reach Those Corporations Benefitting from Nation's New Defense Program

WASHINGTON, June 19. (AP)—The Senate passed the defense revenue bill tonight after adding an excess profits levy to raise between $400,000,000 and $500,000,000 annually and inserting a drastic war profits tax which would provide additional billions in the event of war.

Approval of the two changes in the measure, which had called for $1,007,000,000 of new taxes took administration lieutenants by surprise. They opposed the excess profits tax, which would be effective at once, but many voted for the proposal to impose heavy additional taxes in the event of war.

Senator Connally (D-Tex), sponsoring the latter amendment, estimated that it would raise $8,000,000,000 a year from individuals alone and possibly as much from corporations. It would become effective automatically upon a congressional declaration of war.

The vote on final passage of the bill was announced as 75 to 5.

The dissenting votes were cast by four Republicans — Austin (Vt.), Gurney (SD), Hale (Me), and Taft (Ohio)—and one Farmer-Laborite, Lundeen (Minn.).

Goes to Conference

The measure next will be sent to a Conference committee of senators and representatives to consider the tax increases voted by the Senate alone. Democratic leaders indicated that both the excess profits and war profits proposals would be thrown out in the conference.

They said that such legislation should be enacted only after full study by both the House Ways and Means and the Senate Finance committee. The conference group will meet tomorrow or Friday.

Connally's war profits levy was adopted, 51 to 28, as a substitute for a similar amendment offered by Senator Bone (D-Wash.) Connally said it had been worked out by treasury experts and would put the country on a "pay-as-you go" basis automatically at the outbreak of war.

The excess profits tax, which would go into effect along with the higher income and excise taxes provided by the bill to finance defense expenditures, was adopted by a surprise vote of 41 to 31.

The amendment was sponsored by Senator LaFollette (Prog-Wis), who told the Senate it would "be a sham and delusion" to enact revenue legislation which contained no levy on excess profits

La Follette said his proposal would reach those corporations benefiting from the new defense program. Chairman Harrison (D-Miss) of the finance committee and others urged that such legislation be delayed until Congress can consider a new tax bill — a step which Harrison predicted would be taken shortly. Harrison said he hoped excess profits taxes would be written law by Jan. 1.

Exemptions Are Granted

The La Follette amendment, imposing taxes similar to those in effect between 1917 and 1922, would grant corporations specific exemptions on profits and then would impose special excess profits levies. A corporation would have a flat exemption of $3,000 plus an additional exemption equal to eight percent of its invested capital.

A corporation with $100,000 capital thus would have a total exemption of $11,000.

Profits in excess of the exemptions but not in excess of an amount equal to twenty percent of invested capital would be taxed twenty percent. Profits in excess of the exemptions and exceeding twenty percent of invested capital would be taxed 40 percent.

Earlier the chamber stripped proposals for government economy from the tax bill. By a vote of 62 to 14, it reversed a decision of yesterday and eliminated a proposal authorizing the president to cut non-defense expenditures by ten percent.

Also rejected were proposals to instruct congressional appropriations committees to restudy non-defense spending bills with a view to reducing them by $500,000,000 and to require a flat four percent

First Conditions for Armistice Accepted by The French Government

General De Gaulle Publicly Rebuked for Speech Urging Continuance of Resistance

By The Associated Press

BORDEAUX, France, June 19—The French government accepted the first German-Italian condition for an armistice today and publicly repudiated a recent cabinet member for having urged from London a continuance of resistance against Germany.

The rebuke was addressed bluntly to General De Gaulle, the undersecretary for national defense in the Reynaud war cabinet which resigned Sunday.

It left open the door for early peace negotiations and it followed the appointment by "Old Marshale" Premier Henry Philippe Petain of agents to hear the extent of the national surrender demanded by the conquerors to give peace to this scarred, unhappy country.

General De Gaulle was taken to task specifically by Interior Minister Charles Pomaret, for having advocated in a London broadcast last night a French-British union, with the industrial help of the United States, "to crush our enemies."

Pomaret said De Gaulle had been ordered to return to France from London.

The French armies, still in the field in a last stand, reported German planes southward through Brittany in the direction of Nantes, at the mouth of the Loire river—occupation of which would cut off lower English channel ports like Brest, and St. Nazaire.

Bordeaux, Capital Of France, Bombed By German Planes

Important Buildings in City Appear To Be Main Targets

BORDEAUX, June 20 (Thursday) (AP-Via Radio)—An undetermined number of persons were killed and wounded this morning as low-flying German planes bombed Bordeaux, provisional capital of beleaguered France. Two of the bombs scored hits on refuge shelters.

Important buildings in the city, which the French government has declared an open city, appears to be the main targets.

Bordeaux was bombed four times a little after 1:30 a. m. (7:30 p. m. E.S.T. Wednesday.)

(Two Associated Press staffmen in Bordeaux, W. J. Humphreys of Salisbury, Md., and William McGaffin, a Nebraskan, told of the raid in broadcasts carried by NBC.)

Newspaper correspondents were forced to take refuge in a cellar during the raids.

They heard the German planes sweeping over the open city at low altitudes, bombing the streets and buildings jammed with refugees.

The thunder of exploding bombs came just as the townspeople, waiting for word of an armistice, had begun to hope they had found refuge and were safe.

Bordeaux has a normal population of approximately 250,000 but is jammed now with refugees bringing the number it shelters to perhaps five times that many.

There was no immediate indication where in the city the bombs fell.

American Republics Are Called to Parley; Senators Demand Probe of Sale of Sub-Chasers

WASHINGTON, June 19 (AP) — The United States cautioned Germany and Italy to keep hands off British, French and Dutch possessions in the Western hemisphere today and then moved to array the twenty-one American republics in a great united front for military and economic defense.

Without waiting for disclosure of the terms which Adolf Hitler and Benito Musolini will demand of France as the price of peace, the State department made known that Secretary Hull had sent notes to Berlin and Rome on Monday declaring the United States was opposed to transfer of any possessions in this hemisphere from one non-American power to another.

Notes Sent to Europe

The notes were sent to the American embassies in Berlin and Rome for communication to the German and Italian governments soon after word reached Washington that the new French government had sought to negotiate an armistice which might involve the future of French territorial possessions.

The views stated in the notes, constituting a reaffirmation of the Monroe Doctrine, were the same as those set forth in a resolution which has been approved by both branches of Congress but is now pending in the Senate again for consideration of minor house amendments.

Sumner Welles, assistant secretary of state, disclosed that this government had proposed that all the American republics meet soon in extraordinary session in view of European war developments. Although he said the agenda had not been formulated, he added, that it probably would include a proposal, now virtually ready for President Roosevelt's study, for disposal of export surpluses in this hemisphere. This proposal was understood to embrace a plan for marketing Latin-American exports through a United States financed corporation, designed to bolster hemisphere economy against the challenge of the Nazi barter system.

The timing of the notes to Germany and Italy and the proposal of a Pan-American conference indicated that defense of the hemisphere also would have an important place in the discussions.

ARRIVES BY PLANE

Joan Desy, one year old, arrives at New York by trans-Atlantic plane from Lisbon, Portugal. Her mother, Mme. Corinne Desy, wife of the Belgian Minister to Canada, fled with her from Brussels while that city was being bombed by Germans.

Reports in Bordeaux Say President LeBrun and Other Leaders Have Gone

Masses of French Planes Are Africa-Bound; Rome and Berlin Say France Must Surrender

By The Associated Press

A fighting French government, finding Adolf Hitler's demands for a "pure and simple" subjugation to Nazi rule too onerous, may yet flee to Africa to battle with the British, it was reported in Boredaux last (Tuesday) night.

At the moment Nazi wheeled legions rushed to slice the country to ribbons and Nazi bombing planes fought the opening skirmishes of the "Battle of England."

Reports widely circulated in Bordeaux said President Albert Lebrun and other leaders had gone, or were about to go, to Algiers in North Africa and thus carry out the first step of former Premier Reynaud's threat to retreat fighting to Africa, and even to America, before submitting to Germany.

These reports, which were not confirmed from official sources, said nothing of Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, who succeeded Reynaud as premier last Sunday and who immediately sought peace terms.

Already masses of French planes were in flight to North Africa. Some of them were forced to alight at Spanish ports and islands before reaching their destination.

The Germans, taking French capitulation or rout as a foregone conclusion, pressed on England with little respite, and their planes bombed that country for the second successive night.

The bombs fell near a town on the northeast coast, and numerous alarms were sounded shortly before midnight, south of London, on the southeast coast and on the Northeast. Anti-aircraft guns roared and fighter planes went up.

Radio Stations Silent

While the German planes were bombing England, the Hamburg and Bremen radio stations went off the air for the third successive night, indicating Britain's bombers were on their way to return the Germans' visit with bombs for calling cards.

The British said yesterday that they had bombed numerous German cities Tuesday night, including Bremen, Hamburg, Essen and Hanover and had dropped 250 bombs in ten minutes on military objectives at Bremen.

On blitzkrieg schedule the German high command enumerated a new string of great French cities and fortresses fallen into its hands—the great seaport of Cherbourg, Nancy, Rennes, Le Mans, Strasbourg, Luneville and Toul.

The Nazi iron cavalry was reported but twenty miles from Lyon in Southeastern France, the nation's third largest city.

There the Germans were but 200 miles from the Mediterranean and in position to flank the Alpine army out of its positions and join hands with the Italians around Switzerland.

Crossings had been forced over the Loire, last natural line of defense for the peace-bidding French government and its shattered remnants of armies backed up in less than half of their territory against the Atlantic, the Mediterranean and the lofty Pyrenees border with Spain.

Advance Beyond Loire

The Nazis were forty miles beyond the Loire in one place.

They had moved 100 miles south after taking Cherbourg, and striking to cut off Brest and St. Nazaire, two remaining ports.

Drastic as German-Italian peace conditions may be, the French government gave indications it has no alternative but to surrender France.

Interior Minister Charles Pomaret repudiated General De Gaulle, recent cabinet member who urged continued resistance and French-British union in a speech in London Tuesday. De Gaulle was ordered home.

Lewis Statement On FDR Proposal Brings Applause

Terms Compulsory National Service "Fantastic Suggestion"

G.O.P. Resolutions Group Hear Speakers of Labor and Capital

By RICHARD L. TURNER

PHILADELPHIA, June 19. (AP)—A blunt statement from John L. Lewis that President Roosevelt's proposal for compulsory national service was a "fantastic suggestion from a mind in full intellectual retreat" brought a burst of applause today from the Republican Resolutions committee.

The C.I.O. leader was one of a continuous stream of speakers before the policy-forming committee meeting in the increasing hub-bub of the throng already arriving for the national convention opening next Monday.

Lewis, his rival, William Green, American Federation of Labor president; a spokesman for the National Association of Manufacturers, and other speakers outlined to the committee what they believe should be

Senator Walsh Rebukes U. S. Navy For Releasing Boats to British

Profits for Shipbuilders also Are Stressed by Naval Chairman

WASHINGTON, June 19. (AP) — Senator Walsh (D-Mass), chairman of the Senate Naval committee, rebuked the navy on two matters of policy today, contending that it was prepared to "guarantee" a ten percent profit on $1,000,000,000 of pending ship-building contracts and that it had made a "grievious error" in releasing twenty boats to the British.

He told reporters that the profit disclosure, which he termed "sensational" in its implications, was made to a closed session of the committee by Rear Admiral S. M. Robinson, chief of the bureau of engineering.

"This means," Walsh said, "that if the law is not changed and the methods now contemplated are used, ten percent profit will be guaranteed to these shipbuilders on a non-competitive contract let by negotiation. The law never contemplated anything like that."

Under the Vinson-Trammel act, he said, profits of shipbuilders holding government contracts are limited to ten percent, but he added that this was a maximum and could not be considered a guarantee.

Walsh's criticism of the British transaction followed a Navy department announcement that it had made it possible for Great Britain to take delivery on twenty torpedo boats and submarine chasers being manufactured for the navy the Electric Boat company, Groton, Mass.

"If war should come in the next few weeks and an enemy submarine approaches our harbors," he said, "no one can estimate the consequences that may follow as a result of this disposal of these vessels."

Meantime, the Senate appropriations committee made public testimony that some of the nation's largest industrial concerns had hesitated to undertake large-scale plant expansion for mass production of defense equipment because of treasury interpretations of the tax laws.

This was disclosed after the committee had approved a $1,777,000,000 emergency defense appropriations bill.

Mussolini and Hitler To Keep Troops in France

Italian Sources Hint They Will Use Army of Occupation

By The Associated Press

ROME, June 19—A warning by the United States that it would not stand for annexation by Germany or Italy of British or French territory in the American hemisphere was disclosed today while Fascists discussed the axis peace terms for France.

Italian sources predicted the Germans would be pointing toward preventing the republic from giving any help to Britain.

They indicated that Germany, and perhaps Italy too, would maintain an army of occupation in France after an armistice based on severe terms.

Aside from this, there was no unanimity here in predictions as to just what Benito Mussolini and Adolf Hitler had demanded of the beaten French, other than the long-held supposition that France would be required to give up some of its territory, both on the continent and in its colonies. Italy already is claiming Savoy with Nice, Corsica, Tunisia and Jibouti.

Conditions Justly Severe

The newspaper Tribuna said simply "there is no doubt that the conditions will be justly severe," but the authoritative Giornale D'Italia declared they would be more generous than those imposed upon Germany at Versailles.

Il Popolo Di Roma reported economic terms for the armistice under which France would be compelled to turn over its gold, raw materials, factories and the like for use in the campaign to smash Britain, but persons in government circles said these declarations were without authority.

The Tribuna said that German troops would occupy all strategic points of major importance of enemy territory.

It was still widely believed in foreign circles here that France might be required to surrender its navy to Germany for use against England.

Virginio Gayda, editor of the Giornale D'Italia and a frequent spokesman for Premier Mussolini, cast aside what he termed the "sentimental appeals" of American and Swiss newspapers for consideration for France.

No Reason for Pity

Italy, he said, could see "no reason for pity for France in the present case."

Then, referring to the challenge of Winston Churchill that Britain would fight on with American material aid, he declared that this meant Italy would carry out the war against "Anglo-Saxon forces alone."

The warning of the United States that it would not tolerate annexation of France and British possessions in the American hemisphere was understood to have been delivered to Italian authorities yesterday by Ambassador William Phillips.

The American government thus invoked the Monroe Doctrine and quoted passages from that 117-year old document of policy.

French colonies in the western hemisphere are French Guiana, Martinique and Guadeloupe in the West Indies, and St. Pierre and Miquelon off Newfoundland.

the terms which Hitler and Premier Mussolini agreed upon at their second Munich Tuesday. Spanish press dispatches said Henry Berenger, former ambassador to the United States, was one of the delegates.

The place and the time of the meeting of emissaries was not known. Unofficial Madrid reports said the conference might be in the residence of General Francisco Franco, but authoritative quarters in Berlin said there would be no discussions on neutral territory.

France Must Surrender

Both Rome and Berlin made it plain France cannot negotiate—she must surrender.

Rome press accounts of the Munich meeting said the axis powers would demand military occupation of France, her gold, her industrial and economic organization turned into war production against England. Diplomatic quarters in Spain said the French fleet must be turned over.

Berlin quarters said the Germans would be harsh—intended to make France helpless until the fight with England is steeled.

But there were indications that France intends to fight on from her empire, even if she must remain under bondage on the continent.

A heavy movement of French military planes in flight from the homeland to Africa was reported from Spanish ports and islands. Seven planes were forced down, and their crews said they had set out for Algeria.

Marcel Peyrounton, French resident general of Tunis, said "this empire stands in an attitude of resistance, full of courage and gartitude."

Fleet Still With British

Presumably part of the French fleet still was with the British in the Eastern Mediterranean near Alexandria.

The French radio declared French forces had cleared out Italian submarines in the western Mediterranean and now controlled communications in that area—the line of retreat to North Africa.

Powerful Central Control Is Urged For Preparedness

General Charles G. Dawes Says U. S. Must Proceed with Efficiency

CHICAGO, June 19 (AP) — Gen. Charles G. Dawes tonight urged the government to place the preparedness program "under a powerful central control" and suggested that the president assign an outstanding industrial expert to the task of coordinating the work of all departments and agencies involved.

Advocating the creation of the key job of "chief coordinator," Dawes, former vice-president and world war chief of supply procurement for the American expeditionary force, asserted:

"At this time, when our government is preparing to be able to meet totalitarian attack, it must proceed with totalitarian speed and efficiency under a powerful central control. x x x

"If the government does not set up immediately an effective system of internal coordination as it enters upon an additional and gigantic effort for war preparedness, it will fail, wasting not only enormous resources but x x x an incalculable amount of time. x x x

Wake up, Washington! National war preparedness is primarily a military as well as a business effort and will fail unless worked out under guiding military principles as well as correct business principles."

the men—went far afield.

May Rely on Soviet

Parliament was told the government is studying purchase of tanks, guns, airplanes, and other war weapons from Soviet Russia, Germany's "paper partner."

Already, Britain has given America a virtual blank check for munitions, even of world war vintage.

Britain counted twelve dead, thirty wounded from the Nazi bombs and heard with enthusiasm that the far-ranging R. A. F. "heavily attacked" objectives of Bremen, Hamburg, Frankfort, Essen, Castrop, Sterkrade and Hanover.

At Bremen alone, an air ministry communique said, 250 bombs were dropped within ten minutes.

The raids were the second at some of the German towns within forty-eight hours.

Britons said their pre-dawn taste of terror from the air left them the more determined to fight to the last drop of British blood—and victory.

Shoot Down Seven Bombers

Seven of an uncounted number of German bombers were shot down by British fighter planes and anti-aircraft guns which blazed away at the dark shapes spotted by searchlight beams.

Four hours thundering with explosions and the rattle of anti-aircraft fire passed from the first alarm until the all-clear signal.

Many Britons scurried to air raid shelters. Some stayed in their homes. Some watched the skies and cheered when enemy bombers plummeted in flames.

The air ministry reported several airdromes were attacked "without success" by the raiders and an oilwharf fire was started in the Thames estuary which was extinguished quickly. The rest of the damage was to homes.

reduction in non-defense appropriations.

Creates New Tax Payers

Aside from the newly-inserted La Follette amendment, the tax measure would create 2,000,000 new income taxpayers by reducing existing exemptions; raise all corporation taxes by one percent; increase individual income taxes by a flat ten percent of the ordinary tax; increase surtaxes between $6,000 and $100,000 and raise numerous so-called "nuisance taxes," such as those on gasoline, automobiles and tires.

John L. Lewis Says Depression Was Laid on Hoover's Doorstep

Asserts Roosevelt Has Made It Chronic Fact in American Life

PHILADELPHIA, June 19. (AP)—John L. Lewis, CIO leader, said here that Herbert Hoover had "nothing whatever to do with" the depression and that President Roosevelt had made it "a chronic fact in American life."

John L. Lewis

In an address prepared for the 31st annual conference of the annual Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Lewis declared that the Roosevelt administration "even now has no suggestion to offer for national unemployment, except that possible involvement in a European war may relieve them from the responsibilities of unsolved domestic problems."

"Mr. Roosevelt," Lewis asserted, "made depression and unemployment a chronic fact in American life. It was a slogan of the 1932 presidential election that Herbert Hoover was responsible for that the workers of the United States realize that he had nothing whatever to do with it. It was laid on his doorstep when he came to the White House.

"It is only self-seeking politicians that blame Mr. Hoover. The policies he pursued, in cooperation with other nations, had a powerful effect in the start at recovery in 1932. The New Deal did not fulfill their promises or complete their undertakings. It was their policies and their weaknesses which have kept this country in depression for seven more years."

HERE' WHAT THE AXIS DICTATORS CONSIDERED

Meeting at Munich to decide their terms for peace with France, Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini had an empire second only to Britain's to divide, as illustrated on the map at top. Hitler has always declared Alsace-Lorraine and a large share of the African colonies rightly belong to Germany. Mussolini, in addition to cities along the French Riviera, also wants African colonies. Bottom, diagram shows how powerful is the French Navy with its 819,000 tons. This does not take into account the number of auxiliary warships.

Willkie's Stock Climbs Sharply In Maryland

Majority of Convention Delegation Approve of Indianan

BALTIMORE, June 19. (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie's stock as a possible Republican presidential nominee climbed sharply in Maryland today, with reports a majority of the state's convention delegation had expressed their "personal" approval of the Indianian.

At the same time, the Willkie headquarters here issued a statement, aimed at the delegation, warning that the voters would not tolerate "deals" in the selection of the G.O.P. nominee.

One high-ranking party leader, hitherto firmly aligned with the supporters of Senator Robert A. Taft, offered a straw-in-the-wind opinion today that Willkie would get Maryland's sixteen votes.

He said an unofficial canvass of the delegation, which must vote as a unit, showed nine of the sixteen members personally favorable to Willkie and ready to switch to his bandwagon if and when Thomas E. Dewey fails to win the nomination on the first ballot.

The delegation is pledged to Dewey until he is nominated or put out of the running.

The spokesman, who asked that his name not be used, said a pre-convention survey from Maryland's viewpoint indicated Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) was out of the running, that Dewey was on the way out "because of the war and his youth," that Senator Taft (R-O) would split the Dewey vote, and that Willkie would come in ahead on a growing landslide.

"The whole thing depends on how much strength the practical politicians will have at the convention," he predicted.

Two weeks ago, a similar unofficial survey of the delegation by the same spokesman gave Willkie only four sure votes on the convention delegation.

CIO Hosiery Workers Endorse Roosevelt

MILWAUKEE, June 19 (AP)—The American Federation of Hosiery Workers (CIO) unanimously endorsed President Roosevelt for a third term today, after CIO vice presidents Emil Rieve and Van A. Bittner urged the move in short addresses before the convention.

"Ninety-five per cent of the workers in America, no matter which union they belong to are standing behind President Roosevelt," Bittner declared.

Rieve told the convention that "it is doubly imperative that the next president of the United States should be Franklin D. Roosevelt."

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

The great struggle for the "Tight Little Isle" of Britain has started in deadly earnest even before France's fate has been revealed to her by her German-Italian conquerors.

Formal notice of that was served on East coast England in a rain of German bombs that fell even before echoes of Prime Minister Winston Churchill's defiance of Germany's "air weapon" had died away.

It may mean that Germany has decided on a siege of England by air and U-boat to starve her into submission. It could foreshadow ruthless and unrestricted war in the air over England in a terroristic campaign to break the fighting heart of the English people, or it might be the first move in a German effort to surge across the narrow English channel and invade the island.

Whatever its place in the German scheme, however, that intensified raid on Britain is evidence conclusive that Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini are well aware that their victory over France is incomplete and tentative until England has been mastered.

Home Defense Respected

There are several factors about the raid which are worth noting. For one thing, it was staged in the dark hours, just before dawn. That implies that Germany's war captains have a healthy respect for Britain's home defense.

It is recalled that in the dramatic rescue of more than 300,000 allied trops from the closing German trap at Dunkerque, Britain's home defense air force saw action. British spokesmen, including Churchill, have claimed that it scored heavily, at a ration of four to one, against German flyers seeking to destroy the escaping armies massed on the beach at the French port.

The first German air assault in the "Battle of Britain" was in direct contrast to the situation during the fighting in Norway, in the low countries and in France. In those cases German air mastery was so complete that the Nazis ruled the skies in the daytime.

Retains Outmatched Fleet

Through it all, Britain necessarily retained at home an important part of her numerically outmatched air fleet. It has been joined now by Britain air forces heretofore devoted to protecting Allied troops in France.

There is another circumstance to be noted. London acknowledges that the German raids on England's East coast shipping and industrial centers were directed at military objectives. They did not constitute an air blitzkrieg against British public morale.

That tends to support the widely held opinion that it is an air-and U-boat siege to destroy England's sea life lines and contacts with her far-flung empire that Germany is planning, not invasion or ruthless air war. The risks of invasion against an England armed as never before in her history still seem too great.

included in the Republican platform.

AFL Would Assist Allies

The committee, endeavoring to write a plank expressing the party's viewpoint on foreign relations, was informed by Green that the AF of L favors "every ounce of assistance and supplies" to European democracies "short of our entry into the war."

A statement from the Manufacturers' Association declared:

"Currently disturbed labor relations and uncertainty as to future labor relations are a major obstacle in the national preparedness program; their existence tends to prevent capital from working and providing employment."

Mr. Roosevelt's compulsory service idea was the subject of much discussion, mostly unfavorable, throughout the day. There was talk of writing a plank on the subject.

Alf M. Landon, the Republican presidential standard bearer in 1936, declared:

"This is an example of the half-cocked way the president has been doing things lately x x x it seems he has to have an idea a day to keep Hitler away."

The former Kansas governor is chairman of a sub-committee named to write a foreign affairs plank.

After Lewis had concluded his speech to the committee, Landon asked for his opinion of Mr. Roosevelt's proposal. When Lewis had made his reply, Landon inquired whether it did not involve "organization of the youth of this country into labor battalions."

"That's my opinion of it," Lewis answered.

Berates Both Parties

For the rest, the C.I.O. leader impartially breated both the Republican and Democratic parties for their past records on labor and unemployment.

He warned that if neither party "measures up," it was "not unreasonable to expect that both would lose the confidence of the people."

PHILADELPHIA, June 19. (AP) Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, said tonight President Roosevelt's proposal for compulsory national service is "insanity and nothing less."

Making an unscheduled appearance before the Platform committee of the Republican National Convention, McCormick reviewed the military record of the World war and urged:

With this record before you I hope you will not heed the hysterical appeal for immediate conscription. x x x It would be a tragic blunder to call away from their occupations millions of civilians whom we cannot clothe for months or arm for years."

Writer Says Democracy In Europe Is Doomed

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., June 19 (AP) — Democracy in Europe is doomed, even if England is able to defeat Germany in a long war, the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia was told tonight.

R. H. Markham, foreign correspondent and special writer for the Christian Science Monitor, said in a prepared address that Great Britain and France have been chief inspirers of Democracy in Europe and British sailors and French soldiers its only guarantors.

"It sems quite certain that one of two things will now happen," he said. "First, Hitler may triumph . . . In that case, Democracy will be as a torpedoed ship, physically annihilated. . . .

"Perhaps England will hold the fort. Maybe, Germany will partially exhaust herself in crushing France and attacking England. In that case, the war might drag on, as during Napoleon's era. Under such circumstances, England will fight with a fanatical fury and the British people in their desire for elemental self-preservation will forego all Democratic forms. They will devote all their energies to fighting and making implements of war. So, in that case, also, Democracy will be dead in Europe."

Russia Moves Troops To German Border

BUCHAREST, June 20 (Thursday) (AP) — Government circles received reports today that a large number of Russian troops are being transferred from the Bessarabian frontier with Rumania to the German-Russian border.

These circles said more Russian troops were being concentrated on the frontier in Russian Poland opposite the frontier with German-protected Slovakia.

German motorized columns are being sent to East Prussia, opposite the Baltic states where Russia recently sent huge forces in a military occupation, it was reported.

(Unconfirmed reports of German troop movements in East Prussia also have been circulated in the Baltic states.)

Ford To Contract With Government

Knudsen Says Sixty Per Cent of Warplane Engines Are for Allies

WASHINGTON, June 19 (AP)—An apparent hitch developed today in the plan to have the Ford Motor company turn out Rolls Royce engines to drive American and Allied warplanes.

After it had been stated here and in London that the company would produce 6,000 engines for Britain and 3,000 for the United States, Henry Ford declared at Detroit that he would contract solely with the United States government and for "defensive purposes only."

Hearing of this, William S. Knudsen of the National Defense commission made the following statement:

"In negotiations with the Ford Motor company it was made plain that sixty percent of the order for Rolls Royce engines was for the Allies and the balance for the United States government.

"I was assured by Mr. Edsel Ford, president, that this arrangement was satisfactory to the Ford Motor company. No contracts have been signed as yet. They are still in negotiation."

No Ground for Fear Liberty Is Lost in U. S., Declares Hoover

NEW YORK, June 19, (AP). Former President Herbert Hoover, writing in the July issue of "The American Mercury", declares that "predictator periods" in Europe are analogous to "some recent years and events in America."

Under the title, "it needn't happen here", Hoover discussed reasons for the rise of dictatorships in Europe, based his observations during a continental tour two years ago, and compared them with conditions in this country.

Nevertheless, he insisted, "There is no ground for defeatist fear that Liberty is lost in America."

Hoover said he found in Europe that "the universal pattern" of nations preceding totalitarian rule "was the general despair of the people that democracy could solve their economic and governmental problems."

The result, he added, was that "the dictatorship was established by powers conferred upon the man on horseback by parliamentary leaders or confirmed by electoral action. x x x Liberty committed suicide."

Gang Quarrels over Loot Victim Tells Police

ELKTON, Md., June 19 (AP) — Found beside a road in a dazed condition, a young man, who said he was Dannie Delmont, of Tampa, Fla., today told police he was the victim of a gang quarrel over booty taken in a series of robberies.

Sheriff David said Randolph told him he had been riding with two men from Chicago and was knocked unconscious by one of his companions after a quarrel over loot.

W. Doudon Reynolds, of the Elkton police force, found the man, badly cut and bruised. The officer said he was armed with a revolver. The victim told officers he either fell or was thrown from the car.

A F.B.I. agent questioned the man at the local hospital where he received treatment. Later he was taken to the Cecil county jail.

Sheriff Randolph said the man told him his companions were enroute "to Syracuse to pull another job" when they reached here.

Germans Encourage Marriage with Loan To All Newly-Weds

Deduct $100 for Each Child, Mrs. Hampton Tells Rural Women

COLLEGE PARK, Md., June 19 (AP) — To encourage marriage and large families, Nazi Germany loans newly-weds $400, Mrs. Wade Hampton, Washington lecturer and educator, told rural women today.

For each child born, $100 is deducted from the amount owed, Mrs. Hampton declared in speaking on "the meaning of the German revolution as the folk revealed to me".

Women taking the annual short course also heard addresses this morning by Albert Warner, Washington news commentator; Lyle O'Rourke, national director of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, and Miss Earlene White, honorary president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Womens' clubs.

O'Rourke said too many college youths know about Communism, Nazism and Fascism and "not enough about Americanism." America has a far greater challenge from within than from without, he asserted.

Dr. John C. Krantz, professor at the University Medical school, and Dr. Harold Benjamin, dean of education at the university, spoke at the afternoon session.

Tomorrow is visitors' day at the "homemakers' " college, with the families and relatives of the students coming here from all parts of the state.

At night a music fiesta of nations will be staged by county groups in front of the library building. Approximately 250 women, dressed in costumes of various nations, will sing folk songs and dance.

The program includes a bag-pipe solo and songs by a native Swiss yodeler.

Following the music fiesta, souvenirs from the counties will be sold. A soft-drink bar will be set up.

The principal speaker tomorrow afternoon will be Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen Rohde, former congresswoman from Florida and former United States minister to Denmark.

Spain To Claim Share Of War Spoils

Madrid, June 19 (AP) — Spain claimed tonight a share in any division of the spoils of war from France.

Responsible quarters said flatly that Spain's part in peace negotiations was "not just that of go-between" but the role of a nation which expected a voice in any territorial realignments.

Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini already have pledged Spain would have such a voice, it was said.

The road to empire already laid out by Spain's fascist government leads first to the south. Spokesmen have said Spain's "vital interests" in the Mediterranean require that she be given control of the African coast across from the Ibernian peninsula.

The press has said, too, that Spain should have from Britain control of Gibraltar, and should take over the little principality of Andorra in the Pyrenees on the French - Spanish frontier.

Meanwhile, through those mountains, a steady stream of refugees snails into Spain from France. Among these have been the former Empress Zita of Austria and her son, the Archduke Otto, pretender to the non-existent Austrian throne, and the three children of King Leopold III of Belgium. Many were headed for Portugal.

Myron Taylor Reported Seriously Ill

ROME, June 19 (AP) — Attendants described the condition of Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's representative to the Vatican, as serious tonight, but not alarming.

Hiss illness, laid partly to overwork, has kept Taylor at his villa in Florence, confined to bed most of the time.

Japan Is Urged To Take Over Indo-China

May Occupy 'Protectively' in Anticipation of Collapse of France

By The Associated Press

TOKYO, June 20 (Thursday) — Powerful political factions urged the Japanese government today to turn to Southeastern Asia and even occupy "protectively" the rich French possession of Indo-China in anticipation of collapse of the French empire.

Already the government, timing its action to coincide with discussion of the French armistice terms, was reported reliably to have dropped a reminder in Berlin and Rome of its "concern" over Indo-China.

This reminder, it was understood, was accompanied by recollection of the friendly relations between the three powers.

A reliable source disclosed, moreover, that Germany has reiterated to Japan that she will not ask for the return of Japan's mandated islands, stretching many miles east of the Philippines, above the equator.

These islands, the Marshalls, Carolines and Mariannes, were mandated to Japan under the treaty of Versailles.

It is not known whether Japan is asking the axis powers for a continuance of the status quo in the 281,000 square miles of Indo-China, or desires a "blank check" from Germany and Italy, to use as she will. Japan is linked to the axis powers by an anti-Communist pact.

When Japan asked Germany about the Dutch East Indies, Germany said she was "uninterested" in the problem, and some people interpreted that as an invitation to Japan to take any action she desired.

At any rate, the Tohokai, influential political party, urged the government to occupy Indo-China first, because it is a major channel of munitions supply for the Chinese central government, Japan's Asiatic enemy, and second because the collapse of the French government allegedly casts Indo-China loose without control.

(British authorities in Hongkong, crown colony, however, warily stopped clearances of all ships intended for French Indo-China until the situation is cleared up).

Destroy Trojan Horse, Urges Uruguay

MONTEVIDEO, June 19. (AP)—Little Uruguay called today upon her two million people to destroy the Trojan horse.

The government summoned all men and women to voluntary enlistment for military training or for Women's Auxiliary services.

Officials acted to sharply limit the influx of so-called "tourists."

The man-on-the-street took heart from the approaching visit of the United States Cruiser Quincy due tomorrow on a good neighbor tour.

Uruguay is the Achilles heel of South America. A parliamentary commission just has issued a thirty-three-point indictment of Nazi infiltration. The commission said it disclosed a Nazi plan for military occupation of the nation.

Disclosures from the report said evidence had been found of a scheme to make over Uruguay's national life and create a "little Germany" in South America.

The German legation in Montevideo was said to have directed Nazi propaganda. Twelve German leaders were detained. The army was ordered to stand ready, although spokesmen said the report seemed to show no immediate threat to national safety.

Night Flights

One of the most recent, and most difficult, phases of training carrier pigeons for war service is teaching the birds to fly at night. Like most birds, a homing pigeon goes to sleep at night. At present, some Army birds can successfully negotiate up to 50 miles a night, which is way below their daytime cruising range. —From the American Wildlife Institute.

The warning of the United States that it would not tolerate annexation of France and British possessions in the American hemisphere was understood to have been delivered to Italian authorities yesterday by Ambassador William Phillips.

The American government thus invoked the Monroe Doctrine and quoted passages from that 117-year old document of policy.

French colonies in the western hemisphere are French Guiana, Martinique and Guadeloupe in the West Indies, and St. Pierre and Miquelon off Newfoundland.

the terms which Hitler and Premier Mussolini agreed upon at their second Munich Tuesday. Spanish press dispatches said Henry Berenger, former ambassador to the United States, was one of the delegates.

The place and the time of the meeting of emissaries was not known. Unofficial Madrid reports said the conference might be in the residence of General Francisco Franco, but authoritative quarters in Berlin said there would be no discussions on neutral territory.

France Must Surrender

Both Rome and Berlin made it plain France cannot negotiate—she must surrender.

Rome press accounts of the Munich meeting said the axis powers would demand military occupation of France, her gold, her industrial and economic organization turned into war production against England. Diplomatic quarters in Spain said the French fleet must be turned over.

Berlin quarters said the Germans would be harsh—intended to make France helpless until the fight with England is steeled.

But there were indications that France intends to fight on from her empire, even if she must remain under bondage on the continent.

A heavy movement of French military planes in flight from the homeland to Africa was reported from Spanish ports and islands. Seven planes were forced down, and their crews said they had set out for Algeria.

Marcel Peyrounton, French resident general of Tunis(said "this empire stands in an attitude of resistance, full of courage and gartitude."

Fleet Still With British

Presumably part of the French fleet still was with the British in the Eastern Mediterranean near Alexandria.

The French radio declared French forces had cleared out Italian submarines in the western Mediterranean and now controlled communications in that area—the line of retreat to North Africa.

Powerful Central Control Is Urged For Preparedness

General Charles G. Dawes Says U. S. Must Proceed with Efficiency

CHICAGO, June 19 (AP) — Gen. Charles G. Dawes tonight urged the government to place the preparedness program "under a powerful central control" and suggested that the president assign an outstanding industrial expert to the task of coordinating the work of all departments and agencies involved.

Advocating the creation of the key job of "chief coordinator," Dawes, former vice-president and world war chief of supply procurement for the American expeditionary force, asserted:

"At this time, when our government is preparing to be able to meet totalitarian attack, it must proceed with totalitarian speed and efficiency under a powerful central control. x x x

"If the government does not set up immediately an effective system of internal coordination as it enters upon an additional and gigantic effort for war preparedness, it will fail, wasting not only enormous resources but x x x an incalculable amount of time. x x x

Wake up, Washington! National war preparedness is primarily a military as well as a business effort and will fail unless worked out under guiding military principles as well as correct business principles."

Britain Seeks

the men—went far afield.

May Rely on Soviet

Parliament was told the government is studying purchase of tanks, guns, airplanes, and other war weapons from Soviet Russia, Germany's "paper partner."

Already, Britain has given America a virtual blank check for munitions, even of world war vintage.

Britain counted twelve dead, thirty wounded from the Nazi bombs and heard with enthusiasm that the far-ranging R. A. F. "heavily attacked" objectives of Bremen, Hamburg, Frankfort, Essen, Castrop, Sterkrade and Hanover.

At Bremen alone, an air ministry communique said, 250 bombs were dropped within ten minutes.

The raids were the second at some of the German towns within forty-eight hours.

Britons said their pre-dawn taste of terror from the air left them the more determined to fight to the last drop of British blood—and victory.

Shoot Down Seven Bombers

Seven of an uncounted number of German bombers were shot down by British fighter planes and anti-aircraft guns which blazed away at the dark shapes spotted by searchlight beams.

Four hours thundering with explosions and the rattle of anti-aircraft fire passed from the first alarm until the all-clear signal.

Many Britons scurried to air raid shelters. Some stayed in their homes. Some watched the skies and cheered when enemy bombers plummeted in flames.

The air ministry reported several airdromes were attacked "without success" by the raiders and an oilwharf fire was started in the Thames estuary which was extinguished quickly. The rest of the damage was to homes.

reduction in non-defense appropriations.

Creates New Tax Payers

Aside from the newly-inserted La Follette amendment, the tax measure would create 2,000,000 new income taxpayers by reducing existing exemptions; raise all corporation taxes by one percent; increase individual income taxes by a flat ten percent of the ordinary tax; increase surtaxes between $6,000 and $100,000 and raise numerous so-called "nuisance taxes," such as those on gasoline, automobiles and tires.

John L. Lewis Says Depression Was Laid on Hoover's Doorstep

Asserts Roosevelt Has Made It Chronic Fact in American Life

PHILADELPHIA, June 19. (AP)—John L. Lewis, CIO leader, said here that Herbert Hoover had "nothing whatever to do with" the depression and that President Roosevelt had made it "a chronic fact in American life."

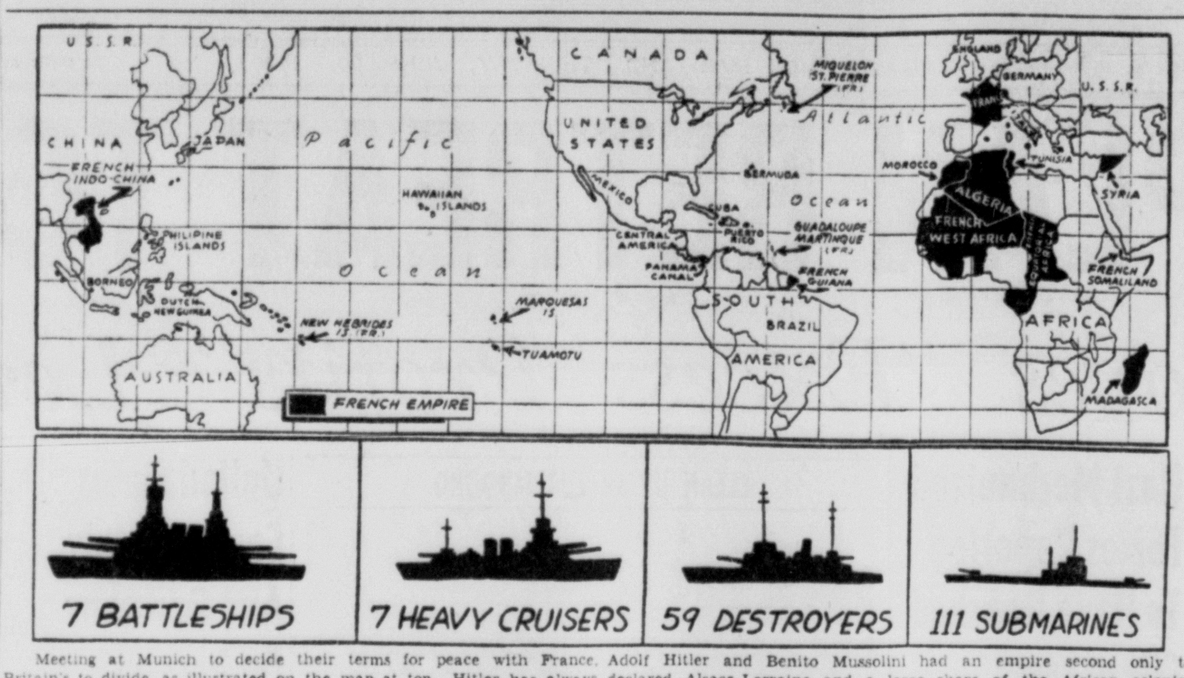

John L. Lewis

In an address prepared for the 31st annual conference of the annual Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Lewis declared that the Roosevelt administration "even now has no suggestion to offer for national unemployment, except that possible involvement in a European war may relieve them from the responsibilities of unsolved domestic problems."

"Mr. Roosevelt," Lewis asserted, "made depression and unemployment a chronic fact in American life. It was a slogan of the 1932 presidential election that Herbert Hoover was responsible for that the workers of the United States realize that he had nothing whatever to do with it. It was laid on his doorstep when he came to the White House.

"It is only self-seeking politicians that blame Mr. Hoover. The policies he pursued, in cooperation with other nations, had a powerful effect in the start at recovery in 1932. The New Deal did not fulfill their promises or complete their undertakings. It was their policies and their weaknesses which have kept this country in depression for seven more years."

HERE' WHAT THE AXIS DICTATORS CONSIDERED

Meeting at Munich to decide their terms for peace with France, Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini had an empire second only to Britain's to divide, as illustrated on the map at top. Hitler has always declared Alsace-Lorraine and a large share of the African colonies rightly belong to Germany. Mussolini, in addition to cities along the French Riviera, also wants African colonies. Bottom, diagram shows how powerful is the French Navy with its 819,000 tons. This does not take into account the number of auxiliary warships.

Willkie's Stock Climbs Sharply In Maryland

Majority of Convention Delegation Approve of Indianan

BALTIMORE, June 19. (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie's stock as a possible Republican presidential nominee climbed sharply in Maryland today, with reports a majority of the state's convention delegation had expressed their "personal" approval of the Indianian.

At the same time, the Willkie headquarters here issued a statement, aimed at the delegation, warning that the voters would not tolerate "deals" in the selection of the G.O.P. nominee.

One high-ranking party leader, hitherto firmly aligned with the supporters of Senator Robert A. Taft, offered a straw-in-the-wind opinion today that Willkie would get Maryland's sixteen votes.

He said an unofficial canvass of the delegation, which must vote as a unit, showed nine of the sixteen members personally favorable to Willkie and ready to switch to his bandwagon if and when Thomas E. Dewey fails to win the nomination on the first ballot.

The delegation is pledged to Dewey until he is nominated or put out of the running.

The spokesman, who asked that his name not be used, said a pre-convention survey from Maryland's viewpoint indicated Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) was out of the running, that Dewey was on the way out "because of the war and his youth," that Senator Taft (R-O) would split the Dewey vote, and that Willkie would come in ahead on a growing landslide.

"The whole thing depends on how much strength the practical politicians will have at the convention," he predicted.

Two weeks ago, a similar unofficial survey of the delegation by the same spokesman gave Willkie only four sure votes on the convention delegation.

CIO Hosiery Workers Endorse Roosevelt

MILWAUKEE, June 19 (AP)—The American Federation of Hosiery Workers (CIO) unanimously endorsed President Roosevelt for a third term today, after CIO vice presidents Emil Rieve and Van A. Bittner urged the move in short addresses before the convention.

"Ninety-five per cent of the workers in America, no matter which union they belong to are standing behind President Roosevelt," Bittner declared.

Rieve told the convention that "it is doubly imperative that the next president of the United States should be Franklin D. Roosevelt."

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

The great struggle for the "Tight Little Isle" of Britain has started in deadly earnest even before France's fate has been revealed to her by her German-Italian conquerors.

Formal notice of that was served on East coast England in a rain of German bombs that fell even before echoes of Prime Minister Winston Churchill's defiance of Germany's "air weapon" had died away.

It may mean that Germany has decided on a siege of England by air and U-boat to starve her into submission. It could foreshadow ruthless and unrestricted war in the air over England in a terroristic campaign to break the fighting heart of the English people, or it might be the first move in a German effort to surge across the narrow English channel and invade the island.

Whatever its place in the German scheme, however, that intensified raid on Britain is evidence conclusive that Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini are well aware that their victory over France is incomplete and tentative until England has been mastered.

Home Defense Respected

There are several factors about the raid which are worth noting. For one thing, it was staged in the dark hours, just before dawn. That implies that Germany's war captains have a healthy respect for Britain's home defense.

It is recalled that in the dramatic rescue of more than 300,000 allied trops from the closing German trap at Dunkerque, Britain's home defense air force saw action. British spokesmen, including Churchill, have claimed that it scored heavily, at a ration of four to one, against German flyers seeking to destroy the escaping armies massed on the beach at the French port.

The first German air assault in the "Battle of Britain" was in direct contrast to the situation during the fighting in Norway, in the low countries and in France. In those cases German air mastery was so complete that the Nazis ruled the skies in the daytime.

Retains Outmatched Fleet

Through it all, Britain necessarily retained at home an important part of her numerically outmatched air fleet. It has been joined now by Britain air forces heretofore devoted to protecting Allied troops in France.

There is another circumstance to be noted. London acknowledges that the German raids on England's East coast shipping and industrial centers were directed at military objectives. They did not constitute an air blitzkrieg against British public morale.

That tends to support the widely held opinion that it is an air-and U-boat siege to destroy England's sea life lines and contacts with her far-flung empire that Germany is planning, not invasion or ruthless air war. The risks of invasion against an England armed as never before in her history still seem too great.

Lewis Statement

included in the Republican platform.

AFL Would Assist Allies

The committee, endeavoring to write a plank expressing the party's viewpoint on foreign relations, was informed by Green that the AF of L. favors "every ounce of assistance and supplies" to European democracies "short of our entry into the war."

A statement from the Manufacturers' Association declared:

"Currently disturbed labor relations and uncertainty as to future labor relations are a major obstacle in the national preparedness program; their existence tends to prevent capital from working and providing employment."

Mr. Roosevelt's compulsory service idea was the subject of much discussion, mostly unfavorable, throughout the day. There was talk of writing a plank on the subject.

Alf M. Landon, the Republican presidential standard bearer in 1936, declared:

"This is an example of the half-cocked way the president has been doing things lately x x x it seems he has to have an idea a day to keep Hitler away."

The former Kansas governor is chairman of a sub-committee named to write a foreign affairs plank.

After Lewis had concluded his speech to the committee, Landon asked for his opinion of Mr. Roosevelt's proposal. When Lewis had made his reply, Landon inquired whether it did not involve "organization of the youth of this country into labor battalions."

"That's my opinion of it," Lewis answered.

Berates Both Parties

For the rest, the C.I.O. leader impartially breated both the Republican and Democratic parties for their past records on labor and unemployment.

He warned that if neither party "measures up," it was "not unreasonable to expect that both would lose the confidence of the people."

PHILADELPHIA, June 19. (AP) Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, said tonight President Roosevelt's proposal for compulsory national service is "insanity and nothing less."

Making an unscheduled appearance before the Platform committee of the Republican National Convention, McCormick reviewed the military record of the World war and urged:

With this record before you I hope you will not heed the hysterical appeal for immediate conscription. x x x It would be a tragic blunder to call away from their occupations millions of civilians whom we cannot clothe for months or arm for years."

Ford To Contract With Government

Knudsen Says Sixty Per Cent of Warplane Engines Are for Allies

WASHINGTON, June 19 (AP)—An apparent hitch developed today in the plan to have the Ford Motor company turn out Rolls Royce engines to drive American and Allied warplanes.

After it had been stated here and in London that the company would produce 6,000 engines for Britain and 3,000 for the United States, Henry Ford declared at Detroit that he would contract solely with the United States government and for "defensive purposes only."

Hearing of this, William S. Knudsen of the National Defense commission made the following statement:

"In negotiations with the Ford Motor company it was made plain that sixty percent of the order for Rolls Royce engines was for the Allies and the balance for the United States government.

"I was assured by Mr. Edsel Ford, president, that this arrangement was satisfactory to the Ford Motor company. No contracts have been signed as yet. They are still in negotiation."

No Ground for Fear Liberty Is Lost in U. S., Declares Hoover

NEW YORK, June 19, (AP), Former President Herbert Hoover, writing in the July issue of "The American Mercury", declares that "predictator periods" in Europe are analogous to 'some recent years and events in America."

Under the title, "it needn't happen here", Hoover discussed reasons for the rise of dictatorships in Europe, based his observations during a continental tour two years ago, and compared them with conditions in this country.

Nevertheless, he insisted, "There is no ground for defeatist fear that Liberty is lost in America."

Hoover said he found in Europe that "the universal pattern" of nations preceding totalitarian rule "was the general despair of the people that democracy could solve their economic and governmental problems."

The result, he added, was that "the dictatorship was established by powers conferred upon the man on horseback by parliamentary leaders or confirmed by electoral action. x x x Liberty committed suicide."

Writer Says Democracy In Europe Is Doomed

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., June 19 (AP) — Democracy in Europe is doomed, even if England is able to defeat Germany in a long war, the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia was told tonight.

R. H. Markham, foreign correspondent and special writer for the Christian Science Monitor, said in a prepared address that Great Britain and France have been chief inspirers of Democracy in Europe and British sailors and French soldiers its only guarantors.

"It sems quite certain that one of two things will now happen," he said. "First, Hitler may triumph . . .In that case, Democracy will be as a torpedoed ship, physically anninilated. . .

"Perhaps England will hold the fort. Maybe, Germany will partially exhaust herself in crushing France and attacking England. In that case, the war might drag on, as during Napoleon's era. Under such circumstances, England will fight with a fanatical fury and the British people in their desire for elemental self-preservation will forego all Democratic forms. They will devote all their energies to fighting and making implements of war. So, in that case, also, Democracy will be dead in Europe."

Russia Moves Troops To German Border

BUCHAREST, June 20 (Thursday) (AP) — Government circles received reports today that a large number of Russian troops are being transferred from the Bessarabian frontier with Rumania to the German-Russian border.

These circles said more Russian troops were being concentrated on the frontier in Russian Poland opposite the frontier with German-protected Slovakia.

German motorized columns are being sent to East Prussia, opposite the Baltic states where Russia recently sent huge forces in a military occupation, it was reported.

(Unconfirmed reports of German troop movements in East Prussia also have been circulated in the Baltic states.)

Germans Encourage Marriage with Loan To All Newly-Weds

Deduct $100 for Each Child, Mrs. Hampton Tells Rural Women

COLLEGE PARK, Md., June 19 (AP) — To encourage marriage and large families, Nazi Germany loans newly-weds $400, Mrs. Wade Hampton, Washington lecturer and educator, told rural women today.

For each child born, $100 is deducted from the amount owed, Mrs. Hampton declared in speaking on "the meaning of the German revolution as the folk revealed to me".

Women taking the annual short course also heard addresses this morning by Albert Warner, Washington news commentator; Lyle O'Rourke, national director of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, and Miss Earlene White, honorary president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Womens' clubs.

O'Rourke said too many college youths know about Communism, Nazism and Fascism and "not enough about Americanism." America has a far greater challenge from within than from without, he asserted.

Dr. John C. Krantz, professor at the University Medical school, and Dr. Harold Benjamin, dean of education at the university, spoke at the afternoon session.

Tomorrow is visitors' day at the "homemakers' " college, with the families and relatives of the students coming here from all parts of the state.

At night a music fiesta of nations will be staged by county groups in front of the library building. Approximately 250 women, dressed in costumes of various nations, will sing folk songs and dance.

The program includes a bag-pipe solo and songs by a native Swiss yodeler.

Following the music fiesta, souvenirs from the counties will be sold. A soft-drink bar will be set up.

The principal speaker tomorrow afternoon will be Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen Rohde, former congresswoman from Florida and former United States minister to Denmark.

Spain To Claim Share Of War Spoils

Madrid, June 19 (AP) — Spain claimed tonight a share in any division of the spoils of war from France.

Responsible quarters said flatly that Spain's part in peace negotiations was "not just that of go-between" but the role of a nation which expected a voice in any territorial realignments.

Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini already have pledged Spain would have such a voice, it was said.

The road to empire already laid out by Spain's fascist government leads first to the south. Spokesmen have said Spain's "vital interests" in the Mediterranean require that she be given control of the African coast across from the Ibernian peninsula.

The press has said, too, that Spain should have from Britain control of Gibraltar, and should take over the little principality of Andorra in the Pyrenees on the French - Spanish frontier.

Meanwhile, through those mountains, a steady stream of refugees snails into Spain from France. Among these have been the former Empress Zita of Austria and her son, the Archduke Otto, pretender to the non-existent Austrian throne, and the three children of King Leopold III of Belgium. Many were headed for Portugal.

Myron Taylor Reported Seriously Ill

ROME, June 19 (AP) — Attendants described the condition of Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's representative to the Vatican, as serious tonight, but not alarming.

Hiss illness, laid partly to overwork, has kept Taylor at his villa in Florence, confined to bed most of the time.

Gang Quarrels over Loot Victim Tells Police

ELKTON, Md., June 19 (AP) — Found beside a road in a dazed condition, a young man, who said he was Dannie Delmont, of Tampa, Fla., today told police he was the victim of a gang quarrel over booty taken in a series of robberies.

Sheriff David said Randolph told him he had been riding with two men from Chicago and was knocked unconscious by one of his companions after a quarrel over loot.

W. Doudon Reynolds, of the Elkton police force, found the man, badly cut and bruised. The officer said he was armed with a revolver. The victim told officers he either fell or was thrown from the car.

A F.B.I. agent questioned the man at the local hospital where he received treatment. Later he was taken to the Cecil county jail.

Sheriff Randolph said the man told him his companions were enroute "to Syracuse to pull another job" when they reached here.

Japan Is Urged To Take Over Indo-China

May Occupy 'Protectively' in Anticipation of Collapse of France

By The Associated Press

TOKYO, June 20 (Thursday) — Powerful political factions urged the Japanese government today to turn to Southeastern Asia and even occupy "protectively" the rich French possession of Indo-China, in anticipation of collapse of the French empire.

Already the government, timing its action to coincide with discussion of the French armistice terms, was reported reliably to have dropped a reminder in Berlin and Rome of its "concern" over Indo-China.

This reminder, it was understood, was accompanied by recollection of the friendly relations between the three powers.

A reliable source disclosed, moreover, that Germany has reiterated to Japan that she will not ask for the return of Japan's mandated islands, stretching many miles east of the Philippines, above the equator.

These islands, the Marshalls, Carolines and Mariannes, were mandated to Japan under the treaty of Versailles.

It is not known whether Japan is asking the axis powers for a continuance of the status quo in the 281,000 square miles of Indo-China, or desires a "blank check" from Germany and Italy, to use as she will. Japan is linked to the axis powers by an anti-Communist pact.

When Japan asked Germany about the Dutch East Indies, Germany said she was "uninterested" in the problem, and some people interpreted that as an invitation to Japan to take any action she desired.

At any rate, the Tohokai, influential political party, urged the government to occupy Indo-China first, because it is a major channel of munitions supply for the Chinese central government, Japan's Asiatic enemy, and second because the collapse of the French government allegedly casts Indo-China loose without control.

(British authorities in Hongkong, crown colony, however, warily stopped clearances of all ships intended for French Indo-China until the situation is cleared up).

Destroy Trojan Horse, Urges Uruguay

MONTEVIDEO, June 19. (AP)—Little Uruguay called today upon her two million people to destroy the Trojan horse.

The government summoned all men and women to voluntary enlistment for military training or for Women's Auxiliary services.

Officials acted to sharply limit the influx of so-called "tourists."

The man-on-the-street took heart from the approaching visit of the United States Cruiser Quincy, due tomorrow on a good neighbor tour.

Uruguay is the Achilles heel of South America. A parliamentary commission just has issued a thirty-three-point indictment of Nazi infiltration. The commission said it disclosed a Nazi plan for military occupation of the nation.

Disclosures from the report said evidence had been found of a scheme to make over Uruguay's national life and create a "little Germany" in South America.

The German legation in Montevideo was said to have directed Nazi propaganda. Twelve German leaders were detained. The army was ordered to stand ready, although spokesmen said the report seemed to show no immediate threat to national safety.

Night Flights

One of the most recent, and most difficult, phases of training carrier pigeons for war service is teaching the birds to fly at night. Like most birds, a homing pigeon goes to sleep at night. At present, some Army birds can successfully negotiate up to 50 miles a night, which is way below their daytime cruising range. —From the American Wildlife Institute.

German Conquests and The Monroe Doctrine

CONGRESS has passed a resolution expressing its opposition to the transfer of any of the European-owned territories in the Western Hemisphere to any other power.

This is a restatement of the Monroe Doctrine in newly-defined terms respecting the conquests of Germany in Europe. It embodies the realization that islands and colonies owned by France and the Netherlands in this hemisphere are not only at this time within Germany's grasp, but may at any moment be formally annexed by it. In addition to the Dutch West Indies, there are a number of territories included in the French colonial empire on this side of the Atlantic. They are French Guiana, on the mainland of South America; the islands of Guadeloupe and Martinique, with a few small dependencies, lying athwart the approaches to the Panama canal, in the Lesser Antilles, and, off the coast of Newfoundland, the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon.

If Germany should conquer Britain, then this menace would be far greater. In such event Germany would be in a position to help itself to any of the British West Indies; could combine the British, French and Dutch Guianas under the Swastika; could take Bermuda, could ask for special concessions in the Azores and the Cape Verdes; could help itself to Freetown, the present aviation base on the West African coast whence commercial air liners take off for Brazil and other Latin-American destinations.

Thus is the European war brought nearer to America in a way more sharply than ever impressing its need for strengthening its home defenses, in which the Panama canal stands as a vital factor. The congressional resolution calls for "consultation" with the Latin-American nations in case the protested transfers should be attempted. It is obvious that some consultations should be started at once and the State department is already arranging for a conference.

Under the Monroe Doctrine as originally formulated, the United States committed itself to resist European nations seeking permanent territorial aggrandizement at the expense of Latin-American nations. Under the Monroe Doctrine, as further developed after France's ill-starred attempt to make Maximilian emperor of Mexico, the United States committed itself to oppose armed European intervention in Latin-American internal affairs, even when territorial annexation was not an objective.

Under the Monroe Doctrine as still further elaborated by Grover Cleveland, in the Venezuelan controversy with Great Britain, and by Theodore Roosevelt in another controversy — again involving Venezuela—with Germany, the United States assumed the position of arbiter of Latin American differences with European powers. Cleveland and Roosevelt both virtually warned all overseas nations that they must not take direct military or naval action against a South or Central American country under any pretext or on any provocation.

Naturally, this interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine carried with it a new obligation on the United States government—an obligation to act as a sort of Pan-American policeman. Obviously we could not forbid European nations in Latin-America, unless we, ourselves, were willing to take over the duty of such protection. It was because of this implied obligation that, during the turbulent days of Carranza and Villa, the American State department became apparently more agitated over the killing of one British subject than it was over the killing of several Americans. It happened that the Wilson administration had backed Carranza and Villa (later our own principal Mexican problem child) against Huerta whom the British preferred; and Washington was anxious then not to give London any excuse to say: "If you can't protect British subjects in Mexico, we shall have to do it ourselves."

Under President Franklin D. Roosevelt's "good neighbor" policy, however, the United States renounced the role of Pan-American policeman. That left to each European nation the problem of protecting its own citizens and property in Latin-American nations. But the United States has not renounced the Grover Cleveland-Theodore Roosevelt interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine, whereby we committed ourselves to prevent European nations from taking the law into their own hands in Latin-America. In other words, we still are pledged to protect Central and South American nations against punitive action by European countries. Under the new definition we are obligated to this protection not only to prevent European aggrandizement and to prevent punitive action by European countries, but also to protect ourselves and particularly our own vital home defenses.

Have You Been Listed In the New Census?

QUITE NATURALLY the people of Cumberland want to see this city take its proper ranking in the new decennial census of the United States that is now under way. It is important, therefore, that all local citizens be included therein.

The News understands that the Cumberland census is now approximately ninety-five per cent complete. The total figures will be ready for announcement within a few weeks. It is quite likely—indeed this has been found to be the case in other communities of comparative size—that citizens who should be listed have not been listed. Some have been away from home and have not as yet been contacted by the census takers, or they have been missed for other reasons.

There is yet time for inclusion of all those persons who have not been missed. Unfortunately, owing to the population ranking of the city, there is no supervising headquarters here to which the names of persons missed may be reported. The work of district supervision is being carried on at Hagerstown.

Census officials and workers are anxious to have their work complete. They have advised The News that they will include any of those who have not as yet been recorded in the census. They have suggested that, until such other arrangements may be made, such persons leave their names and addresses with the local chamber of commerce and that district census representatives from Hagerstown will pick up these names on future visits to Cumberland and see that census takers get in touch with the persons and obtain the necessary information. The chamber headquarters is on the fifth floor of the Liberty Trust building, but it may be reached by telephone No. 1698.

The population of Cumberland in the fifteenth United States census (1930) was 37,747. Under the new census of 1940 it should run well above 40,000, in view of the known growth of the community. But, for obvious reasons, it should be as complete as possible.

Our Picturesque Language

"TIPS will find a variety of pitches at the New York World's fair this season," a fair authority has explained. "The grinds will be fighting blow-offs with bally. The shills, or sticks, will be precipitating the turn for the scope joints, whistle workers and the like. But nary a mitt joint or a mitt worker will be found in the place."

Now what is all that about, anyway? Well, a glossary identifies these strange terms as follows: Mitt joint means a palmistry concession. Tips are crowds. Pitches are sidewalk concessions or booths. Grinds are spielers or talkers. The blow-off is the desertion of the concession, or pitch, by the crowd. Bally is useless sales talk. Shills, or sticks, are assistants planted in the crowd who start the rush to purchase the things offered for sale by the pitchmen. The turn is the psychological moment when the crowd is in a buying mood. Scope joints are booths where horoscopes are read. Whistle workers are those who sell whistles, horns and other noise-making devices. The mitt worker is a palmist.

Thus does the American amusement world furnish a strange though novel nomenclature. All these terms are clear enough when explained, but the uninitiated needs a glossary when running into several of them. Reduced to its lowest common denominator, the announcement means simply that the palmists have been banned from the fair.

A side show man ought to make a good newspaper headline writer.

A prophet is not only without honor in his own country, but Brigadier General Billy Mitchell, who back in the 1920's insisted that "air power in the future will be a determining factor in international competitions, both military and civil," got court martialed and the Injun sign.

Add Horrors of War: Hollywood reports that because of a shortage of false hair for wigs and such, heretofore obtained from the Balkans, a musical comedy picture "with the world's most beautiful girls" is being delayed.

It's a sad world, indeed. If you tell the truth you make enemies. If you don't tell the truth you can't make any real friends.

Now that he's in the war Mussolini may discover that a balcony is no place to be during a blitzkrieg.

I Remember ---

By MARSHALL MASLIN

I never feel very old, and yet that other war of which I was so small a part seems to me today to be so very long ago.

Marshall Maslin

I remember, as though the drifting fog and the bitter smoke of burning cities, those younger years of '17 and '18 and '19. . . . I remember the day I enlisted and in some indirect way managed to "bribe" an examining officer into allowing me to get eye glasses and become at least an ambulance driver. . . . I remember the camp to which we went and the long drills in the almost unbearable heat beneath the blazing sun—and that dark night in which we marched upon a transport and headed out across the Atlantic—and the long days at sea—and the submarine scare as we came in sight of France.

I remember the restless waiting at the port of St. Nazaire and then, at last, the exciting trip across France and up to the front. . . . I remember that first winter on the line near Verdun of bloody memher . . . remember the first snow I had ever seen and the stillness of the nights in that winter of 1917 . . . and the slow business of becoming soldiers.

And I remember that harsh and dreadful spring of 1918—when the Germans drove and drove and we went back and back and back. I remember the tearing, ripping sound of millions of shells passing overhead and the frightful explosion when they landed nearby . . . and the acrid smell of burned powder and the sweet deadliness of gas and the unforgettable smell of a land in which hundreds of thousands of men had died.

I remember courage and a little cowardice. I remember danger and security, I remember excitement and boredom. And I remember profound discouragement and heightened hopes, contempt and respect, gallantry and hatred, tested friendship and deepened resolution. Some fear but more of a strange curiosity to learn how much the human spirit could endure.

I, an old soldier, remember it all so well. And I remember coming home ready, I thought, for a settled life. Only a little shocked by the experience I had had, but changed in the respect that all soldiers who survive are changed—permeated with a solemn pride in that they have seen and endured the awfulness of war.

So I remember a world wrecked and restored, and hopeful once more. And now I see it torn apart again, broken and crying out in agony—and all my memories of those other years seem little and the experience I gained is a futile and trivial thing.

What part is mine—and yours—to save this good world of ours again for decent and honorable living?

Communist Talk Only Impresses Land of Freedom

By EDWIN C. HILL

Edwin C. Hill

Various persons recently criticized the three major broadcasting chains for affording time to the Communist leader in this country, Earl Browder. But the chains had no alternative. As the head of a legally constituted political party, Mr. Browder had a legal right to radio time. There wasn't a thing the radio people could do about it.

The aftermath of Mr. Browder's radio talk—in which, incidentally, this leader of a group devoted to the ideologies of Hitler and Stalin denounced the president's preparedness program—revealed that the public at large had paid scant attention to the Browder talk. It turned out to be a dud.

In these days when men are thinking straight, going to the heart of actualities, they are realizing more than ever what America means—the America of opportunity, the America that gave the poor boy, Henry Ford, the poor boy, William S. Knudsen, the poor boy, Thomas A. Edison, the poor boy Abraham Lincoln, and a thousand times a thousand times such poor boys, their chance to climb the hill of success.

Unforgettable Picture

It was Mr. Owen B. Winters, one of the great advertising men of this country, who once drew an unforgettable picture of that America.

"The reflected rays of the noonday sun," wrote Mr. Winters, "flash from the panes of the great factory. A siren sounds. The whir of machinery stops. From his office window the 'Old Man' looks out at the smoking chimneys, across the tarred roofs of the far-flung plant whose products are shipped by rail and sea to every nation. A boy brings a tray, with a raw apple, a bottle of milk and some crackers. The 'Old Man' lunches at his desk.

"As he watches the workers swarming out of the factory, he sees a crowd collecting at the gate. A man who is standing on a packing case begins to wave his arms. He is a swarthy little man with a black mustache. The 'Old Man' can't hear what he is saying, but he can guess. The 'Old Man's' salary was published in yesterday's newspaper. His income runs into six figures, more than the salary of the President of the United States. The man speaking from the packing case is a professional agitator. It is his job to make the workers discontented with their lot.

"'Soak the rich,' he cries. He doesn't care how much the 'Old Man' pays out in taxes. 'Down with capital!' he is shouting. 'Down with the 'Old Man'!'

Young Man's Reaction

"At the fringe of the crowd a young man is eating a sandwich from his dinner pail. The 'Old Man' recognizes the young man. He is the son of Charlie Pedersen, a foreman in the tool room. He has been studying mechanical engineering at night school. Young Pedersen is not paying much attention to the man on the packing case. As he munches his sandwich, he is thinking excitedly, 'A salary like that is something to work for! The 'Old Man' started at the bottom just like me. It's ability that counts. I have ability. Some day my pay check will be as big as that!'

"The 'Old Man' did start at the bottom, and he is proud of it. Five thousand men and women work for the great company and he holds the helm. Their trust, their hopes are in his hands. The 'Old Man' never went to college, yet his laboratories are filled with graduates from the best schools in the land. His alma mater was a backwoods schoolhouse where he trudged through the snow in copper-toed leather boots, McGuffey's Reader in his hand.

"With most of the men and women who work for the company, 'Old Man' is a term of genuine affection. They are puzzled when they hear the agitator on the packing case describe him as an octopus. There are white-haired men on the payroll who can remember way back when the plant was a little one-story building, and the 'Old Man' was a tow-headed boy who carried water for the foundry.

Not Worried

"As the 'Old Man' looks out the window he is not worried about the man on the packing case or what he is saying. He has met his kind many times before. He is worried more about what is happening in America today, and about the eager, bright-eyed son of Charlie Pedersen. He is worried lest the sickness that has seized upon the rest of the world spread its infection through America; worried lest all the isms and insidious doctrines of alien places destroy our greatest heritage, Land of the free, and home of the brave!

"He thinks of Washington and Patrick Henry, of Jefferson and Lincoln. He thinks of the thousands of brave Americans who have faced the wilderness, who have laid down young lives on Freedom's altar. He thinks of his own father walking beside his creaking wagon, crossing the Alleghenies, with a rifle in his hand. He thinks of his birthplace, a humble cabin on an Ohio farm chopped out of the hardwood. He reviews his own life, from its lowly beginning to his present proud position in industrial America.

Land of Freedom

"'Isn't the essential difference,' he asks, 'between this America of ours and all the polyglot nations of the earth, that this has always been a free land where men of ambition may scale the dizziest heights?'

"The social register of American business is filled with the names of men who came into the world with empty hands. Is the man on the packing case right? What does he offer in exchange? There must be bosses under any system. Isn't the better boss a man who has worked his way from the bottom to the top, a man who is a good boss because he understands the problem?

"It would be too bad, the 'Old Man' thinks, if the son of Charlie Pedersen should miss the opportunity that is his by heritage. It would be too bad if America should become like other countries, so regimented and politician-ruled that it would no longer be possible for a man to toil and climb and pluck the prime fruits of reward. For then this country would cease to be —America, sweet land of Liberty.—"

Need of a Better Exchange of News Between the Americas Is Discerned

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

Uncle Sam knows exceedingly little of Latin American sentiment of any sort, which is a matter particularly of concern just now due to talk of totalitarian activity in that part of the world.

Charles P. Stewart

It isn't so much that Uncle Samuel is uninformed diplomatically speaking. Our neighbors' foreign offices are quite willing to keep our state department posted as well as they can.

What we don't understand is Latin American news.

What we need is a competent corps of correspondents in the Latin field, keeping us in touch with developments in that area.

Contrariwise, an equally competent bunch of Latin American reporters is needed in our own midst, dishing out news to us in terms that we can comprehend.

Obviously a candidate for one of these posts must be saturated in the atmosphere of both halves of the western hemisphere.

Well, who is there who fills the bill? The answer is that John W. White is precisely the individual for the purpose. John has been a newspaperman in Buenos Aires, the Argentine capital, for approximately 25 years. He was a newspaperman in this country earlier than that, first migrating to Latin America as a member of the United States consular service.

But he had the newspaper germ already so prevalent in his system that he couldn't get rid of it; therefore quickly drifted back into the field of journalism.

He Knows Americas

For a long time past he has been chief correspondent for the New York Times on the South American continent. In fact, I surmise that he has been virtually the Times' sole correspondent; I never have seen any of his signed stuff that bore the earmarks of a product by an assistant. It would be hard to find any inhabited part of the republics between the Rio Grande and Cape Horn, the Atlantic and Pacific, that he has not visited.

John White is precisely the type of newspaperman needed to introduce the Americas to one another.

But there isn't enough of him. The demand is for ra sizeable staff of these international scribes, and John is just one. He's the whole list. Training perhaps a dozen others (and that would be a skimpy number for what's required) would take eight o rten years; airplane pilots can be ground out in a few months at a time, but not the newspaper boys to fill these jobs.

Oh, yes, we have international correspondents alright, and some them in the European field are good, but Europe presents an entirely different situation from the Pan-American one.

An Illustration

In Europe certain rules prevail of a sort approximately the same as those in the United States.

Now let me quote an incident illustrative of the peculiarities of the Latin American game.

This was a number of years ago, when I was newspapering in Buenos Aires. One day the then Argentinian president, Doctor de la Plaza, was reviewing a procession from a front balcony of the Casa Rosada, the local White House.

Down in the crowd an Argentine anarchist, with a pistol, fired three shots at the doctor before he could be overpowered.

The shots didn't hit the president, but they missed him very narrowly.

I submit that, had such an attempt been made in Washington, the next editions of the American press would have had to publish supplements to get their full stories of the affair before their readers.

Just a Few Lines

The Buenos Aires newspapers dismissed that de la Plaza incident in rather less than half a dozen lines each and in not every instance were those few lines even on the front page.

I had a loose business affiliation with the big Beunos Aires daily, La Nacion, and so outraged was I at this cavalied treatment of an attempt to kill the president, that I submitted my complain to Don Jorge Mitre, the editor.

Don Jorge looked up in surprise. "Why, the shots missed him," he said.

I just mention this incident to illustrate that an American reporter who considers himself pretty good at home may not rate so hot on the other side of the Equator. And vice versa. John White knows the game from both angles. He's the only newspaperman in the world who does.

Help for the Job Seeker

Magazine Writer Says Worker Should Never Lose Sight of the Real One

"If you and your job are out of tune," writes Esther Eberhardt Brooke, in Your Life Magazine, "you will proceed just about as harmoniously and end just about as right as a discordant orchestra rasping its way through Beethoven's Fifth Symphony."

"There is only one excuse for taking the first job you can get—in order to eat three square meals a day. If circumstances compel you to do that, do it, and give that job the best that is in you. But never, never lose sight of the real job—the job you want, the job you fit, the job that gives you a chance to be yourself."

"There are nine main fields open to you: Agriculture, clerical occupations, commercial occupations, mining, personal and domestic service, professional occupations, public service, skilled mechanical occupations, and transportation. In these nine classifications some authorities estimate as many as 20,000 different jobs. Select the job that interests you most, that seems to have the most interesting possibilities for you —then go after it!"

Sanity Our Watchword

From the Connellsville, Pa., Courier

The more effectively we impress upon Europe and the rest of the world the potential might of America, the less we shall have to fear from Hitler and others of his ilk. So long as the preparedness program is kept within the bounds of national sanity, the people will be found willing to sacrifice to make it possible. They want nothing of one-man rule — of a dictatorship set up in Washington. There is no emergency to demand that step.

In all the hustle and bustle there is naturally the fear of becoming involved militarily. That should not be allowed to influence our thinking to the extent we become resigned to the so-called inevitable. The dominating thought must be that we are sirtivng for peace and not for war. We have no ambition for conquest.

Before the world menace arose from the Reich, leaders of nations outside the growing dictatorships were hopeful the day of disarmament might be at hand. The horror in Europe has pushed that day back a generation, maybe several generations. Our hope lies in preparing so effectively none will have the hardihood to attack us.

But sanity should be the watchword.

Johnson Scores Reported Gang Plan on Willkie

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Hugh Johnson

WASHINGTON, June 19 — According to reports from Philadelphia, the Republican politicians are ganging up to "stop Willkie." There is even talk of Dewey, Taft and Vandenberg acting as a triumverate, like Caesar, Crassus and Pompey, by pooling their interests to control the convention, name each other as candidates or in commanding positions and divide the spoils.

How would they decide on the main prize? Maybe they would shoot craps for the presidency—to stop Willkie!

These reports seem incredible, although they come from newshounds whose skill and judgment are entitled to respect. They seem incredible because they suggest a design for political hari-kari by a great party of opposition whose services, in full vigor, whether in victory or defeat, this country now needs as never before in its history.

Would Be Tragic

Under our great stress, our people are properly and increasingly distrustful of political shysterism. Any such blatant grandstand parade of it as this would bury the Republican party as deep as did the catastrophe of 1936. That would be tragic, not only for that party but for this country.

In this night of war, this sweep of European revolution toward National Socialism and the pressures of thinly disguised Socialists—some not so "National"—all around the president, another 1936 "overwhelming mandate" would project us into war, give us a war dictatorship no milder than Hitler's and probably perpetuate it.

The totalitarian threat to the "American way of life" which we are supposedly fighting, could be the very thing we might thus accept.

Would Be Proof

Talk about the "inefficiency of democracy", any such hamstringing of it at Philadelphia at the hands of those who could best defend it would be important proof of the charge.

Mr. Wilkie went his present astonishing distance without benefit of either politics or patronage. He owes nothing to anybody. The rising flood of spontaneous popular support of him is the richest expression of pure democracy in recent times. It may well be that it is not strong enough to nominate him, but it deserves a trial without being strangled in its cradle by any such sleazy, selfish small-time politics.

Seen as Best Chance

Mr. Willkie's candidacy is, I think, the best chance we have to maintain a respectably strong party of "His Majesty's Loyal Opposition", which we so badly need just now. Mr. Roosevelt and his crew of masterful ghost-writers could make a monkey out of the Boy Scout, bean shooter, smart Aleckism of Tom Dewey. They would dance around the hippopatamoid lethargy of Senator Taft like a cooper around a barrel. They would make a Homeric joke of the weathervane veerings of Senator Vandenberg.

You can't give a political Joe Louis a respectable work-out with a featherweight—however clever—with a Republican Tony Galento—however heavy—or with a slap-happy political veteran, however experienced.

No Fair Sample

It is true that it is impossible truly to appraise a presidential white hope until he is actually a candidate right out on his own in the limelight, under the anxious eyes of 130,000,000 people. Willkie's preliminary workouts have been spectacularly successful, but it is no fair sample of what he can do on the big time.

He combines at least some of the appealing homely and common sense qualities of Abraham Lincoln and Will Rogers. He is a match for the president in any public appearance and an overmatch in logic and debate.

As I have said elsewhere: "I am not nominating him." I might not ever be able to support him. I am by no means sure he could win. But win or lose—he could provide that kind of vigorous, fair, able and patriotic opposition to wartime tendencies dangerous to our peace, democracy, defense and safety.

That is perhaps our greatest single need in this perilous moment. No other present Republican possibility, in my opinion, could.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

German Conquests and The Monroe Doctrine

CONGRESS has passed a resolution expressing its opposition to the transfer of any of the European-owned territories in the Western Hemisphere to any other power.

This is a restatement of the Monroe Doctrine in newly-defined terms respecting the conquests of Germany in Europe. It embodies the realization that islands and colonies owned by France and the Netherlands in this hemisphere are not only at this time within Germany's grasp, but may at any moment be formally annexed by it. In addition to the Dutch West Indies, there are a number of territories included in the French colonial empire on this side of the Atlantic. They are French Guiana, on the mainland of South America; the islands of Guadeloupe and Martinique, with a few small dependencies, lying athwart the approaches to the Panama canal, in the Lesser Antilles, and, off the coast of Newfoundland, the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon.

If Germany should conquer Britain, then this menace would be far greater. In such event Germany would be in a position to help itself to any of the British West Indies; could combine the British, French and Dutch Guianas under the Swastika; could take Bermuda, could ask for special concessions in the Azores and the Cape Verdes; could help itself to Freetown, the present aviation base on the West African coast whence commercial air liners take off for Brazil and other Latin-American destinations.

Thus is the European war brought nearer to America in a way more sharply than ever impressing its need for strengthening its home defenses, in which the Panama canal stands as a vital factor. The congressional resolution calls for "consultation" with the Latin-American nations in case the protested transfers should be attempted. It is obvious that some consultations should be started at once and the State department is already arranging for a conference.

Under the Monroe Doctrine as originally formulated, the United States committed itself to resist European nations seeking permanent territorial aggrandizement at the expense of Latin-American nations. Under the Monroe Doctrine, as further developed after France's ill-starred attempt to make Maximilian emperor of Mexico, the United States committed itself to oppose armed European intervention in Latin-American internal affairs, even when territorial annexation was not an objective.

Under the Monroe Doctrine as still further elaborated by Grover Cleveland, in the Venezuelan controversy with Great Britain, and by Theodore Roosevelt in another controversy — again involving Venezuela—with Germany, the United States assumed the position of arbiter of Latin American differences with European powers. Cleveland and Roosevelt both virtually warned all overseas nations that they must not take direct military or naval action against a South or Central American country under any pretext or on any provocation.

Naturally, this interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine carried with it a new obligation on the United States government—an obligation to act as a sort of Pan-American policeman. Obviously we could not forbid European nations in Latin-America, unless we, ourselves, were willing to take over the duty of such protection. It was because of this implied obligation that, during the turbulent days of Carranza and Villa, the American State department became apparently more agitated over the killing of one British subject than it was over the killing of several Americans. It happened that the Wilson administration had backed Carranza and Villa (later our own principal Mexican problem child) against Huerta whom the British preferred; and Washington was anxious then not to give London any excuse to say: "If you can't protect British subjects in Mexico, we shall have to do it, ourselves."

Under President Franklin D. Roosevelt's "good neighbor" policy, however, the United States renounced the role of Pan-American policeman. That left to each European nation the problem of protecting its own citizens and property in Latin-American nations. But the United States has not renounced the Grover Cleveland-Theodore Roosevelt interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine, whereby we committed ourselves to prevent European nations from taking the law into their own hands in Latin-America. In other words, we still are pledged to protect Central and South American nations against punitive action by European countries. Under the new definition we are obligated to this protection not only to prevent European aggrandizement and to prevent punitive action by European countries, but also to protect ourselves and particularly our own vital home defenses.

Have You Been Listed In the New Census?

QUITE NATURALLY the people of Cumberland want to see this city take its proper ranking in the new decennial census of the United States that is now under way. It is important, therefore, that all local citizens be included therein.

The News understands that the Cumberland census is now approximately ninety-five per cent complete. The total figures will be ready for announcement within a few weeks. It is quite likely—indeed this has been found to be the case in other communities of comparative size—that citizens who should be listed have not been listed. Some have been away from home and have not as yet been contacted by the census takers, or they have been missed for other reasons.

There is yet time for inclusion of all those persons who have not been missed. Unfortunately, owing to the population ranking of the city, there is no supervising headquarters here to which the names of persons missed may be reported. The work of district supervision is being carried on at Hagerstown.

Census officials and workers are anxious to have their work complete. They have advised The News that they will include any of those who have not as yet been recorded in the census. They have suggested that, until such other arrangements may be made, such persons leave their names and addresses with the local chamber of commerce and that district census representatives from Hagerstown will pick up these names on future visits to Cumberland and see that census takers get in touch with the persons and obtain the necessary information. The chamber headquarters is on the fifth floor of the Liberty Trust building, but it may be reached by telephone No. 1698.

The population of Cumberland in the fifteenth United States census (1930) was 37,747. Under the new census of 1940 it should run well above 40,000, in view of the known growth of the community. But, for obvious reasons, it should be as complete as possible.

Our Picturesque Language

"TIPS will find a variety of pitches at the New York World's fair this season," a fair authority has explained. "The grinds will be fighting blow-offs with bally. The shills, or sticks, will be precipitating the turn for the scope joints, whistle workers and the like. But nary a mitt joint or a mitt worker will be found in the place."

Now what is all that about, anyway? Well, a glossary identifies these strange terms as follows: Mitt joint means a palmistry concession. Tips are crowds. Pitches are sidewalk concessions or booths. Grinds are spielers or talkers. The blow-off is the desertion of the concession, or pitch, by the crowd. Bally is useless sales talk. Shills, or sticks, are assistants planted in the crowd who start the rush to purchase the things offered for sale by the pitchmen. The turn is the psychological moment when the crowd is in a buying mood. Scope joints are booths where horoscopes are read. Whistle workers are those who sell whistles, horns and other noise-making devices. The mitt worker is a palmist.

Thus does the American amusement world furnish a strange though novel nomenclature. All these terms are clear enough when explained, but the uninitiated needs a glossary when running into several of them. Reduced to its lowest common denominator, the announcement means simply that the palmists have been banned from the fair.

A side show man ought to make a good newspaper headline writer.

A prophet is not only without honor in his own country, but Brigadier General Billy Mitchell, who back in the 1920's insisted that "air power in the future will be a determining factor in international competitions, both military and civil," got court martialed and the Injun sign.

Add Horrors of War: Hollywood reports that because of a shortage of false hair for wigs and such, heretofore obtained from the Balkans, a musical comedy picture "with the world's most beautiful girls" is being delayed.

It's a sad world, indeed. If you tell the truth you make enemies. If you don't tell the truth you can't make any real friends.

Now that he's in the war Mussolini may discover that a balcony is no place to be during a blitzkrieg.

I Remember ---

By MARSHALL MASLIN

I never feel very old, and yet that other war of which I was so small a part seems to me today to be so very long ago.

I remember, as though the drifting fog and the bitter smoke of burning cities, those younger years of '17 and '18 and '19. . . . I remember the day I enlisted and in some indirect way managed to "bribe" an examining officer into allowing me to get eye glasses and become at least an ambulance driver. . . . I remember the camp to which we went and the long drills in the almost unbearable heat beneath the blazing sun—and that dark night in which we marched upon a transport and headed out across the Atlantic—and the long days at sea—and the submarine scare as we came in sight of France.

Marshall Maslin

I remember the restless waiting at the port of St. Nazaire and then, at last, the exciting trip across France and up to the front. . . . I remember that first winter on the line near Verdun of bloody memory . . . remember the first snow I had ever seen and the stillness of the nights in that winter of 1917 . . . and the slow business of becoming soldiers.

And I remember that harsh and dreadful spring of 1918—when the Germans drove and drove and we went back and back and back. I remember the tearing, ripping sound of millions of shells passing overhead and the frightful explosion when they landed nearby . . . and the acrid smell of burned powder and the sweet deadliness of gas and the unforgettable smell of a land in which hundreds of thousands of men had died.

I remember courage and a little cowardice. I remember danger and security, I remember excitement and boredom. And I remember profound discouragement and heightened hopes, contempt and respect, gallantry and hatred, tested friendship and deepened resolution. Some fear but more of a strange curiosity to learn how much the human spirit could endure.

I, an old soldier, remember it all so well. And I remember coming home ready, I thought, for a settled life. Only a little shocked by the experience I had had, but changed in the respect that all soldiers who survive are changed—permeated with a solemn pride in that they have seen and endured the awfulness of war.

So I remember a world wrecked and restored, and hopeful once more. And now I see it torn apart again, broken and crying out in agony—and all my memories of those other years seem little and the experience I gained is a futile and trivial thing.

What part is mine—and yours—to save this good world of ours again for decent and honorable living?

Communist Talk Only Impresses Land of Freedom

By EDWIN C. HILL

Various persons recently criticized the three major broadcasting chains for affording time to the Communist leader in this country, Earl Browder. But the chains had no alternative. As the head of a legally constituted political party, Mr. Browder had a legal right to radio time. There wasn't a thing the radio people could do about it.

Edwin C. Hill

The aftermath of Mr. Browder's radio talk—in which, incidentally, this leader of a group devoted to the ideologies of Hitler and Stalin denounced the president's preparedness program—revealed that the public at large had paid scant attention to the Browder talk. It turned out to be a dud.

In these days when men are thinking straight, going to the heart of actualities, they are realizing more than ever what America means—the America of opportunity, the America that gave the poor boy, Henry Ford, the poor boy, William S. Knudsen, the poor boy, Thomas A. Edison, the poor boy Abraham Lincoln, and a thousand times a thousand times such poor boys, their chance to climb the hill of success.

Unforgettable Picture

It was Mr. Owen B. Winters, one of the great advertising men of this country, who once drew an unforgettable picture of that America.

"The reflected rays of the noonday sun," wrote Mr. Winters, "flash from the panes of the great factory. A siren sounds. The whir of machinery stops. From his office window the 'Old Man' looks out at the smoking chimneys, across the tarred roofs of the far-flung plant whose products are shipped by rail and sea to every nation. A boy brings a tray, with a raw apple, a bottle of milk and some crackers. The 'Old Man' lunches at his desk.

"As he watches the workers swarming out of the factory, he sees a crowd collecting at the gate. A man who is standing on a packing case begins to wave his arms. He is a swarthy little man with a black mustache. The 'Old Man' can't hear what he is saying, but he can guess. The 'Old Man's' salary was published in yesterday's newspaper. His income runs into six figures, more than the salary of the President, of the United States. The man speaking from the packing case is a professional agitator. It is his job to make the workers discontented with their lot.

"'Soak the rich,' he cries. He doesn't care how much the 'Old Man' pays out in taxes. 'Down with capital!' he is shouting. 'Down with the 'Old Man'!'

Young Man's Reaction

"At the fringe of the crowd a young man is eating a sandwich from his dinner pail. The 'Old Man' recognizes the young man. He is the son of Charlie Pedersen, a foreman in the tool room. He has been studying mechanical engineering at night school. Young Pedersen is not paying much attention to the man on the packing case. As he munches his sandwich, he is thinking excitedly, 'A salary like that is something to work for! The 'Old Man' started at the bottom just like me. It's ability that counts. I have ability. Some day my pay check will be as big as that!'

"The 'Old Man' did start at the bottom, and he is proud of it. Five thousand men and women work for the great company and he holds the helm. Their trust, their hopes are in his hands. The 'Old Man' never went to college, yet his laboratories are filled with graduates from the best schools in the land. His alma mater was a backwoods schoolhouse where he trudged through the snow in copper-toed leather boots, McGuffey's Reader in his hand.

"With most of the men and women who work for the company, 'Old Man' is a term of genuine affection. They are puzzled when they hear the agitator on the packing case describe him as an octopus. There are white-haired men on the payroll who can remember way back when the plant was a little one-story building, and the 'Old Man' was a tow-headed boy who carried water for the foundry.

Not Worried

"As the 'Old Man' looks out the window he is not worried about the man on the packing case or what he is saying. He has met his kind many times before. He is worried more about what is happening in America today, and about the eager, bright-eyed son of Charlie Pedersen. He is worried lest the sickness that has seized upon the rest of the world spread its infection through America; worried lest all the isms and insidious doctrines of alien places destroy our greatest heritage. Land of the free, and home of the brave!

"He thinks of Washington and Patrick Henry, of Jefferson and Lincoln. He thinks of the thousands of brave Americans who have faced the wilderness, who have laid down young lives on Freedom's altar. He thinks of his own father walking beside his creaking wagon, crossing the Alleghenies, with a rifle in his hand. He thinks of his birthplace, a humble cabin on an Ohio farm chopped out of the hardwood. He reviews his own life, from its lowly beginning to his present proud position in industrial America.

Land of Freedom

"'Isn't the essential difference,' he asks, 'between this America of ours and all the polyglot nations of the earth, that this has always been a free land where men of ambition may scale the dizziest heights?'

"The social register of American business is filled with the names of men who came into the world with empty hands. Is the man on the packing case right? What does he offer in exchange? There must be bosses under any system. Isn't the better boss a man who has worked his way from the bottom to the top, a man who is a good boss because he understands the problem?

"It would be too bad, the 'Old Man' thinks, if the son of Charlie Pedersen should miss the opportunity that is his by heritage. It would be too bad if America should become like other countries, so regimented and politician-ruled that it would no longer be possible for a man to toil and climb and pluck the prime fruits of reward. For then this country would cease to be —America, sweet land of Liberty.—"

URGES WAR POWER

Sen. Claude Pepper

Suggestion of Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida, to the Senate that President Roosevelt be granted "full war time power to prepare and defend America," is only meant for duration of present emergency, he said. He recommended the President be empowered to suspend laws and government regulations.

THIS SHOULD BE INSTRUCTIVE

Need of a Better Exchange of News Between the Americas Is Discerned

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

Uncle Sam knows exceedingly little of Latin American sentiment of any sort, which is a matter particularly of concern just now due to talk of totalitarian activity in that part of the world.

Charles P. Stewart

It isn't so much that Uncle Samuel is uninformed diplomatically speaking. Our neighbors' foreign offices are quite willing to keep our state department posted as well as they can.

What we don't understand is Latin American news.

What we need is a competent corps of correspondents in the Latin field, keeping us in touch with developments in that area.

Contrariwise, an equally competent bunch of Latin American reporters is needed in our own midst, dishing out news to us in terms that we can comprehend.

Obviously a candidate for one of these posts must be saturated in the atmosphere of both halves of the western hemisphere.

Well, who is there who fills the bill? The answer is that John W. White is precisely the individual for the purpose. John has been a newspaperman in Buenos Aires, the Argentine capital, for approximately 25 years. He was a newspaperman in this country earlier than that, first migrating to Latin America as a member of the United States consular service.

But he had the newspaper germ already so prevalent in his system that he couldn't get rid of it; therefore quickly drifted back into the field of journalism.

He Knows Americas

For a long time past he has been chief correspondent for the New York Times on the South American continent. In fact, I surmise that he has been virtually the Times' sole correspondent; I never have seen any of his signed stuff that bore the earmarks of a product by an assistant. It would be hard to find any inhabited part of the republics between the Rio Grande and Cape Horn, the Atlantic and Pacific, that he has not visited.

John White is precisely the type of newspaperman needed to introduce the Americas to one another.

But there isn't enough of him. The demand is for a sizeable staff of these international scribes, and John is just one. He's the whole list. Training perhaps a dozen others (and that would be a skimpy number for what's required) would take eight o rten years; airplane pilots can be ground out in a few months at a time, but not the newspaper boys to fill these jobs.

Oh, yes, we have international correspondents alright, and some them in the European field are good, but Europe presents an entirely different situation from the Pan-American one.

An Illustration

In Europe certain rules prevail of a sort approximately the same as those in the United States.

Now let me quote an incident illustrative of the peculiarities of the Latin American game.

This was a number of years ago, when I was newspapering in Buenos Aires. One day the then Argentinian president, Doctor de la Plaza, was reviewing a procession from a front balcony of the Casa Rosada, the local White House.

Down in the crowd an Argentine anarchist, with a pistol, fired three shots at the doctor before he could be overpowered.

The shots didn't hit the president, but they missed him very narrowly.

I submit that, had such an attempt been made in Washington, the next editions of the American press would have had to publish supplements to get their full stories of the affair before their readers.

Just a Few Lines

The Buenos Aires newspapers dismissed that de la Plaza incident in rather less than half a dozen lines each and in not every instance were those few lines even on the front page.

I had a loose business affiliation with the big Beunos Aires daily, La Nacion, and so outraged was I at this cavalied treatment of an attempt to kill the president, that I submitted my complain to Don Jorge Mitre, the editor.

Don Jorge looked up in surprise. "Why, the shots missed him," he said.

I just mention this incident to illustrate that an American reporter who considers himself pretty good at home may not rate so hot on the other side of the Equator. And vice versa. John White knows the game from both angles. He's the only newspaperman in the world who does.

Quotable Quotes

By United States Senator Robert R. Reynolds, Democrat, of North Carolina

Communism is produced by hardship and disease and sickness and unemployment and lack of educational facilities, and that kind of thing. Wipe those things out, and we will not have any Communists in the country.

Great Britain's agricultural department is limiting such crops as flowers and herbs on small truck farms to devote the land to food production.

Help for the Job Seeker

Magazine Writer Says Worker Should Never Lose Sight of the Real One

"If you and your job are out of tune," writes Esther Eberhardt Brooke, in Your Life Magazine, "you will proceed just about as harmoniously and end just about as right as a discordant orchestra rasping its way through Beethoven's Fifth Symphony."

"There is only one excuse for taking the first job you can get—in order to eat three square meals a day. If circumstances compel you to do that, do it, and give that job the best that is in you. But never, never lose sight of the real job—the job you want, the job you fit, the job that gives you a chance to be yourself."

"There are nine main fields open to you: Agriculture, clerical occupations, commercial occupations, mining, personal and domestic service, professional occupations, public service, skilled mechanical occupations, and transportation. In these nine classifications some authorities estimate as many as 20,000 different jobs. Select the job that interests you most, that seems to have the most interesting possibilities for you —then go after it!"

Sanity Our Watchword

From the Connellsville, Pa., Courier

The more effectively we impress upon Europe and the rest of the world the potential might of America, the less we shall have to fear from Hitler and others of his ilk. So long as the preparedness program is kept within the bounds of national sanity, the people will be found willing to sacrifice to make it possible. They want nothing of one-man rule — of a dictatorship set up in Washington. There is no emergency to demand that step.

In all the hustle and bustle there is naturally the fear of becoming involved militarily. That should not be allowed to influence our thinking to the extent we become resigned to the so-called inevitable. The dominating thought must be that we are sirtivng for peace and not for war. We have no ambition for conquest.

Before the world menace arose from the Reich, leaders of nations outside the growing dictatorships were hopeful the day of disarmament might be at hand. The horror in Europe has pushed that day back a generation, maybe several generations. Our hope lies in preparing so effectively none will have the hardihood to attack us.

But sanity should be the watchword.

Johnson Scores Reported Gang Plan on Willkie

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, June 19 — According to reports from Philadelphia, the Republican politicians are ganging up to "stop Willkie." There is even talk of Dewey, Taft and Vandenberg acting as a triumverate, like Caesar, Crassus and Pompey, by pooling their interests to control the convention, name each other as candidates or in commanding positions and divide the spoils.

Hugh Johnson

How would they decide on the main prize? Maybe they would shoot craps for the presidency—to stop Willkie!

These reports seem incredible, although they come from newshounds whose skill and judgment are entitled to respect. They seem incredible because they suggest a design for political hari-kari by a great party of opposition whose services, in full vigor, whether in victory or defeat, this country now needs as never before in its history.

Would Be Tragic

Under our great stress, our people are properly and increasingly distrustful of political shysterism. Any such blatant grandstand parade of it as this would bury the Republican party as deep as did the catastrophe of 1936. That would be tragic, not only for that party but for this country.

In this night of war, this sweep of European revolution toward National Socialism and the pressures of thinly disguised Socialists—some not so "National"—all around the president, another 1936 "overwhelming mandate" would project us into war, give us a war dictatorship no milder than Hitler's and probably perpetuate it.

The totalitarian threat to the "American way of life" which we are supposedly fighting, could be the very thing we might thus accept.

Would Be Proof

Talk about the "inefficiency of democracy", any such hamstringing of it at Philadelphia at the hands of those who could best defend it would be important proof of the charge.

Mr. Wilkie went his present astonishing distance without benefit of either politics or patronage. He owes nothing to anybody. The rising flood of spontaneous popular support of him is the richest expression of pure democracy in recent times. It may well be that it is not strong enough to nominate him, but it deserves a trial without being strangled in its cradle by any such sleazy, selfish, small-time politics.

Seen as Best Chance

Mr. Willkie's candidacy is, I think, the best chance we have to maintain a respectably strong party of "His Majesty's Loyal Opposition", which we so badly need just now. Mr. Roosevelt and his crew of masterful ghost-writers could make a monkey out of the Boy Scout, bean shooter, smart Aleckism of Tom Dewey. They would dance around the hippopatamoid lethargy of Senator Taft like a cooper around a barrel. They would make a Homeric joke of the weathervane veerings of Senator Vandenberg.

You can't give a political Joe Louis a respectable work-out with a featherweight—however clever—with a Republican Tony Galento—however heavy—or with a slaphappy political veteran, however experienced.

No Fair Sample

It is true that it is impossible truly to appraise a presidential white hope until he is actually a candidate right out on his own in the limelight, under the anxious eyes of 130,000,000 people. Willkie's preliminary workouts have been spectacularly successful, but it is no fair sample of what he can do on the big time.

He combines at least some of the appealing homely and common sense qualities of Abraham Lincoln and Will Rogers. He is a match for the president in any public appearance and an overmatch in logic and debate.

As I have said elsewhere: "I am not nominating him." I might not ever be able to support him. I am by no means sure he could win. But win or lose—he could provide that kind of vigorous, fair, able and patriotic opposition to wartime tendencies dangerous to our peace, democracy, defense and safety.

That is perhaps our greatest single need in this perilous moment. No other present Republican possibility, in my opinion, could.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Little Fellow Is Guided by Real Teacher

Commendation Not Condemnation Is Motto in One Schoolroom

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH.D.

From a teacher comes this letter:

"Dear Dr. Myers: As a country school teacher, I believe with you in celebrating children's successes. A real teacher of my acquaintance has as her classroom motto, 'Commendation not condemnation.' It is mine, too, but once this past year, under the repeated advice of my superintendent, I reversed my method and nearly brought disaster into the life of one youngster, who is below par mentally. He has been in first grade three years, but this delay in promotion has not diminished his great joy in his school work, and his face beams like the sun as he busily works away at the few things he is able to accomplish successfully.

Balks Completely

"Much against my convictions, I ordered him to 'hard labor in a prison work shop.' He did his level best (no more than he had always done, for he had always tried so hard), but I scowled and scolded, and demanded more and more while he felt himself sinking in defeat and humiliation.

"He stood it bravely until one day, when he balked completely and when punished, cried out, "I hate this old school. I never want to come to school any more."

"Then I said to myself, "I have committed a crime if I cannot bring back to this child the joy that has been his through his small successes. How would I feel in his place?' He readily responded to old treatment and in June passed from the A division into second grade, his confidence in his ability to succeed in top notch. He will be two years at least in this grade (teachers can't make brains), but he will be happy if I teach him."

Solving Parent Problems

Q. My boy of four will strike at me when displeased with my command of a diciplinary sort.

A. Try to make fewer commands, but when you do and the child strikes at you turn him over your knee and give him such pain as he will remember. Do this for every such offense and do it instantly, until the offense wholly disappears.

Q. I have a baby nine months old. He goes about on his kiddy car and pulls everything down he can lay his hands on. Is there any way I can train him he must not touch things except his own toys?

A. Spend several short periods each day while he is on his kiddy car explaining to him what he can touch and what he must not touch. Center on a few things he must always avoid. Give him instant physical pain when he touches them. Merely keep him from other things or put them out of his reach, bringing them back gradually as he learns to avoid certain other things permanently. Otherwise, don't let him have the kiddy car when you can't supervise him. No sense in punishing him for touching any particular object at all unless you can be sure he always will be punished when he touches it. Be sure he has a number of things he can freely handle and enjoy.

Getting That Book

If you have loaned a friend a book and he or she has had it a long time, and you want it back, a good method to employ is to visit the friend's home, find your book and ask lightly if she (or he) is finished with it, and then offer to take it home with you to save the friend the trouble of returning it.

Little Fellow Is Guided by Real Teacher

Commendation Not Condemnation Is Motto in One Schoolroom

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH.D.

From a teacher comes this letter:

"Dear Dr. Myers: As a country school teacher, I believe with you in celebrating children's successes. A real teacher of my acquaintance has as her classroom motto, 'Commendation not condemnation.' It is mine, too, but once this past year, under the repeated advice of my superintendent, I reversed my method and nearly brought disaster into the life of one youngster, who is below par mentally. He has been in first grade three years, but this delay in promotion has not diminished his great joy in his school work, and his face beams like the sun as he busily works away at the few things he is able to accomplish successfully.

Balks Completely

"Much against my convictions, I ordered him to 'hard labor in a prison work shop.' He did his level best (no more than he had always done, for he had always tried so hard), but I scowled and scolded, and demanded more and more while he felt himself sinking in defeat and humiliation.

"He stood it bravely until one day, when he balked completely and when punished, cried out, "I hate this old school. I never want to come to school any more."

"Then I said to myself, "I have committed a crime if I cannot bring back to this child the joy that has been his through his small successes. How would I feel in his place?' He readily responded to old treatment and in June passed from the A division into second grade, his confidence in his ability to succeed in top notch. He will be two years at least in this grade (teachers can't make brains), but he will be happy if I teach him."

Solving Parent Problems

Q. My boy of four will strike at me when displeased with my command of a diciplinary sort.

A. Try to make fewer commands, but when you do and the child strikes at you turn him over your knee and give him such pain as he will remember. Do this for every such offense and do it instantly, until the offense wholly disappears.

Q. I have a baby nine months old. He goes about on his kiddy car and pulls everything down he can lay his hands on. Is there any way I can train him he must not touch things except his own toys?

A. Spend several short periods each day while he is on his kiddy car explaining to him what he can touch and what he must not touch. Center on a few things he must always avoid. Give him instant physical pain when he touches them. Merely keep him from other things or put them out of his reach, bringing them back gradually as he learns to avoid certain other things permanently. Otherwise, don't let him have the kiddy car when you can't supervise him. No sense in punishing him for touching any particular object at all unless you can be sure he always will be punished when he touches it. Be sure he has a number of things he can freely handle and enjoy.

Getting That Book

If you have loaned a friend a book and he or she has had it a long time, and you want it back, a good method to employ is to visit the friend's home, find your book and ask lightly if she (or he) is finished with it, and then offer to take it home with you to save the friend the trouble of returning it.

Girl Scouts To Present Pageant On the Life of Juliette Low

There will be an important meeting of the Juliette Low group, the Girl Scout Choral Club and registered day campers at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at Girl Scout headquarters, Greene street.

The climax of the day camp will be reached Monday, July 1 with the Juliette Low troop representative attending the day camp assisted by the Girl Scout Choral Club under the direction of Miss Mary Robb. A pageant of the life of Juliette Low will be presented and the work being done by the Red Cross for girl guides and Girl Scouts throughout the war-torn countries with the Juliette Low municipal fund.

Heretofore this fund was used to bring members of the girl guides and Girl Scouts together at the International camp, "The Chalet" at Adelboden, Switzerland, the gift of Mrs. James Storor of Boston, one of the pioneer sponsors of girl scouting in the United States. This is now impossible so in 1940 the money is being used to assist refugee Girl Scouts and guides in their forced exits from their native land. The largest number of refugees are in Devonshire, England, which is in charge of the Polish Boy Scouts executive.

In climax, there are about 50,000 Girl Scouts of tenderfoot ranks. Last year through the association, the American National Red Cross and Madame Chiang-Kai-Shek transmitted $804 in gold ($5,000 in Chinese currency) for the relief of Girl Scouts in the devastated provinces.

Women in charge of the Juliette Low pageant include Mrs. Wyand F. Doerner, Mrs. A. L. Rogers, Mrs. W. L. Ramsey, Mrs. Richard Coulehan, Mrs. Pauline Fisher, Miss Mary Robb, Miss Althea Birchard and Miss Jane Showacker.

Tuesday, June 25 the Day Camp opens on Haystack Mountain with each girl providing her own needs. The last day of camp will be July 1 at the Celanese pool. Registration must be no later than Friday.

If You Boast Coppery Top

Like the thatch of the blonde baby, the coppery girl's hair is apt to darken at the roots as she gets older.

By HELEN FOLLETT

ONE SHADE of hair that is extremely rare and which is considered unusually attractive is the copper colored mop. In strong sunlight, the shafts glitter like copper wires.

Like the thatch of the blonde baby, the coppery girl's hair is likely to darken at the roots as she gets older. Which is a pity. Too bad Mama Nature doesn't give us color guarantees. But much can be done to ward off this change act.

The hair should be shampooed every ten days or every fortnight with a bland soap that has been melted. There should be three soapings and as many rinsings. If soap remains on the hair the gloss will disappear.

Use Lemon Rinse

After the last rinsing, add the strained juice of three lemons to a quart of water, pour over the head again and again. Let it run into a washbowl, and dip it up with a cup. Get a durable permanent so that no setting lotion need be used.

In beauty shops, one can have a touch-up with a mixture of henna and peroxide in proper proportions. No, my friend, I am not going to give you the formula. Home dyeing and bleaching are hazardous. Too risky. Treatments should be given by a specialist.

When women lashed themselves into steel riveted corsets there was a reason for shallow breathing. Not now when the figure is softly bound, has freedom of movement.

A girl is healthier, has a better complexion and wears her clothes more beautifully if she puts up a good front. She won't be able to do that unless she has a well developed chest which is the result of proper breathing and muscular activity.

Five minutes of lung ventilating night and morning will do wonders in course of time. Stand tall, hands on hips. Inhale through the nostrils, lifting the chest and pulling in the abdominal muscles. Exhale through the lips and relax. Repeat forty times.

CREATING AN ILLUSION

SOME OF the neatest caprices in the game are those whereby an opponent is deliberately coaxed into believing the situation entirely different from what it actually is. An odd characteristic of plays involving such a principle is that some of them will work against a fine player and not against a run-of-the-mine one. The truly skilled cardsman will make the logical inferences which cause him to build up a picture of the situation, thereby causing him to fall victim to a trap prepared by a skillful adversary. The non observant, not-thinking, lackadaisical, careless performer, playing his cards almost "any old way," may thwart the finest play of this kind without knowing why.

(Dealer: East. North-South vulnerable.)

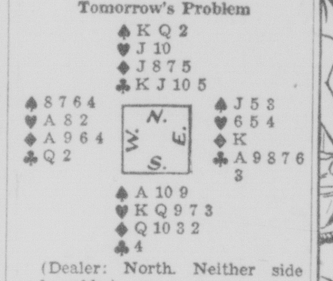

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♦	1 ♥	Dbl
Pass	2 ♦	3 ♣	3 ♥
Pass	4 ♦	Pass	4 ♠
Dble	5 ♦	Pass	6 ♦

West led the club A, then made a bad switch to the heart Q, when he should have led the 6 of the spade suit which had been doubled by his partner. Declarer, of course, won in dummy, then ran four diamonds, West discarding two clubs and a heart.

Clearly the hand depended on prevention of a losing trick in spades. Also the finesse was marked as virtually certain to lose, by East's having doubled that suit. The wily declarer studied a while, then saw a way to create an illusion. He led his spade J to dummy's A and returned the 8. East thought plenty. Finally he counted South as having held a singleton in spades, two hearts, four clubs and six diamonds, and his partner three spades, four hearts, one diamond and five clubs. If that was right, playing his K on the spade 8 would get it ruffed, then the rest of the suit would be good. So he played low on the 8. South then put on the 3, letting the 8 win, and he now discarded his spade 9 on the heart A, clearing his hand of everything except sure winners. Had East been a less skillful card reader, he might have beaten the contract with a careless play of his spade K.

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)

If West leads the spade 4 against South's 3-No Trumps, why should the declarer seek two of his tricks in clubs instead of in diamonds?

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 PINTS A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Kidneys remove excess acids and poisonous waste from your blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Girl Scouts To Present Pageant On the Life of Juliette Low

There will be an important meeting of the Juliette Low group, the Girl Scout Choral Club and registered day campers at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at Girl Scout headquarters, Greene street.

The climax of the day camp will be reached Monday, July 1 with the Juliette Low troop representative attending the day camp assisted by the Girl Scout Choral Club under the direction of Miss Mary Robb. A pageant of the life of Juliette Low will be presented and the work being done by the Red Cross for girl guides and Girl Scouts throughout the war-torn countries with the Juliette Low municipal fund.

Heretofore this fund was used to bring members of the girl guides and Girl Scouts together at the International camp, "The Chalet" at Adelboden, Switzerland, the gift of Mrs. James Storor of Boston, one of the pioneer sponsors of girl scouting in the United States. This is now impossible so in 1940 the money is being used to assist refugee Girl Scouts and guides in their forced exits from their native land. The largest number of refugees are in Devonshire, England, which is in charge of the Polish Boy Scouts executive.

In climax, there are about 50,000 Girl Scouts of tenderfoot ranks. Last year through the association, the American National Red Cross and Madame Chiang-Kai-Shek transmitted $804 in gold ($5,000 in Chinese currency) for the relief of Girl Scouts in the devastated provinces.

Women in charge of the Juliette Low pageant include Mrs. Wyand F. Doerner, Mrs. A. L. Rogers, Mrs. W. L. Ramsey, Mrs. Richard Coulehan, Mrs. Pauline Fisher, Miss Mary Robb, Miss Althea Birchard and Miss Jane Showacker.

Tuesday, June 25 the Day Camp opens on Haystack Mountain with each girl providing her own needs. The last day of camp will be July 1 at the Celanese pool. Registration must be no later than Friday.

If You Boast Coppery Top

Like the thatch of the blonde baby, the coppery girl's hair is apt to darken at the roots as she gets older.

By HELEN FOLLETT

ONE SHADE of hair that is extremely rare and which is considered unusually attractive is the copper colored mop. In strong sunlight, the shafts glitter like copper wires.

Like the thatch of the blonde baby, the coppery girl's hair is likely to darken at the roots as she gets older. Which is a pity. Too bad Mama Nature doesn't give us color guarantees. But much can be done to ward off this change act.

The hair should be shampooed every ten days or every fortnight with a bland soap that has been melted. There should be three soapings and as many rinsings. If soap remains on the hair the gloss will disappear.

Use Lemon Rinse

After the last rinsing, add the strained juice of three lemons to a quart of water, pour over the head again and again. Let it run into a washbowl, and dip it up with a cup. Get a durable permanent so that no setting lotion need be used.

In beauty shops, one can have a touch-up with a mixture of henna and peroxide in proper proportions. No, my friend, I am not going to give you the formula. Home dyeing and bleaching are hazardous. Too risky. Treatments should be given by a specialist.

When women lashed themselves into steel riveted corsets there was a reason for shallow breathing. Not now when the figure is softly bound, has freedom of movement.

A girl is healthier, has a better complexion and wears her clothes more beautifully if she puts up a good front. She won't be able to do that unless she has a well developed chest which is the result of proper breathing and muscular activity.

Five minutes of lung ventilating night and morning will do wonders in course of time. Stand tall, hands on hips. Inhale through the nostrils, lifting the chest and pulling in the abdominal muscles. Exhale through the lips and relax. Repeat forty times.

CREATING AN ILLUSION

SOME OF the neatest caprices in the game are those whereby an opponent is deliberately coaxed into believing the situation entirely different from what it actually is. An odd characteristic of plays involving such a principle is that some of them will work against a fine player and not against a run-of-the-mine one. The truly skilled cardsman will make the logical inferences which cause him to build up a picture of the situation, thereby causing him to fall victim to a trap prepared by a skillful adversary. The non observant, not-thinking, lackadaisical, careless performer, playing his cards almost "any old way," may thwart the finest play of this kind without knowing why.

(Dealer: East. North-South vulnerable.)

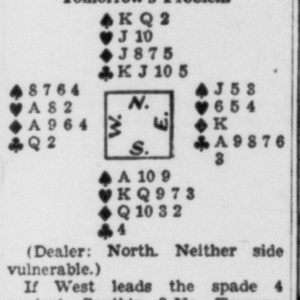

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♦	1 ♥	Dbl
Pass	2 ♦	3 ♣	3 ♥
Pass	4 ♦	Pass	4 ♠
Dble	5 ♦	Pass	6 ♦

West led the club A, then made a bad switch to the heart Q, when he should have led the 6 of the spade suit which had been doubled by his partner. Declarer, of course, won in dummy, then ran four diamonds, West discarding two clubs and a heart.

Clearly the hand depended on prevention of a losing trick in spades. Also the finesse was marked as virtually certain to lose, by East's having doubled that suit. The wily declarer studied a while, then saw a way to create an illusion. He led his spade J to dummy's A and returned the 8. East thought plenty. Finally he counted South as having held a singleton in spades, two hearts, four clubs and six diamonds, and his partner three spades, four hearts, one diamond and five clubs. If that was right, playing his K on the spade 8 would get it ruffed, then the rest of the suit would be good. So he played low on the 8. South then put on the 3, letting the 8 win, and he now discarded his spade 9 on the heart A, clearing his hand of everything except sure winners. Had East been a less skillful card reader, he might have beaten the contract with a careless play of his spade K.

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)

If West leads the spade 4 against South's 3-No Trumps, why should the declarer seek two of his tricks in clubs instead of in diamonds?

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 PINTS A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Kidneys remove excess acids and poisonous waste from your blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

THE DAILY STORY

SURE THING

He Was Unlucky in Everything—Even in His Attempt To End It All; and Then His Luck Changed

By MEVA COCHRAN

Frank Trask perspired copiously while the last dollar of a fat paycheck (acquired two hours previously) found its way into Mr. Mike Correlli's coffers.

This was an old story with Frank—donating his pay to Mr. Correlli. As usual, two little red cubes had bounced around on a green cloth and, as usual, the right numbers didn't come up at the right time.

Frank euphoniously called that "shooting craps."

He pushed his way through the Saturday afternoon crowd and got out of the gambling house. Then he headed for the outskirts of town, determined to carry out a prearranged plan. Frank was leaving home.

To face again the wrath of Sandra, his wife, without his pay, was unthinkable. Sandra's icy contempt for patrons of Mr. Correlli far outweighed any repugnance Frank could feel for his own craven actions as he scurried out of town.

He Jumped To The Cinders

Walking along, scuffing up dust in the hot sun, he regretted too late that he had neglected to get carfare from the "house." Or from Sandra's brother, John, who had been at the same table as himself, apparently winning heavily.

Three hours later Frank hoisted himself stealthily into a boxcar and pulled the door shut. It was dark inside. He had no way of knowing where the train was going. He had been afraid to accost anyone in the railroad yards.

Suddenly, with a jerk that sent him sprawling on the floor, the freight started to move. He got to his feet and steadied himself in the swaying boxcar. He couldn't help feeling excited and fascinated at the prospect of going someplace. But he was irked by a sudden, dawning realization that something was wrong.

In the first place, the train had got under way entirely too rapidly for a long, cross-country freight. In the second place, he heard noises that seemed obviously not to come from the countryside. Frank readily recognized these sounds as the honking of automobile horns and the clanging of streetcar bells.

More in curiosity than apprehension he pulled back the door a little to see what it was all about. The first thing that swam into view was the big electric sign of Ruben's Suburban Theater several blocks away. With a panicky feeling Frank realized that the freight was going back toward town.

His first impulse was to make a jump for it, but the speed of the train vetoed this form of madness. Better wait until it slowed up a bit, he thought. Then hop off and start the long wearisome walk back to the railroad yards.

This gloomy prospect occupied him while the freight rumbled on and the lights of the city loomed brighter in the gathering dusk. Houses with cheerful, glowing windows flashed by in the half-light. He glimpsed through a lighted window, a family at their evening meal.

The scene brought a moist longing to his eyes as he thought of Sandra and little Freddie. They, too, would be sitting down to supper and (horrible thought) he would not be there. Instead, he would be on his way to some distant, unfriendly city. He wondered what they would think—what they would do.

Well, it was gone and no use wishing it back now. But it did seem a little foolish to throw up everything just because of losing $94.00. And poor Sandra and Freddie. How they would worry when he didn't come home.

"I'm a coward! That's what I am—a coward!" he blurted out. Then in a calmer tone of voice he added, "And I'm just about fed up with being a coward." He stood erect and stared belligerently at the darkness.

A little farther on the train slowed down. Frank glued his face to the opening in the door and debated the problem of railroad dicks. He had never been arrested in his life, and didn't especially care to be now. The train stopped and without thinking, he pushed back the door and jumped into the cinders.

In a jiffy he had scrambled from the embankment and was in the street again, directly under a light. The street sign said "Railroad avenue," and he knew then that his bungalow was only a few blocks away.

The front door had creaked, but at least no one had seen him come in. Then the door to the kitchen opened and John, Sandra's brother, stood there.

"Hello, Frank," he said, "just in time for supper."

Sandra was just as casual. In a voice that had no hint of sharpness in it, she said, "Hurry and wash, dear. We're just about to eat. How did you ever get so dirty?"

Frank had a distinct feeling that, for some reason he couldn't fathom, he would have no need for his hastily planned speech to smooth over the loss of his pay.

At a sign from Sandra, John announced, "I won $94 today. Easy pickings at Mike's joint, Frank."

Then Sandra said, "The evening papers say they are going to close up every gambling joint in town within the next 24 hours, so I suppose we might just as well tell him, John." She turned to Frank and explained, "You see, Honey, every time you went to Correlli's place John was there, too, playing for me. You always lost, so John simply made bets exactly opposite to yours. That way we couldn't lose. We practically had a sure thing, Sweetheart."—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

At the Gallery

When visiting a picture gallery, try to be considerate of the "other fellow." If a person is standing at a little distance from a certain picture, trying to get a proper perspective of it, don't plant yourself in front of him or her, close to the picture, blotting out the other's view.

Etiquet Hint

No person of good breeding ever makes disparaging remarks about husband or wife to anyone.

Rude Practice

Men who smoke in elevators are being rude because in such close quarters the smoke is likely to annoy the other occupants and also because there is danger of burning another person or his or her clothes, if the elevator is crowded.

Correct Address

If a man sees a lady drop her glove, he should pick it up and hand it to her, if possible, not say, "Lady, you have dropped your glove." It is not correct to address a woman as "lady," but as "madame."

His first impulse was to make a jump for it, but the speed of the train vetoed this form of madness. Better wait until it slowed up a bit, he thought. Then hop off and start the long wearisome walk back to the railroad yards.

This gloomy prospect occupied him while the freight rumbled on and the lights of the city loomed brighter in the gathering dusk. Houses with cheerful, glowing windows flashed by in the half-light. He glimpsed through a lighted window, a family at their evening meal.

The scene brought a moist longing to his eyes as he thought of Sandra and little Freddie. They, too, would be sitting down to supper and (horrible thought) he would not be there. Instead, he would be on his way to some distant, unfriendly city. He wondered what they would think—what they would do.

Well, it was gone and no use wishing it back now. But it did seem a little foolish to throw up everything just because of losing $94.00. And poor Sandra and Freddie. How they would worry when he didn't come home.

"I'm a coward! That's what I am—a coward!" he blurted out. Then in a calmer tone of voice he added, "And I'm just about fed up with being a coward." He stood erect and stared belligerently at the darkness.

A little farther on the train slowed down. Frank glued his face to the opening in the door and debated the problem of railroad dicks. He had never been arrested in his life, and didn't especially care to be now. The train stopped and without thinking, he pushed back the door and jumped into the cinders.

In a jiffy he had scrambled from the embankment and was in the street again, directly under a light. The street sign said "Railroad avenue," and he knew then that his bungalow was only a few blocks away.

The front door had creaked, but at least no one had seen him come in. Then the door to the kitchen opened and John, Sandra's brother, stood there.

"Hello, Frank," he said, "just in time for supper."

Sandra was just as casual. In a voice that had no hint of sharpness in it, she said, "Hurry and wash, dear. We're just about to eat. How did you ever get so dirty?"

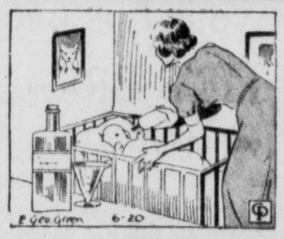

Frank had a distinct feeling that, for some reason he couldn't fathom, he would have no need for his hastily planned speech to smooth over the loss of his pay.

At a sign from Sandra, John announced, "I won $94 today. Easy pickings at Mike's joint, Frank."

Then Sandra said, "The evening papers say they are going to close up every gambling joint in town within the next 24 hours, so I suppose we might just as well tell him, John." She turned to Frank and explained, "You see, Honey, every time you went to Correlli's place John was there, too, playing for me. You always lost, so John simply made bets exactly opposite to yours. That way we couldn't lose. We practically had a sure thing, Sweetheart."—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

At the Gallery

When visiting a picture gallery, try to be considerate of the "other fellow." If a person is standing at a little distance from a certain picture, trying to get a proper perspective of it, don't plant yourself in front of him or her, close to the picture, blotting out the other's view.

Rude Practice

Men who smoke in elevators are being rude because in such close quarters the smoke is likely to annoy the other occupants and also because there is danger of burning another person or his or her clothes, if the elevator is crowded.

Etiquet Hint

No person of good breeding ever makes disparaging remarks about husband or wife to anyone.

Correct Address

If a man sees a lady drop her glove, he should pick it up and hand it to her, if possible, not say, "Lady, you have dropped your glove." It is not correct to address a woman as "lady," but as "madame."

Nazi Papers Comment

But the mood of the Nazis was clear in press comment.

"France won't escape atonement," the Berliner Borsenzeitung bannerlined. "It must bear the consequences of defeat and its politics."

The authoritative editorial service, Dienst Aus Deutschland, emphasized the significance from the German point of view of steps toward French capitulation.

"It cannot be doubted," he said, "that on the German side no reprisal tendencies exist, that on the contrary a historical settlement with our opponent should be undertaken with complete calmness—a settlement in which not only the necessities for continued warfare against England but all questions insuring the future peace of Europe should be considered."

An indication of the direction in which this "continued warfare against England" may develop was seen in the high command's announcement that German battle planes overnight bombarded and set afire oil tanks on the Thames estuary and raided "numerous British airports."

"And now for England!" said Hitler's newspaper, the Volkischer Beobachter.

"Now for the first time the world will experience the interesting spectacle of how the British fight in the open field when they cannot misuse any foreign peoples as a breastwork for attack and as a rear protection for flight."

LEONARDTOWN, Md., June 19 (AP) — St. Mary's county police were searching today for Percy Hopewell, 23, Negro, who escaped from the jail here, where he was being held on a charge of breaking into the Ridge postoffice.

Hopewell was believed headed for his home in the lower part of the county.

Jailer Howard Buckler said the diminutive Negro wormed through a small trap door through which prisoners' food is passed, opened a hall window, made his way to the roof, jumped to the ground and disappeared in the woods.

Serious Developments May Come Out Of Investigation

BALTIMORE, June 19 (AP) — State's Attorney J. Bernard Wells said today information he received from the investigation of the State Industrial Accident Commission involved implications "which might lead to serious developments."

"We are not in any position to send anything to the grand jury yet", the prosecutor asserted.

Charles E. Moylan, Accident Commission chairman, gave Wells new information not included in the report made recently by the governor's Special Investigating committee.

Two conferences were held today by investigating officials but they declined to comment on details of the case. Moylan and Wells conferred and then met with governor in a second conflab.

Governor O'Conor said, "we have assured Mr. Wells that we will give him the fullest cooperation in supplying him with information in connection with present developments or any future developments that may arise."

Plans for Monster Tank Submitted by Engineer

ATLANTA, June 19. (AP)—The Atlanta Constitution says plans for a monster 100-ton tank, more deadly than anything yet designed in mechanical warfare, have been submitted to the United States War department by a Georgia Tech military engineer.

The paper says plans and specifications for the proposed tank, described as a "trench on wheels", were prepared by Major A. A. Casewn associate superintendent of shops at the Georgia School of Technology.

Major Case would not confirm nor deny the Constitution's story.

The paper said the tank would be armed with 75-millimeter cannon, and would carry defensive armor from five to six inches thick. It would be approximately twenty per cent larger than the great Nazi "growlers" now being used in France, the paper continued. Its speed was estimated at "just about equal" to that of the 80-ton German tanks.

their answers were favorable. The other seven are expected to reply by tomorrow.

Meanwhile, the administration's latest move to give material aid to the Allies met with opposition on capitol hill.

Soon after the Navy had announced the release of a score of torpedo and submarine chasing boats to the British, Chairman Walsh D-Mass) of the Senate naval affairs commitee termed the transaction a "grievous wrong, especially to the American youth who may be called upon to fight for the defense of our country."

The Navy said it had changed a contract with the Electric Boat company Groton, Conn., to provide for delay in delivery of twenty such vessels to the United States fleet so that the manufacturer could sell the craft to the Allies.

Senator Byrd (D-Va) said he would ask that the naval committee be given a full explanation of the transaction.

Transaction Approved

Stephen Early, White House press secretry, told reporters that President Roosevelt had approved the transaction inasmuch as torpedoes for the ships could not be ready before late fall. He also said the United States would benefit because of expanded facilities for producing such craft.

In a day replete with defense preparations, these other developments occurred:

1. Chairman Vinson (D-Ga) of the House Naval committee announced that President Roosevelt favored the new $4,000,000,000 naval expansion legislation. After the House Rules committee had paved the way for consideration of the measure tomorrow, Rep. Rayburn (D-Tex.), the Democratic leader, said it might not be considered for some time.

2. The federal communications commission ordered 100,000 commercial and amateur radio operators to prove they are United States citizens.

3. The Senate Appropriations committee approved at $1,777,489,788 emergency defense bill carrying appropriations for various types of arms and other fighting equipment.

4. Louis Johnson, assistant secretary of war, announced reorganization of the Army Industrial college to triple its training of officers in methods of mobilizing industry for defense. The school will function all year with three four-month courses, instead of nine months with a single course.

5. The War Department, through Major Cyrus Q. Shelton, of the army's general staff, contended that formation of a "home defense force" would hamper preparation of a "first line denefse." Shelton testified before the House Military committee in opposition to a bill by Rep. Anderson (D-Mo) creating a defense force, which would accept enlistments of CCC boys and others. Anderson replied that the War department opposed it because "it was not the brain child of some department satelite."

6. Senator Harrison (D-Miss) chairman of the Senate Finance committee predicted during the debate on the $1,007,000,000 emergency tax bill that Congress would receive within thirty days a second revenue measure containing provision for a war profits tax.

7. Members of the National Defense commission were reported to have told the Senate Naval committee that a committee-approved proposal to limit profits of airplane and ship builders to seven per cent might retard production.

8. Secretary Morgenthau disclosed that the French government had made available to the United States the designs for the Hispano-Suiza airplane motor. This followed recent transfer by the British to this country of patent rights on their Rolls-Royce airplane engine. The Ford Motor company will produce the Rolls-Royce motors, but no manufacturer has been chosen to build the Hispano-Suizas.

demand, and that a German-Italian army of occupation probably would go into France to make certain that she had no slightest opportunity to aid England.

(Diplomatic circles in Madrid heard reports that Germany and Italy were demanding unconditional capitulation and the surrender of the French fleet.)

So far as news from the field was concerned it was to the effect that the scattered and broken French armies were continuing resistance wherever possible — fighting on while the cabinet prepared for a last decision—but unsuccessfully in the main against the Nazi engulfing movement.

The possibility that some Frenchmen, at least, might be prepared to continue resistance away from the homeland if they felt it made necessary by the axis terms was seen in a declaration over the French radio that France's maritime communications had been assured in the Western Mediterranean.

This appeared to mean that Algeria was standing fast and that the French might be in position to fight on in North Africa, should a last attempt be made.

(In German-occupied Paris associates of William C. Bullitt, the U. S. ambassador, were understood to have urged him to return to the United States, telling him that he could do more good there than in German-occupied France.

(Three Germans who had known the city well before the war were declared now to be in important posts in the occupying forces. These were: Capt. N. Von Grote, who was Paris director of the official German news service; Otto Abetz, husband of a Frenchwoman, who was expelled in 1939 as a Nazi agent; and Dr. Achenback, secretary of the German embassy in Paris.)

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pints of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It may just decay in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. 10¢ and 25¢. Stubbornly refuse anything else.

Sarazen's 1922 Victory In Open Golf Surprise

In 1922 Gene Sarazen, who was scarcely out of caddy ranks, astonished the golfing world by winning the open. He said at the time that he was twenty-two years old, but actually he was twenty, writes Shirley Povich in "The Washington Post." He couldn't win another open until 1932, but in that year he made golf history by winning both the British and the American.

Patient Training Will Help Save "Incurables"

Humanitarian Trend Is One of Encouraging Things about Medicine

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The humanitarian trend is one of the encouraging things about modern medicine. Not so much startling discoveries or sweeping methods of cure, but the patient application of help. People who twenty-five years ago would have been dismissed or shunted into the general catalogue of incurables, are now being studied and aided by intelligent special groups of workers. They may not be 100 per cent curable, but it has been found that even apparently the most hopeless can be helped and at least given a new viewpoint on life.

One of the most distressing forms of crippling is the so-called spastic paralytic, whose nervous system has been injured at birth so that he cannot coordinate his muscular movements. We see these cripples everywhere, lurching and stumbling along the street, with slurred and unmanageable speech. Mentally they are, in most instances, quite alert, but their plight gives an entirely false impression in this respect.

Training Is Slow

They cannot be entirely cured because nerve cells once destroyed can never be restored, but areas of the nervous system which are still intact can often take up the work of the damaged sections, and be trained to do some of the useful work in life. They have to be trained slowly and carefully to make certain muscular movements and it is found that with this training they often can do so.

In a case of this kind, a mother taught her spastic son to move first one finger and then another. It was slow work, hour after hour. After the fingers she moved to the arms, the toes, and the feet. Eventually she transformed him from an almost helpless, lurching cripple to a human being who had about fifty per cent control over his movements.

Emergencies sometimes cause these people to realize that they have more control over their muscles than they suspect. One boy who was being trained, was taken out in a boat by his father, coaxed into the water and told to swim. He thought at first it was a joke, but his father rowed away and insisted he swim for himself.

Gains Confidence

When he saw the situation was serious he said to himself, "Now is the time to show what your training has done for you" and grimly struck out and swam far enough so that by the time his father decided the lesson had been learned, he had gained confidence in himself and can now swim with pleasure and benefit to himself.

At the Neurologic Institute in New York, a special clinic held for these unfortunates, teaches them slowly to make purposeful movements. They are taught to walk by focusing their vision on a chalk line on the floor or a painted point in the distance. A story related of one case is of a boy who was not able to walk at all until one day the clinic doctor, to his surprise, found him walking pretty well and noticed that he had on white shoes. The way his feet stood out to his eyes taught him how to use them.

Doctor Osler said once that "Most of us walk by faith." A great many cripples have to walk by sight but that is better than not walking at all.

In many faults—stammering, mental defectiveness, hard of hearing—this sort of training is bringing gratifying results.

Questions and Answers

F. D.—"I have heard of the treatment of duodenal ulcer with a series of shots. How successful is this treatment?"

Answer — I presume by "shots" you mean hypodermic injections. The use of injections of non-specific proteins was introduced several years ago but I believe has largely gone out of fashion, and of course the reason it has gone out of fashionn is that it was not as successful as the treatment by diet and neutralization with soda or aluminum hydroxide.

Stocks Hold Steady in Face of Wall Street's Worry over Terms of Peace

Transactions Total 560,350 Shares, Lowest Figure in Two Weeks

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, June 19 (AP)—Stocks held steady today in the face of Wall Street's worry over terms of the Hitler-Mussolini peace dictum.

The market received a degree of stabilization from the rails which generally rose.

The Associated Press average of sixty selected stocks gained .2 of a point at 41.3. Transactions totaled 560,350 shares, the fewest in two weeks, compared with 18,810 yesterday.

Aircrafts took an upward trend.

Gains of major fractions to more than a point were recorded for such leaders as Sante Fe, Southern Railway, Great Northern preferred, Chesapeake & Ohio, Boeing, Glenn Martin, Lockheed, Case, Harvester, Sears Roebuck, Chrysler, American Telephone, Dupont, Allied Chemical, American Can, Loft, Canada Dry, Westinghouse and American Woolen.

In the curb, where only 82,000 shares were traded compared with 109,000 yesterday, advancers included Aluminum of America, Jones and Laughlin Steel, Pennsylvania Water & Power, Humble Oil, and Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea.

Juvenile Find Is Starred at Liberty

Presenting the new juvenile find, John Sheffield, in the title role, RKO Radio's "Little Orvie," brings Booth Tarkington's delightful kid character to the screen of the New Liberty theater starting tomorrow.

The picture is based on the humorous tales about the eight-year-old lad who disrupted the peace of a whole community in his frantic efforts to save a dog.

In Orvie's case, the trouble lies chiefly with his mother, who has no sympathy for his desire to have a dog. Orvie's father is indulgent but unable to do anything about it so when the youngster finds a huge Great Dane waiting for him on the sidewalk one morning, he promptly takes possession of the animal for the day.

But the dog refuses to leave him when he comes home after a hectic day of broken windows and indignant citizens. The homecoming is disastrous and Orvie is ordered to take Tiger to the pound, but on learning that the dog will eventually be electrocuted he resorts to blackmailing the colored maid into keeping Tiger at her home.

The consequences of this move, and the boy's efforts to aid a little girl in disposing of a litter of puppies, make for a conclusion that mixes laughs and tears.

Two More Features Are Billed at Embassy

Another double feature is scheduled for tomorrow at the Embassy theater.

One feature will be "The Arizona Kid," starring Roy Rogers, and the other will be "Amazing Mr. Williams," with Melvyn Douglas and Joan Blondell.

Another chapter of the serial, "The Shadow," will also be offered.

The double bill closing today includes a return showing of "South of the Border" with Gene Autry and Smiley Burnette and "Nick Carter, Master Detective," with Walter Pidgeon and Rita Johnson.

The first episode of the serial, "Drums of Fu Manchu," is also on the bill.

FOUR GOLDEN GATE GIRLS

These attractive young ladies are among the fourteen Golden Gate Girls chorus featured in the stage hit, "Egyptian Follies." This is the Elbern Calvert production which includes the illusion scene in which Hitler is beheaded. It is scheduled for an engagement at the Strand Friday and Saturday.

COMEDY CO-STARS

She writes books in praise of spinsterhood; he is a doctor who hates all career women. But in Columbia's "The Doctor Takes a Wife," co-stars Loretta and Ray Milland are forced to pretend they are married and, eventually, they discover that the title of her book, "Marriage Ain't Measles," is singularly apt! Reginald Gardiner, Gail Patrick, Edmund Gwenn and Georges Metaxa are others in the cast of the Maryland theater attraction opening today.

"The Doctor Takes a Wife," with Loretta Young and Ray Milland starred, now showing at the Maryland theater, is an account of a girl who writes books in praise of spinsterhood and a doctor who believes all women are . . . well, not poison perhaps, but fairly close to it.

In order to continue their careers, this perfectly matched pair of haters are forced by circumstances beyond their control into pretending domestic felicity. They bill and coo in public, they battle and clash in private.

Complicating the lives of this embattled twain are Reginald Gardiner, as Miss Young's somewhat eccentric publisher, who doesn't want to lose his favorite author even if he has to marry her himself, something he would very much like to do, in fact; Gail Patrick, as Ray Milland's financee, who is willing to accept the strange situation in which the doctor finds himself, just so long as the doctor doesn't mind if she goes out with Georges Metaxa, a playboy.

But the doctor does mind. Edmund Gwenn, as Milland's father, adds further excitement to the scene, and further comedy.

Also in the cast are Frank Sully and Gordon Jones, as dim-witted football heroes who regard the doctor as the greatest guy in the world because he pronounced them eligible for the big game of the season.

Twentieth Century-Fox Drama Is at Strand

Don Ameche, Eugenie Leontovich, Beth Hughes, Alan Curtis, George Ernst, Robert Lowery, Lionel Royce and Sig Rumann are featured in "Four Sons" the Twentieth Century Fox film drama which shows for the last times today at the Strand theater.

The picture was produced by Darryl F. Zanuck and has been witnessed by large audiences the past two days.

Entertainment of a different type is promised local theatergoers when "Egyptian Follies" comes to the Strand tomorrow and Saturday.

Currently on a coast-to-coast American tour, following its engagement at the Savoy theater, London, "Egyptian Follies" has been labeled "the show of the year."

Many of the stars and production numbers in "Egyptian Follies" are already known to the American public as a result of news pictures and articles carried in Life, Look, Pic, Variety, The American Weekly and other national publications.

Among the specialties in production numbers featured in "Egyptian Follies" is Lady Godiva's illuminated ride astride a stream-lined stallion and clad only in her golden tresses out over the heads of the audience; the 600-mile an hour human flight of pretty Louise Richter and "Enchanted Egypt."

On the screen will be "Charlie Chan's Murder Cruise," starring Sidney Toler and Marjorie Weaver.

Cesar Romero Makes Debut as Cisco Kid

Making his debut as the Cisco Kid in "The Cisco Kid and the Lady," closing today at the Garden Theatre, Cesar Romero gives an effective performance of the likeable outlaw, suggested by the O'Henry creation. The picture abounds with action and there is plenty of romance. Others in the cast include Virginia Fields, Marjorie Weaver and Gloria Ann White.

Also on the Garden program is the first-run RKO picture, "Everything on Ice," in which the young skating star, Irene Dare, is given every opportunity to prove her prowess on the ice. The cast includes Roscoe Karns, Edgar Kennedy, Lynne Roberts, Eric Linden and Mary Hart.

Magallanes, Chile, is the southernmost city in the world. It was formerly Punta Arenas.

COMEDY CO-STARS

She writes books in praise of spinsterhood; he is a doctor who hates all career women. But in Columbia's "The Doctor Takes a Wife," co-stars Loretta and Ray Milland are forced to pretend they are married and, eventually, they discover that the title of her book, "Marriage Ain't Measles," is singularly apt! Reginald Gardiner, Gail Patrick, Edmund Gwenn and Georges Metaxa are others in the cast of the Maryland theater attraction opening today.

"The Doctor Takes a Wife," with Loretta Young and Ray Milland starred, now showing at the Maryland theater, is an account of a girl who writes books in praise of spinsterhood and a doctor who believes all women are . . . well, not poison perhaps, but fairly close to it.

In order to continue their careers, this perfectly matched pair of haters are forced by circumstances beyond their control into pretending domestic felicity. They bill and coo in public, they battle and clash in private.

Complicating the lives of this embattled twain are Reginald Gardiner, as Miss Young's somewhat eccentric publisher, who doesn't want to lose his favorite author even if he has to marry her himself, something he would very much like to do, in fact; Gail Patrick, as Ray Milland's financee, who is willing to accept the strange situation in which the doctor finds himself, just so long as the doctor doesn't mind if she goes out with Georges Metaxa, a playboy.

But the doctor does mind. Edmund Gwenn, as Milland's father, adds further excitement to the scene, and further comedy.

Also in the cast are Frank Sully and Gordon Jones, as dim-witted football heroes who regard the doctor as the greatest guy in the world because he pronounced them eligible for the big game of the season.

Twentieth Century-Fox Drama Is at Strand

Don Ameche, Eugenie Leontovich, Beth Hughes, Alan Curtis, George Ernst, Robert Lowery, Lionel Royce and Sig Rumann are featured in "Four Sons" the Twentieth Century Fox film drama which shows for the last times today at the Strand theater.

The picture was produced by Darryl F. Zanuck and has been witnessed by large audiences the past two days.

Entertainment of a different type is promised local theatergoers when "Egyptian Follies" comes to the Strand tomorrow and Saturday.

Currently on a coast-to-coast American tour, following its engagement at the Savoy theater, London, "Egyptian Follies" has been labeled "the show of the year."

Many of the stars and production numbers in "Egyptian Follies" are already known to the American public as a result of news pictures and articles carried in Life, Look, Pic, Variety, The American Weekly and other national publications.

Among the specialties in production numbers featured in "Egyptian Follies" is Lady Godiva's illuminated ride astride a stream-lined stallion and clad only in her golden tresses out over the heads of the audience; the 600-mile an hour human flight of pretty Louise Richter and "Enchanted Egypt."

On the screen will be "Charlie Chan's Murder Cruise," starring Sidney Toler and Marjorie Weaver.

Cesar Romero Makes Debut as Cisco Kid

Making his debut as the Cisco Kid in "The Cisco Kid and the Lady," closing today at the Garden Theatre, Cesar Romero gives an effective performance of the likeable outlaw, suggested by the O'Henry creation. The picture abounds with action and there is plenty of romance. Others in the cast include Virginia Fields, Marjorie Weaver and Gloria Ann White.

Also on the Garden program is the first-run RKO picture, "Everything on Ice," in which the young skating star, Irene Dare, is given every opportunity to prove her prowess on the ice. The cast includes Roscoe Karns, Edgar Kennedy, Lynne Roberts, Eric Linden and Mary Hart.

Magallanes, Chile, is the southernmost city in the world. It was formerly Punta Arenas.

Feminine Wiles Face Harsh Test In Battle for 38,000,000 Votes

By SIGRID ARNE

(AP) Feature Service Writer

WASHINGTON — Every trick in the feminine kit will be used this autumn to get out the feminine vote. Both Democrats and Republicans have women's divisions going full tilt, with two handsome women of 40 billed as opposing generals.

Mrs. Thomas McAllister—a slim, vivacious brunette from Michigan—leads the Democrats. She's a veteran of many home-state legislative fights: repeal, minimum wages, unemployment compensation. Married to a judge. Mother of two children.

Miss Marion Martin—a reserved, scholarly, prematurely grayed woman from Maine—leads the Republicans. She's a Phi Beta Kappa and a veteran of two terms each in the Maine Senate and House.

At Stake: 38,000,000 Votes

Statistics burst from both headquarters. They're both after the same cache of new voters; the 8,000,000 who have come of age since 1936 and the 30,000,000 too indifferent to vote in the last presidential election. That will mean a lot of door-bell ringing. But the ladies promise that no door bell will remain unrung by November.

The Democrats have a six-part organization that should send the un-politically minded scurrying for the quiet of the hills. Here it is:

1. The "reporters" — 30,000 of them, to study the Roosevelt program in the local setting.

2. The speakers' bureau — 600 groups of women rehearsing for speeches.

3. Publicity — 1,200 state and county directors.

4. Radio—1,000 state and county radio directors, who rally crowds for fireside chats, write scripts and wangle free time for local programs.

5. The Democratic Women's Digest, a monthly magazine with 27,000 circulation.

6. The Donkey Banks — 80,000 little donkey-shaped banks which gather up the campaign dollars

To tie it all together there are 105,000 precinct workers.

Tea Parties Are Out

The Democrats have held 16 regional two-day conferences since 1936 and wound up recently with an institute in Washington that swamped the hotels with women Democrats.

So much for the energetic, determined Democrats.

Now for the energetic, determined Republicans.

They're rather newly energetic. In 1932 they were giving genteel parties. That still was partly true in 1936. But in '37 the Republican big-wigs invited Marion Martin to come to Washington to needle her sister Republicans into door-bell ringing.

Now no one would presume to suggest that the Republicans got excited about the women's vote because the Democrats did. Not at all. It probably was just spontaneous combustion following two defeats in presidential years. At any rate there will be more Republican women working in this campaign than any year previous.

To begin with they're going to set a precedent by holding a Republican women's convention in late summer. It will be built around the candidate.

The Republicans — and that means Miss Martin—work through a National Federation of Republican Women's clubs. Some 250,000 members pay dues. In return they get a monthly study program for their meetings, reprints of important Republican speeches and digests of Washington's law-making.

The Republicans also have their radio staffs that write skits, their publicity chairmen, their little elephant banks to collect money. But they count heavily on the last day wind-up. On election day they organize into telephone and auto crews to get out the voters.

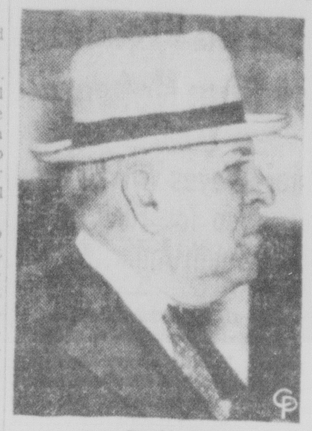

Two Important Votes

Here's how much a single vote can mean. The story comes from Rhode Island Republican headquarters. They phoned one woman who answered sweetly, "Just can't make it today. I'm making jelly. But I'll be down tomorrow." They explained the facts of election day to her. You just vote on one day. Then they sent a jelly-watcher to her house while she was rushed to the voting booth.

The Democrats top that with the West Virginia story of the lady precinct voter who knocked at a mountain shack. The woman of the house was shy. She wanted to go to the polls but couldn't. Why? Well—she just couldn't go to town because she didn't have no step-ins. That was easy. No woman Democrat would lose a vote that easily. The lady vote-getter ripped off her own step-ins, handed them to the mountain woman, piled her into a car and drove her triumphantly to the polls.

That determined Democratic lady is a postmistress now.

BIG NAVY ADVOCATE

Sen. David Walsh

Senator David Walsh of Massachusetts, chairman of the Senate naval affairs committee, leaves the White House after informing the president his committee is doing all in its power to speed up armament production. He said: "Our objective is to get navy yards and arsenals on a three shift basis immediately."

CHAPTER FORTY-ONE

TWO JAY BIRDS, battling desperately for a piece of gristly meat filched from a garbage can, settled on a gable roof near Bill Bailey's window to fight it out. The hour was approximately 6 a. m.

"Squeee-e-e-er, squeeee-e-e-e-er, chirck!" one blue fellow called the other, and apparently it was an ornithological insult. The second bird cursed even louder, squeaking and shrieking to high heaven. Their wings were fluttering and they dived at each other, clattering against the roof and even against the window screen.

"For pete's sake, what the devil's going on?" Bill growled.

They ignored him. Unafraid of man, much, anyway, the jays went on fighting, almost within his arm's reach. He sat up to be a spectator.

They made such an unholy springtime clatter of it that Jeremy Tucker awoke in the next room also. Bill heard Jeremy laugh.

"I'm betting on the blue one!" Bill called.

"I say—see here, they're both blue, Bill!"

"That's what I know. I can't lose."

Wide awake now, the two youths put on robes and house slippers and came out on the broad second-story porch of the mansion, a roofless expanse with banisters and chairs and hammocks, commanding exquisite views around two sides of the house. They talked of the birds, watched them fly garrulously away.

"Grand morning," Bill declared, inhaling prodigiously. "Wouldn't mind fighting myself."

He squared off in a mock attack on Jeremy, jabbing, feinting, ducking, grinning and cutting up like the healthy boy he was. Jeremy responded in kind, albeit, a bit awkwardly.

"You ought to box, Jeremy. Ought to know how. I wish we had some gloves."

"I—I say—ah, there are some. In the attic. Hanging on a nail. Quite dusty, no doubt. Mr. Weems said they were father's."

"Let's go get 'em!"

The gloves were old, none too strong now, but serviceable. Bill showed Jeremy how to get them on, began teaching him the rudiments of self-defense.

"No, when you see a chance to hit—hit! Don't swing in an arc, Jeremy. If you do, your opponent'll dart straight in and smack you down. Hit straight, hard! Like this."

He demonstrated, jarring Jeremy considerably, but not painfully. "Now get the feel of it. Try a quick, hard jab onto my chest. See how it feels."

Jeremy jabbed weakly.

"Come on, man, punch!"

Jeremy let go. It was a good punch this time and Bill was jolted backward, but he took it grinning. "That's the stuff!"

For a half hour they exercised, stamping, stepping, blowing, talking and laughing, and striking at each other as only youths can. Both turned pink from the exertion and the exultation as well. The morning air was cool, the exercise invigorating.

Both of them had dropped lounging robes, skinned off pajama tops, and were boxing naked to the waist. Slap! Smack! Slap-slap! They had no timed rounds, just practice ad lib, with Bill instructing. Then their bodies hit an iron table and overturned it, and all at once they laughed and stopped to blow hard.

"Round two coming up!" a voice called.

They turned to see Gayle, Mr. Merrifield, Mr. Weems and even the butler, staring at them with deep interest. Mr. Merrifield suddenly laughed heartily. Gayle, looking ever so lovely in her powder blue robe, came out and slapped Jeremy lightly on the back.

"You're dripping!" she declared. "Both of you."

"If any boss asked us to work this hard," Bill laughed, "we'd complain to the government."

Gayle observed then that Jeremy was critically embarrassed. She looked at him an instant in surprise. "Oh, I forgot!" she suddenly exclaimed. "You boys aren't dressed! I—I guess I'm not used to being prudish. But—but look, Jeremy, you promised a long time ago to teach me to swim. Meet me at the pool in 10 minutes, will you?"

She ran through the door, and Bill pushed embarrassed Mr. Tucker after her, then waited to talk a while with the older men.

Gayle was at the water edge when Jeremy came there. His swim trunks, dark blue, hid far less of his nakedness than his pajama pants had concealed, but he was more at ease—so strangely inconsistent are human conventions.

Jeremy's concern for himself was suddenly diverted, anyway, by the appearance of Gayle. That devlish young lady had on the new swim suit Bill Bailey had selected for her. She had told no one that Bill chose it; she did not mention that now. She just smiled at Jeremy—and waited.

The suit was extremely becoming on her, because it was white. White, under the straw-to-honey hair which the rubber bathing cap only half concealed.

It clung to her like a mold. Mr. Tucker swallowed. He couldn't quite control his voice, even if he had thought of any satisfactory greeting. He couldn't get his eyes off the bright red rosette which was her suit's sole ornament, a shimmery rose of rubber petals in the center of her breast. It was like a crimson magnet, drawing him. He swallowed again.

"You are still flushed a little from boxing," she said then.

"I—I say—yes! Um huhm!" That was inadequate and he knew it—no way to converse with a beautiful girl.

They walked to the water at the shallow end.

"Do I just hold my breath and jump in, Jeremy? Will you save me if I am about to drown?"

He had no idea how to start teaching her. He couldn't remember how he himself had learned to swim. He decided it best to demonstrate first.

"No," he said, in desperate seriousness. "No, you—I—you crawl like this first. Look, I'll do it in the pool. This is the crawl. It's a good stroke. I—see here, I'll just do it first."

As if in relief from his embarrassment, he turned and dived in. Then he really did swim gracefully, from the nine-foot part of the pool down to the shallow end and back again. He climbed slowly back up the ladder toward her.

"That looked awfully easy, Jeremy. You are a good teacher."

And instantly she, too, dived in. Right into the deepest part.

Jeremy was appalled. He understood that she knew nothing of swimming, and yet she had mistaken his conversation and tried instantly to emulate him! He almost cried out. He was literally too petrified with fear to move; he just stood, stooping a bit, mouth open, staring.

As if she were timed by machinery, however, Gayle came to the surface, struck out down the pool in a perfect crawl, emulating his every move, and making an exact copy of his "demonstration" in the water. She maintained the utmost poise and seriousness. Nor did he speak until she had finished her beautiful swim, climbed the ladder and stood near him again. She bent one knee a little in front of the other, lifted her hands ever so coyly, and looked at him.

"Now, what next, teacher? Will you teach me to dive?"

Only then did Jeremy relax—in a sudden laugh of exasperation.

He reached out to grab her, but she dodged. She ran, and he ran.

She darted, shrieking, through the bushes, with Jeremy in pursuit. She made for the house. Her legs, slender but strong, had the smooth co-ordination to run swiftly, but for once (perhaps for the first time) young Tucker was wrought up. He dug in. He drove his own legs, and half way across the lawn he caught her, but in that moment she tripped and both of them fell and rolled. The grass was clean and wholesome. Both of them lay there and laughed. And in Jeremy Tucker now, there was no whit of embarrassment, nothing of his scholarly reticence.

They sat five minutes in the sunshine and talked, and then they walked, swinging hands together, back to the mansion. They passed Bill Bailey on the porch, spoke and yet seemed hardly to notice him.

Certainly they caught none of the quiet resignation in Bill's dark eyes. Or was it, perhaps, not resignation to fate, but a smouldering jealousy which threatened to slip beyond his control?

It probably was just spontaneous combustion following two defeats in presidential years. At any rate there will be more Republican women working in this campaign than any year previous.

To begin with they're going to set a precedent by holding a Republican women's convention in late summer. It will be built around the candidate.

The Republicans — and that means Miss Martin—work through a National Federation of Republican Women's clubs. Some 250,000 members pay dues. In return they get a monthly study program for their meetings, reprints of important Republican speeches and digests of Washington's law-making.

The Republicans also have their radio staffs that write skits, their publicity chairmen, their little elephant banks to collect money. But they count heavily on the last day wind-up. On election day they organize into telephone and auto crews to get out the voters.

Two Important Votes

Here's how much a single vote can mean. The story comes from Rhode Island Republican headquarters. They phoned one woman who answered sweetly, "Just can't make it today. I'm making jelly. But I'll be down tomorrow." They explained the facts of election day to her. You just vote on one day. Then they sent a jelly-watcher to her house while she was rushed to the voting booth.

The Democrats top that with the West Virginia story of the lady precinct voter who knocked at a mountain shack. The woman of the house was shy. She wanted to go to the polls but couldn't. Why? Well—she just couldn't go to town because she didn't have no step-ins. That was easy. No woman Democrat would lose a vote that easily. The lady vote-getter ripped off her own step-ins, handed them to the mountain woman, piled her into a car and drove her triumphantly to the polls.

That determined Democratic lady is a postmistress now.

CHAPTER FORTY-ONE

TWO JAY BIRDS, battling desperately for a piece of gristly meat filched from a garbage can, settled on a gable roof near Bill Bailey's window to fight it out. The hour was approximately 6 a. m.

"Squeee-e-e-er, squeeee-e-e-e-er, chirck!" one blue fellow called the other, and apparently it was an ornithological insult. The second bird cursed even louder, squeaking and shrieking to high heaven. Their wings were fluttering and they dived at each other, clattering against the roof and even against the window screen.

"For pete's sake, what the devil's going on?" Bill growled.

They ignored him. Unafraid of man, much, anyway, the jays went on fighting, almost within his arm's reach. He sat up to be a spectator.

They made such an unholy springtime clatter of it that Jeremy Tucker awoke in the next room also. Bill heard Jeremy laugh.

"I'm betting on the blue one!" Bill called.

"I say—see here, they're both blue, Bill!"

"That's what I know. I can't lose."

Wide awake now, the two youths put on robes and house slippers and came out on the broad second-story porch of the mansion, a roofless expanse with banisters and chairs and hammocks, commanding exquisite views around two sides of the house. They talked of the birds, watched them fly garrulously away.

"Grand morning," Bill declared, inhaling prodigiously. "Wouldn't mind fighting myself."

He squared off in a mock attack on Jeremy, jabbing, feinting, ducking, grinning and cutting up like the healthy boy he was. Jeremy responded in kind, albeit, a bit awkwardly.

"You ought to box, Jeremy. Ought to know how. I wish we had some gloves."

"I—I say—ah, there are some. In the attic. Hanging on a nail. Quite dusty, no doubt. Mr. Weems said they were father's."

"Let's go get 'em!"

The gloves were old, none too strong now, but serviceable. Bill showed Jeremy how to get them on, began teaching him the rudiments of self-defense.

"No, when you see a chance to hit—hit! Don't swing in an arc, Jeremy. If you do, your opponent'll dart straight in and smack you down. Hit straight, hard! Like this."

He demonstrated, jarring Jeremy considerably, but not painfully. "Now get the feel of it. Try a quick, hard jab onto my chest. See how it feels."

Jeremy jabbed weakly.

"Come on, man, punch!"

Jeremy let go. It was a good punch this time and Bill was jolted backward, but he took it grinning. "That's the stuff!"

For a half hour they exercised, stamping, stepping, blowing, talking and laughing, and striking at each other as only youths can. Both turned pink from the exertion and the exultation as well. The morning air was cool, the exercise invigorating.

Both of them had dropped lounging robes, skinned off pajama tops, and were boxing naked to the waist. Slap! Smack! Slap-slap! They had no timed rounds, just practice ad lib, with Bill instructing. Then their bodies hit an iron table and overturned it, and all at once they laughed and stopped to blow hard.

"Round two coming up!" a voice called.

They turned to see Gayle, Mr. Merrifield, Mr. Weems and even the butler, staring at them with deep interest. Mr. Merrifield suddenly laughed heartily. Gayle, looking ever so lovely in her powder blue robe, came out and slapped Jeremy lightly on the back.

"You're dripping!" she declared. "Both of you."

"If any boss asked us to work this hard," Bill laughed, "we'd complain to the government."

Gayle observed then that Jeremy was critically embarrassed. She looked at him an instant in surprise. "Oh, I forgot!" she suddenly exclaimed. "You boys aren't dressed! I—I guess I'm not used to being prudish. But—but look, Jeremy, you promised a long time ago to teach me to swim. Meet me at the pool in 10 minutes, will you?"

She ran through the door, and Bill pushed embarrassed Mr. Tucker after her, then waited to talk a while with the older men.

Gayle was at the water edge when Jeremy came there. His swim trunks, dark blue, hid far less of his nakedness than his pajama pants had concealed, but he was more at ease—so strangely inconsistent are human conventions.

Jeremy's concern for himself was suddenly diverted, anyway, by the appearance of Gayle. That devlish young lady had on the new swim suit Bill Bailey had selected for her. She had told no one that Bill chose it; she did not mention that now. She just smiled at Jeremy—and waited.

The suit was extremely becoming on her, because it was white. White, under the straw-to-honey hair which the rubber bathing cap only half concealed.

It clung to her like a mold. Mr. Tucker swallowed. He couldn't quite control his voice, even if he had thought of any satisfactory greeting. He couldn't get his eyes off the bright red rosette which was her suit's sole ornament, a shimmery rose of rubber petals in the center of her breast. It was like a crimson magnet, drawing him. He swallowed again.

"You are still flushed a little from boxing," she said then.

"I—I say—yes! Um huhm!" What was inadequate and he knew it—no way to converse with a beautiful girl.

They walked to the water at the shallow end.

"Do I just hold my breath and jump in, Jeremy? Will you save me if I am about to drown?"

He had no idea how to start teaching her. He couldn't remember how he himself had learned to swim. He decided it best to demonstrate first.

"No," he said, in desperate seriousness. "No, you—I—you crawl like this first. Look, I'll do it in the pool. This is the crawl. It's a good stroke. I—see here, I'll just do it first."

As if in relief from his embarrassment, he turned and dived in. Then he really did swim gracefully, from the nine-foot part of the pool down to the shallow end and back again. He climbed slowly back up the ladder toward her.

"That looked awfully easy, Jeremy. You are a good teacher."

And instantly she, too, dived in. Right into the deepest part.

Jeremy was appalled. He understood that she knew nothing of swimming, and yet she had mistaken his conversation and tried instantly to emulate him! He almost cried out. He was literally too petrified with fear to move; he just stood, stooping a bit, mouth open, staring.

As if she were timed by machinery, however, Gayle came to the surface, struck out down the pool in a perfect crawl, emulating his every move, and making an exact copy of his "demonstration" in the water. She maintained the utmost poise and seriousness. Nor did he speak until she had finished her beautiful swim, climbed the ladder and stood near him again. She bent one knee a little in front of the other, lifted her hands ever so coyly, and looked at him.

"Now, what next, teacher? Will you teach me to dive?"

Only then did Jeremy relax—in a sudden laugh of exasperation.

He reached out to grab her, but she dodged. She ran, and he ran.

She darted, shrieking, through the bushes, with Jeremy in pursuit. She made for the house. Her legs, slender but strong, had the smooth co-ordination to run swiftly, but for once (perhaps for the first time) young Tucker was wrought up. He dug in. He drove his own legs, and half way across the lawn he caught her, but in that moment she tripped and both of them fell and rolled. The grass was clean and wholesome. Both of them lay there and laughed. And in Jeremy Tucker now, there was no whit of embarrassment, nothing of his scholarly reticence.

They sat five minutes in the sunshine and talked, and then they walked, swinging hands together, back to the mansion. They passed Bill Bailey on the porch, spoke and yet seemed hardly to notice him.

Certainly they caught none of the quiet resignation in Bill's dark eyes. Or was it, perhaps, not resignation to fate, but a smouldering jealousy which threatened to slip beyond his control?

Guy Named Mike Goes to the Fair And Out-Ziegfelds Billy Rose

By TOBY WIANT
AP Feature Service Writer

NEW YORK—A year ago, Michael Todd was just a guy named Mike. Now he's the World's Fair amusement king—producer of four big attractions, compared with Billy Rose's two.

Huge signs proclaim "Michael Todd's Streets of Paris" (condensed version of last season's Broadway success) . . . "Michael Todd's Gay New Orleans" (huge village with three smooth revues) . . . "Michael Todd's Dancing Campus (jitterbugs' paradise) . . . "Michael Todd's Opry House" (streamlined meller-drammers).

One of Eight

Who is this one-man blitzkrieg? Nobody in the Broadway haunts knew the answers, so I called on Todd.

I saw a determined-jawed, husky, young (32) man, dressed like an oldish college boy, sweater instead of a vest and all that. He stuck out his hand, midwestern style, and blurted, "Glad-ta-meecha."

I pryed this out of him:

Born at Minneapolis, one of eight children; he didn't go to school any more than he had to; never went to college; landed a job in the building trades and worked in Chicago and California; "posed" as a sound studio construction expert, got away with it and made a "pile"—but "dropped it"; decided to "nail" some of the entertainment business's "easy money."

Came east five years ago, wrote gags for Olsen and Johnson; made enough money to "buy a piece" of the "Hot Mikado," staged at the fair last summer; collected enough from that to spread out this summer.

He has 800 employes and a $40,000 weekly pay roll, but rarely has enough coin on his person to pay for a shine—too busy to go to the bank.

Two Slices A Day

"I've put all of my dough into these shows," he told me. "If they click (and they have so far), I'm in the money. If they don't, I'll be back on two slices a day.

"I'm having a lot of fun. The minute it stops being fun I'll quit. I'd rather make two bits pleasantly than a buck unpleasantly.

"People are smart these days. There are very few suckers left. People are looking for bargains, and if you give them what they want, they'll be happy—and you'll make a lot of money."

He plans to do a Broadway musical this fall "while resting up from the fair!"

TODAY'S GARDENGRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY
(Distributed by Central Press Association)

Euonymous vines, shrubs or trees are usually grown for their showy fruits. Other species of the euonymous are prized for their evergreen foliage. The flowers of the euonymous, which bloom well into June, are rather inconspicuous.

Euonymous alatus is one of the most distinctive and finest Autumn shrubs for foliage effects. It is unique for its cork-barked, or cork-winged bark, illustrated in the Garden-Graph.

In the Autumn the leaves of this euonymous turn pink and crimson. After the foliage drops, the shrub's brightly-colored berries make a showy display.

Euonymous is not particular in regard to soil or exposure and will grow well in shade. The fact that it holds its colored berries long into the cold months also makes it a desirable shrub for Fall and Winter color.

Kansas farms sold products and bought farm supplies worth $69,000,000 through co-operative organizations in the 1937-38 crop year.

Guy Named Mike Goes to the Fair And Out-Ziegfelds Billy Rose

By TOBY WIANT
AP Feature Service Writer

NEW YORK—A year ago, Michael Todd was just a guy named Mike. Now he's the World's Fair amusement king—producer of four big attractions, compared with Billy Rose's two.

Huge signs proclaim "Michael Todd's Streets of Paris" (condensed version of last season's Broadway success) . . . "Michael Todd's Gay New Orleans" (huge village with three smooth revues) . . . "Michael Todd's Dancing Campus (jitterbugs' paradise) . . . "Michael Todd's Op'ry House" (streamlined meller-drammers).

One of Eight

Who is this one-man blitzkrieg? Nobody in the Broadway haunts knew the answers, so I called on Todd.

I saw a determined-jawed, husky, young (32) man, dressed like an oldish college boy, sweater instead of a vest and all that. He stuck out his hand, midwestern style, and blurted, "Glad-ta-meecha."

I pryed this out of him:

Born at Minneapolis, one of eight children; he didn't go to school any more than he had to; never went to college; landed a job in the building trades and worked in Chicago and California; "posed" as a sound studio construction expert, got away with it and made a "pile"—but "dropped it"; decided to "nail" some of the entertainment business's "easy money."

Came east five years ago, wrote gags for Olsen and Johnson; made enough money to "buy a piece" of the "Hot Mikado," staged at the fair last summer; collected enough from that to spread out this summer.

He has 800 employes and a $40,000 weekly pay roll, but rarely has enough coin on his person to pay for a shine—too busy to go to the bank.

Two Slices A Day

"I've put all of my dough into these shows," he told me. "If they click (and they have so far), I'm in the money. If they don't, I'll be back on two slices a day.

"I'm having a lot of fun. The minute it stops being fun I'll quit. I'd rather make two bits pleasantly than a buck unpleasantly.

"People are smart these days. There are very few suckers left. People are looking for bargains, and if you give them what they want, they'll be happy—and you'll make a lot of money."

He plans to do a Broadway musical this fall "while resting up from the fair!"

TODAY'S GARDENGRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY
(Distributed by Central Press Association)

Euonymous vines, shrubs or trees are usually grown for their showy fruits. Other species of the euonymous are prized for their evergreen foliage. The flowers of the euonymous, which bloom well into June, are rather inconspicuous.

Euonymous alatus is one of the most distinctive and finest Autumn shrubs for foliage effects. It is unique for its cork-barked, or cork-winged bark, illustrated in the Garden-Graph.

In the Autumn the leaves of this euonymous turn pink and crimson. After the foliage drops, the shrub's brightly-colored berries make a showy display.

Euonymous is not particular in regard to soil or exposure and will grow well in shade. The fact that it holds its colored berries long into the cold months also makes it a desirable shrub for Fall and Winter color.

Kansas farms sold products and bought farm supplies worth $69,000,000 through co-operative organizations in the 1937-38 crop year.

Persons Suspecting Espionage Should Notify F.B.I.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 19 Persons suspecting espionage, sabotage or any violation of neutrality regulations should exercise restraint to protect the rights of "loyal and innocent citizens," Ernest L. Bailey said today.

The state director for the office of governments reports urged, however, that any suspicions of "Fifth Column" activities be reported to the nearest Federal Bureau of Investigation office.

His statement was issued after advices were received from the Department of Justice, whose duties in national defense were outlined by the president in a statement issued September 6, 1939.

At that time, Mr. Roosevelt directed the FBI to take charge of investigative work in "matters relating to espionage, sabotage and violations of the neutrality regulations." He also requested all law enforcement officers to cooperate.

The FBI district headquarters are in Huntington.

Agreement Reached On Ferry Squabble

BRUNSWICK, Md., June 19 (AP)—A delegation of Brunswick citizens reported today after a conference with the State Roads commission in Baltimore that a tentative agreement had been reached for operation of a toll-free passenger ferry across the Potomac river here.

The ferry would remain in operation for ninety days, pending completion of repair work which forced the closing of the Brunswick bridge.

Spokesmen for merchants here told the commission that thirty or thirty-five per cent of Brunswick's business came from Virginia citizens using the bridge. If that trade were cut off for ninety days, they asserted, it might be permanently rerouted into Leesburg and Charles Town, W. Va.

The commission agreed to make a formal offer to Brunswick authorities to provide a boat and all needed equipment for a passenger ferry, provided the town would finance its operation.

The ferry contemplated would be a flat-bottomed shallow-draft boat, guided by cables and powered by an outboard motor. Virginians coming to Brunswick would park their automobiles on the Virginia shore and cross in the ferry.

One of Two Escaped Convicts Is Captured by Officers Near Keyser

KEYSER, W. Va., June 19.—One of two escaped convicts was nabbed here last night, and the other was expected to be recaptured soon by state police and prison camp guards surrounding a mountain along New Creek about two miles south of Keyser where he is thought to be hiding.

Robert Queen, 24, Richwood, was captured on the "cut-off" road at the top of Knobley mountain, about seven miles south of here, last night by State Police Corporal Paul Vassar, Charleston, Trooper L. W. Kelly and Constable L. O. Kesner.

Queen, in company with Walter Worthy, 22, Marshall county, escaped last Friday afternoon from a road gang near Baker, Hardy county. A guard from armed camp number 73, at Baker, said the two men suddenly broke for the brush at 3:15 Friday afternoon. He said it was impossible to shoot at them, as his line of fire was blocked by a passing road truck and another group of convicts.

A pair of men whose actions were "suspicious" had been reported to police here yesterday afternoon by D. A. Arnold, who lives at the top of Knobley mountain on Route 50. Arnold said the two left the road and hid every time an automobile approached.

Queen had just been given food at the home of County Superintendent of Schools Paul C. Rouzer, on the "cut-off" road, when he was apprehended at nine o'clock. Mrs. Rouzer said the man had come to the door asking for something to eat. She gave him food and asked him to leave, she said.

The men had been traced as far as Moorefield Junction on Route 50, about seventeen miles east of here, where they were reported to have broken into the store of Charles High Sunday night and had taken clothes and pocket knives. Saturday night they broke into a store owned by Roy Corbin, near Romney, and stole food and cigarettes.

Queen, who spent last night in the Mineral county jail here, was returned to the camp at Baker this afternoon in the custody of prison guards Mark M. Hill and Abe Grubbs. He will be taken back to the penitentiary at Moundsville tomorrow, the guards said.

Jailer F. G. Davis said Queen showed no ill effects from his five-day flight through the mountains. He said the prisoner asked for something to eat the first thing.

Queen was committed two years ago to serve an eight-year sentence for robbery, and Worthy began a sentence of from one to ten years last February for automobile theft.

Agreement Reached On Ferry Squabble

BRUNSWICK, Md., June 19 (AP)—A delegation of Brunswick citizens reported today after a conference with the State Roads commission in Baltimore that a tentative agreement had been reached for operation of a toll-free passenger ferry across the Potomac river here.

The ferry would remain in operation for ninety days, pending completion of repair work which forced the closing of the Brunswick bridge.

Spokesmen for merchants here told the commission that thirty or thirty-five per cent of Brunswick's business came from Virginia citizens using the bridge. If that trade were cut off for ninety days, they asserted, it might be permanently rerouted into Leesburg and Charles Town, W. Va.

The commission agreed to make a formal offer to Brunswick authorities to provide a boat and all needed equipment for a passenger ferry, provided the town would finance its operation.

The ferry contemplated would be a flat-bottomed shallow-draft boat, guided by cables and powered by an outboard motor. Virginians coming to Brunswick would park their automobiles on the Virginia shore and cross in the ferry.

High Waters Blamed for Four Deaths in West Virginia

Mother and Two Year Old Child Drown in Creek

Two Brothers Die in Elk River as Rains Send Streams on Rampage

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 19 (AP)—A young mother, her two-year-old son and two teen-aged boys were listed as victims of high waters today while drenching showers in Southern West Virginia sent small streams to flood stages.

From the Great Kanawha river south, streams were high as a result of two days of rain. Creeks in some sections were out of their banks and threatening damage to lowland property.

Mrs. Mary Smith, 19, fell from a narrow wooden footbridge near Logan and carried with her into swollen Dingess creek her two-year-old son, Everett Lee.

Searchers from Clendenin dragged the Elk river near Birch Run for the body of 14-year-old Jack Jenkins, who fell from a boat and drowned last night.

The body of Earl Jenkins, 16, who despite his inability to swim tried to save his younger brother, was recovered early today.

The boys were in a boat at a spot ordinarily used as a swimming place. The beach, however, was under ten feet of water.

R. A. Jenkins, father of the boys, also unable to swim, was rescued from the swollen river by neighbors after he had dived into the water in a despairing gesture toward saving his sons.

Mrs. Smith, wife of a miner at MacBeth, Logan county, had started home after visiting the home of her brother in Freeze Fork.

Raymond Bradley saw her fall from the bridge. He reached the child a few minutes later but the baby died shortly after reaching the shore.

Mrs. Smith's body was recovered three hours later at a point where the creek passes through a Logan suburb. Mrs. Smith, mother of another child, had been married six years.

Almost three inches of rain fell in twenty-four hours in Logan county.

Dingess creek, Main Island creek and others were out of their banks although there was no indication the Guyan river would reach flood stage.

Pytlak Leaves Cleveland and Goes Fishing

CLEVELAND, June 19 (AP) — Frankie Pytlak, mite Cleveland Indians' catcher who unexpectedly went home to Buffalo last night because "I don't seem to be feeling well," apparently has decided on a fishing cure.

Buffalo scribes who went to see Pytlak today located him in a fishing boat. From that wobbly point, he declared he expected to spend the remainder of the baseball season at home "because of my health."

Physicians who examined the 31-year old catcher here found nothing wrong with him, declared C. C. Slapnicka, Indians' vice president. But Frankie, as he has done before, went home anyhow, leaving only Rollie Hemsley to handle the catching duties. Henry Helf, third-stringer, is in a hospital.

Pytlak described his ailment as "upset nerves and in general, I don't seem to be feeling well." He said he hoped to return to baseball next year, but would not say as to whether he wants to rejoin the Indians.

Bill Swing Wins W. Va. Golf Open

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 19 (AP)—Climaxing 12 years of effort, lanky Bill Swing, pro of the Guyan Country club here, won the West Virginia Open Golf Championship today.

Playing over his home course, Swing put together a spectacular 33 for his afternoon round with a 39 carded in the forenoon for a final total of 293.

Just two strokes off the pace in the nip and tuck battle came Arnold Browning, assistant pro at Guyan. Browning set the forenoon pace but his putting faltered on the home stretch.

Larry Wiechman, assistant pro at the Logan Country Club, who was tied with Swing and Browning with 144 after yesterday's 36 holes, finished in a tie for third place with Johnny Javins, of the Southmoor Country Club, Charleston. Both had cards of 296.

In the amateur ranks, Perry T. Taylor, of Huntington, posted a 76-76-82-76—309 score to gain possession of the A. F. Thompson trophy. His victory came only on the 19th hole of a playoff with Steve Jupinko, the Moundsville machinist. On that extra hole, Taylor holed a tough putt for a four and victory. Billy Campbell, also of Huntington, finished third among the amateurs after a decidedly low start.

Campbell, a 17-year old preparatory school student, was in a five-way tie with Ward Wilkinson, of Huntington; Braxton Davenport, E. E. Jones and Roy Blizzard, all of Charleston, at the end of the 72-hole match play. All had 310's. A toss of a coin decided the winner.

CHICAGO, June 19 (AP)—Robert Riggs and Alice Marble came through victorious again today in the national clay courts championships.

Riggs, top seeded in the men's division, disposed of Max Davidson of Chicago, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, 7-5 in the third round of the men's singles. Paired with Charles Hare of England, he also hurdled the first round in the doubles competition. The two defeated Harris Everett and Aleo Guerry of Chapel Hill, N. C., 7-5, 6-1, 6-2.

Meantime, Miss Marble reached the women's singles semi-finals with a 7-5, 6-3 victory over Mary Arnold of Los Angeles, her doubles partner.

The only dent in the seeded ranks resulted from Everett's victory over Henry Prusoff of Seattle. Prusoff, who was seventh in the rankings, lost 7-5, 6-3, 6-3.

Frank Parker of Pasadena, defending champion in the singles, erased his fellow townsman, David Freeman, 6-2, 7-5, 6-2; Don McNeill of Kenyon College eliminated another Californian, Jack Kramer, 6-1, 6-4, 8-6; Bryan Grant of Atlanta was forced into a 24-game set with Jimmy Evert of Chicago before emerging victor, 6-3, 6-3, 11-13, 6-2.

Garner Mulloy of Coral Gables, Fla., went four sets to defeat Robert Peacock of Los Angeles, but the third-seeded Welby Van Horn of Los Angeles, had the most difficult siege. He finally turned back Chicago's Gardner Larned, 1-6, 6-4, 7-5, 4-6, 6-4.

Browns in Uphill Win over Boston

ST. LOUIS, June 19. (AP)—Yes, believe it or not, the Browns beat the Red Sox again today, and they did it the hard way.

Overcoming a 4-run handicap, the fighting Brownies scored runs in bursts of two and passed the league leaders, 6 to 4, for their second victory over Boston and their fourth in a row. They took a doubleheader from the Yankees before the Red Sox came to town.

Walter Judnich, the young outfielder whom the Browns obtained from the Yankee chain, and Roxie Lawson, former Detroit pitcher, were the men of the hour in the Browns' victory.

The Red Sox had teed off against Bob Harris, who started for St. Louis, getting three triples, two doubles and two singles for four runs before Manager Fred Haney decided it wasn't Harris's day. Lou Finney hit two of the triples and Bobby Doerr got the other.

Lawson then went in to pitch and he held the powerful Boston bats in check while his teammates, Judnich in particular, began working on Herb Hash.

In the fourth inning Judnich came up with Harland Clift on base and drove out his seventh home run of the season. The Browns loaded the bases in the fifth on Roy Cullenbine's single, Rip Radcliff's double and Clift's base on balls. Judnich came through with a single, scoring two more runs.

High Waters Blamed for Four Deaths in West Virginia

Mother and Two Year Old Child Drown in Creek

Two Brothers Die in Elk River as Rains Send Streams on Rampage

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 19 (AP)—A young mother, her two-year-old son and two teen-aged boys were listed as victims of high waters today while drenching showers in Southern West Virginia sent small streams to flood stages.

From the Great Kanawha river south, streams were high as a result of two days of rain. Creeks in some sections were out of their banks and threatening damage to lowland property.

Mrs. Mary Smith, 19, fell from a narrow wooden footbridge near Logan and carried with her into swollen Dingess creek her two-year-old son, Everett Lee.

Searchers from Clendenin dragged the Elk river near Birch Run for the body of 14-year-old Jack Jenkins, who fell from a boat and drowned last night.

The body of Earl Jenkins, 16, who despite his inability to swim tried to save his younger brother, was recovered early today.

The boys were in a boat at a spot ordinarily used as a swimming place. The beach, however, was under ten feet of water.

R. A. Jenkins, father of the boys, also unable to swim, was rescued from the swollen river by neighbors after he had dived into the water in a despairing gesture toward saving his sons.

Mrs. Smith, wife of a miner at MacBeth, Logan county, had started home after visiting the home of her brother in Freeze Fork.

Raymond Bradley saw her fall from the bridge. He reached the child a few minutes later but the baby died shortly after reaching the shore.

Mrs. Smith's body was recovered three hours later at a point where the creek passes through a Logan suburb. Mrs. Smith, mother of another child, had been married six years.

Almost three inches of rain fell in twenty-four hours in Logan county.

Dingess creek, Main Island creek and others were out of their banks, although there was no indication the Guyan river would reach flood stage.

Pytlak Leaves Cleveland and Goes Fishing

CLEVELAND, June 19 (AP)—Frankie Pytlak, mite Cleveland Indians' catcher who unexpectedly went home to Buffalo last night because "I don't seem to be feeling well," apparently has decided on a fishing cure.

Buffalo scribes who went to see Pytlak today located him in a fishing boat. From that wobbly point, he declared he expected to spend the remainder of the baseball season at home "because of my health."

Physicians who examined the 31-year old catcher here found nothing wrong with him, declared C. C. Slapnicka, Indians' vice president. But Frankie, as he has done before, went home anyhow, leaving only Rollie Hemsley to handle the catching duties. Henry Helf, third-stringer, is in a hospital.

Pytlak described his ailment as "upset nerves and in general, I don't seem to be feeling well." He said he hoped to return to baseball next year, but would not say as to whether he wants to rejoin the Indians.

Bill Swing Wins W. Va. Golf Open

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 19 (AP)—Climaxing 12 years of effort, lanky Bill Swing, pro of the Guyan Country club here, won the West Virginia Open Golf Championship today.

Playing over his home course, Swing put together a spectacular 33 for his afternoon round with a 39 carded in the forenoon for a final total of 293.

Just two strokes off the pace in the nip and tuck battle came Arnold Browning, assistant pro at Guyan. Browning set the forenoon pace but his putting faltered on the home stretch.

Larry Wiechman, assistant pro at the Logan Country Club, who was tied with Swing and Browning with 144 after yesterday's 36 holes, finished in a tie for third place with Johnny Javins, of the Southmoor Country Club, Charleston. Both had cards of 296.

In the amateur ranks, Perry T. Taylor, of Huntington, posted a 76-76-82-76—309 score to gain possession of the A. F. Thompson trophy. His victory came only on the 19th hole of a playoff with Steve Jupinko, the Moundsville machinist. On that extra hole, Taylor holed a tough putt for a four and victory. Billy Campbell, also of Huntington, finished third among the amateurs after a decidedly low start.

Campbell, a 17-year old preparatory school student, was in a five-way tie with Ward Wilkinson, of Huntington; Braxton Davenport, E. E. Jones and Roy Blizzard, all of Charleston, at the end of the 72-hole match play. All had 310's. A toss of a coin decided the winner.

Riggs and Marble Win In National Clay Court Tennis Tournament

CHICAGO, June 19 (AP)—Robert Riggs and Alice Marble came through victorious again today in the national clay courts championships.

Riggs, top seeded in the men's division, disposed of Max Davidson of Chicago, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, 7-5 in the third round of the men's singles. Paired with Charles Hare of England, he also hurdled the first round in the doubles competition. The two defeated Harris Everett and Aleo Guerry of Chapel Hill, N. C., 7-5, 6-1, 6-2.

Meantime, Miss Marble reached the women's singles semi-finals with a 7-5, 6-3 victory over Mary Arnold of Los Angeles, her doubles partner.

The only dent in the seeded ranks resulted from Everett's victory over Henry Prusoff of Seattle. Prusoff, who was seventh in the rankings, lost 7-5, 6-3, 6-3.

Frank Parker of Pasadena, defending champion in the singles, erased his fellow townsman, David Freeman, 6-2, 7-5, 6-2; Don McNeill of Kenyon College eliminated another Californian, Jack Kramer, 6-1, 6-4, 8-6; Bryan Grant of Atlanta was forced into a 24-game set with Jimmy Evert of Chicago before emerging victor, 6-3, 6-3, 11-13, 6-2.

Garner Mulloy of Coral Gables, Fla., went four sets to defeat Robert Peacock of Los Angeles, but the third-seeded Welby Van Horn of Los Angeles, had the most difficult siege. He finally turned back Chicago's Gardner Larned, 1-6, 6-4, 7-5, 4-6, 6-4.

Browns in Uphill Win over Boston

ST. LOUIS, June 19. (AP)—Yes, believe it or not, the Browns beat the Red Sox again today, and they did it the hard way.

Overcoming a 4-run handicap, the fighting Brownies scored runs in bursts of two and passed the league leaders, 6 to 4, for their second victory over Boston and their fourth in a row. They took a doubleheader from the Yankees before the Red Sox came to town.

Walter Judnich, the young outfielder whom the Browns obtained from the Yankee chain, and Roxie Lawson, former Detroit pitcher, were the men of the hour in the Browns' victory.

The Red Sox had teed off against Bob Harris, who started for St. Louis, getting three triples, two doubles and two singles for four runs before Manager Fred Haney decided it wasn't Harris's day. Lou Finney hit two of the triples and Bobby Doerr got the other.

Lawson then went in to pitch and he held the powerful Boston bats in check while his teammates, Judnich in particular, began working on Herb Hash.

In the fourth inning Judnich came up with Harland Clift on base and drove out his seventh home run of the season. The Browns loaded the bases in the fifth on Roy Cullenbine's single, Rip Radcliff's double and Clift's base on balls. Judnich came through with a single, scoring two more runs.

DICK TRACY—Short Change Shorty

Fashions Should Be Pretty and Not Just Smart

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The dictionary defines the dowager, among other things, as an "elderly woman of dignity."

In this stage of the world's history—we can hardly call it "development", the way things are going in Europe—there are admittedly no elderly women. Beauty parlors, beauty columnists, face-lifters, no-older-than-you-feel philosophies, and religions claiming that age is a state of mind have eliminated the elderly woman.

But you can't do away with the older woman, no matter how hard you try. When she attends a fashion show and sees a charming young mannikin pirouetting in a hoopskirted gown, if she's sensible, she'll murmur to herself, "Not for me." Those lovely bouffant affairs that add to the witchery of Sweet and Twenty are not for the older woman, unless she is doing penance for her former sins.

When Bulges, Come

They make the birthdays sing out; they add to the general tubbiness which is apt to accumulate layer upon layer after fifty. That cruel bulginess which comes in spite of dieting, rolling and the gym. Chins bulge, chests bulge, stomachs bulge, then why in the name of goodness add a bulging skirt?

You'll tell me women don't care how they look as long as they're in style. I'll grant you the hats we've been wearing for the past three years carry out your argument, but brims are back again, thank goodness—becoming alike to dowagers and debutantes.

Mrs. Roosevelt, always suitably and becomingly dressed, without a suggestion of the prevailing grotesquerie in hats, skirts, shoes or anything else, reminded women to cultivate taste when she opened the New York Fair's Fashion World.

Pretty, Not Smart

Fashions should be pretty and not just smart, and made available to all women in America, Mrs. Roosevelt reminded her hearers, after she had cut the red, white and blue rope across the building's silver doors. And she went on to say:

"This exhibit should show what you can do with taste, even if you haven't much money. Women must decide whether fashion is really becoming before they definitely adopt it, since it is going to reach down to every group of American women."

The highly unbecoming styles women have adopted for the past few years brings up that old question, Do women dress to please men, or to keep up with other women?

It would seem to be the latter, since the men have made untold fun of our hats, slacks and brief skirts.

The men, bless 'em, sighed with pleasure when "Gone with the Wind" brought back the billowing skirt,—but, alas! that's the thing the older woman may go in for only at her peril.

Can't Give Things She Deserved

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I met a very charming girl about two years ago. I took her out several times and decided I had better break with her, as I didn't have enough money to do the things for her which she deserved.

After I had been away for about a year, I realized I cared a great deal for her. She went out with other men, which is only natural for a girl when a man breaks off with her. While I was away I sent her a Christmas present, for which she thanked me, asking me to write to her.

Just before I returned home she met a young man I know, of whom her parents do not approve, and she wants me to arrange a date for her with him. She knows she shouldn't see him, but I'm sure she cares a little for him. She means everything to me, but I have so little to offer her that I don't know what to do. Please advise me. I am 28 and she is 25.

F.

I should not be the go-between in this case, if I were you. Her family disapproves of the other man, and in arranging meetings you are betraying their confidence in you. She must have some interest in you, or she wouldn't have taken you back after you broke up. Let her see she has a friend in you, and try hard to get ahead so you will have more to offer her. Take up a course in Vocational Training or Adult Education, which will give you a chance to advance yourself, thus earning more money. You have youth, which in itself is capital. My best wishes to you.

Didn't Keep Promise

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A certain young man has been dating me, and we always had good times together. He made a date with me to come over a week ago, and never showed up—didn't even telephone me. As he lives near me, I see him almost every day, but have acted coolly. He hasn't made any explanation as yet. What should I do, as I am very much interested in him?

WONDERING.

He's old enough to know better than break a date and make no explanation or apology of any sort. I don't blame you for acting coolly, and I'd give the young man the same temperature treatment until he does the right thing in the way of explaining his action.

Stop Your Quarreling

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been married ten years, and we have three lovely children. I am 30 years old; my husband is 35. After we were married a year or so, I discovered that I never really loved my husband; but as time goes on, I find myself staying with him just for the sake of the children. It seems to me we do nothing but fight until it is almost unbearable. Would you advise me to leave him?

UNHAPPY MOTHER.

Nothing could be worse for children than the effect of squabbling and fussing going on before them. It would almost be better that a home be broken up—and that is always the last resource—than that a child's first years should be filled with the memories of quarreling parents.

Why don't you stop quarreling? You know it takes two to fight, so why not make up your mind to be the silent partner in these rows? Think of your children—surely, they are entitled to a normal home where they may develop, instead of one where there is constant wrangling. Make things pleasant for them.

Tied to Mother's Apron Strings

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Girls often make fun of me for being so devoted to my mother. They say I'm tied to her apron-strings, and that isn't so at all. My father died when I was a baby, and mother has gone through a great deal to raise me, and I want to be grateful. I take her out to the movies once or twice a week, and to concerts.

But I really don't care whether the girls kid me about this or not. I'm not going to wait until it's too late, and then regret I didn't give mother most of my time.

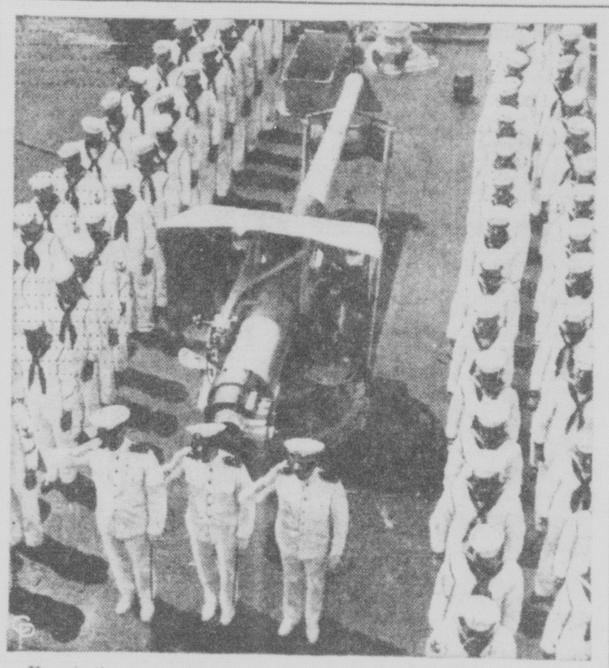

Then, too, the modern girl is too fast for me. I like the out-of-door type, and a home girl—one who knows something about running a home and can cook without resorting to the can-opener. I intend to wait until I meet the right one.

GENE.

The girl who lands you as a husband should be congratulated. Also, the hopes of a good many girls who write and say that men are no longer interested in sensible girls should be re-awakened upon reading your letter.

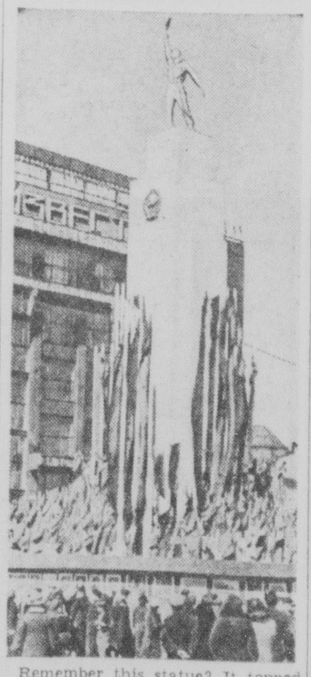

It is popularly supposed that the gold resources of Alaska have been pretty well exhausted. Recently, however, a Harvard explorer reported discovery of a "lost world" of minerals, probably including gold, under 2,000 feet of ice.

ANOTHER UNIT FOR U. S. DEFENSE

Here is the scene aboard the William B. Preston, naval aircraft tender, at Brooklyn Navy Yard, during recommissioning ceremonies. Sailors and ship's oficers salute as the flag is raised, officially adding the craft to Uncle Sam's growing line of defense.

BACK IN MOSCOW

Remember this statue? It topped the U. S. S. R. pavilion at the New York World's Fair in 1939. Russia having removed its Fair building and exhibit, the statue now looks out over Moscow from Pushkin Square. Building in background houses "Izvestia," Soviet newspaper.

I am 28 and she is 25.

F.

I should not be the go-between in this case, if I were you. Her family disapproves of the other man, and in arranging meetings you are betraying their confidence in you. She must have some interest in you, or she wouldn't have taken you back after you broke up. Let her see she has a friend in you, and try hard to get ahead so you will have more to offer her. Take up a course in Vocational Training or Adult Education, which will give you a chance to advance yourself, thus earning more money. You have youth, which in itself is capital. My best wishes to you.

Didn't Keep Promise

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A certain young man has been dating me, and we always had good times together. He made a date with me to come over a week ago, and never showed up—didn't even telephone me. As he lives near me, I see him almost every day, but have acted coolly. He hasn't made any explanation as yet. What should I do, as I am very much interested in him?

WONDERING.

He's old enough to know better than break a date and make no explanation or apology of any sort. I don't blame you for acting coolly, and I'd give the young man the same temperature treatment until he does the right thing in the way of explaining his action.

Stop Your Quarreling

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been married ten years, and we have three lovely children. I am 30 years old; my husband is 35. After we were married a year or so, I discovered that I never really loved my husband; but as time goes on, I find myself staying with him just for the sake of the children. It seems to me we do nothing but fight until it is almost unbearable. Would you advise me to leave him?

UNHAPPY MOTHER.

Nothing could be worse for children than the effect of squabbling and fussing going on before them. It would almost be better that a home be broken up—and that is always the last resource—than that a child's first years should be filled with the memories of quarreling parents.

Why don't you stop quarreling? You know it takes two to fight, so why not make up your mind to be the silent partner in these rows? Think of your children—surely, they are entitled to a normal home where they may develop instead of one where there is constant wrangling. Make things pleasant for them.

Tied to Mother's Apron Strings

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Girls often make fun of me for being so devoted to my mother. They say I'm tied to her apron-strings, and that isn't so at all. My father died when I was a baby, and mother has gone through a great deal to raise me, and I want to be grateful. I take her out to the movies once or twice a week, and to concerts.

But I really don't care whether the girls kid me about this or not. I'm not going to wait until it's too late, and then regret I didn't give mother most of my time.

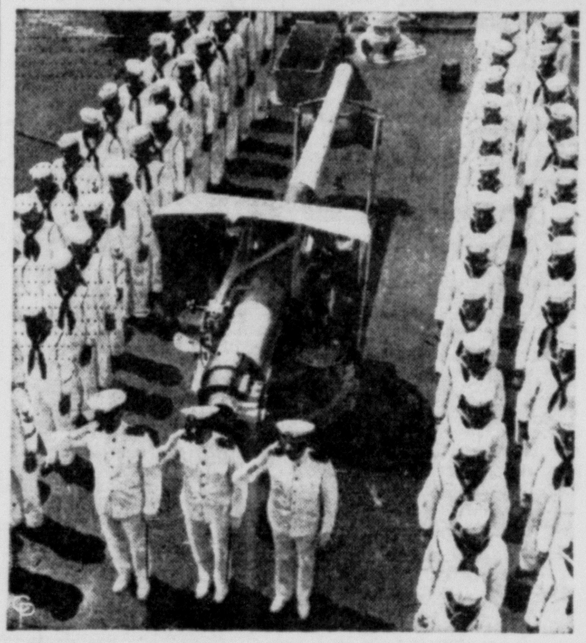

Then, too, the modern girl is too fast for me. I like the out-of-door type, and a home girl—one who knows something about running a home and can cook without resorting to the can-opener. I intend to wait until I meet the right one.

GENE.

The girl who lands you as a husband should be congratulated. Also, the hopes of a good many girls who write and say that men are no longer interested in sensible girls should be re-awakened upon reading your letter.

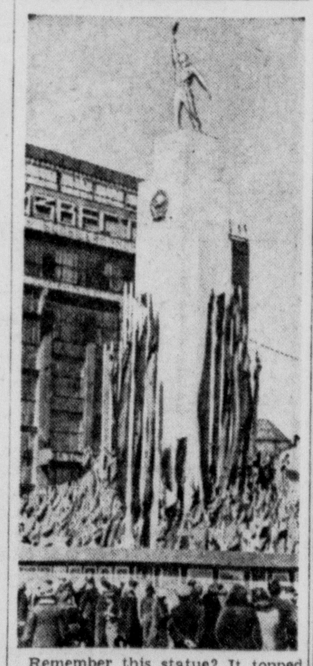

It is popularly supposed that the gold resources of Alaska have been pretty well exhausted. Recently, however, a Harvard explorer reported discovery of a "lost world" of minerals, probably including gold, under 2,000 feet of ice.

ANOTHER UNIT FOR U. S. DEFENSE

Here is the scene abdard the William B. Preston, naval aircraft tender, at Brooklyn Navy Yard, during recommissioning ceremonies. Sailors and ship's oficers salute as the flag is raised, officially adding the craft to Uncle Sam's growing line of defense.

BACK IN MOSCOW

Remember this statue? It topped the U. S. S. R. pavilion at the New York World's Fair in 1939. Russia having removed its Fair building and exhibit, the statue now looks out over Moscow from Pushkin Square. Building in background houses "Izvestia," Soviet newspaper.

Durocher and Owen Fight in Night Game

Flaming Feud Breaks Out at Ebbets Field

Brooklyn Defeats Cardinals 8 to 3 To Break Losing Streak

By JUDSON BAILEY

BROOKLYN, June 19. (AP)—The surge of the St. Louis Cardinals collapsed under the strain of seven errors tonight and the Brooklyn Dodgers fought their way to an 8 to 3 victory that lifted them into a virtual tie for first place in the National League.

Both clubs showed the tension of hard feelings and harsh words that followed yesterday's "beaning" of Joe Medwick, but the Cards were affected most.

Catcher Mickey Owen was banished from the game in the third inning for getting into a fist fight with Manager Leo Durocher of the Dodgers and shortstop Martin Marion was so jittery he made four errors, three of them in one inning.

Each team made nine hits, but Whitlow Wyatt kept his quota spaced except for two singles and came out of the wild west show with his sixth victory of the year, to the noisy satisfaction of 31,249 fans who jammed Ebbets Field to capacity.

Pittsburgh Beats Boston as Bowman Goes Route, 5 to 1

Pitches Effectively To Aid Bucs Move into Sixth Place

Boston, June 19 (AP) — A heavy shower interrupted the Pittsburgh Pirates for 45 minutes today as they moved into sixth place in the National League by drubbing the Boston Bees, 5-1, behind the effective pitching of righthander Joe Bowman.

Bowman did not give a single pass and kept the Bees' nine hits scattered in all but the sixth inning. The Pirates subjected Dick Errickson to his first defeat in five starts by chasing him after five innings and then were checked by Manuel Salvo, pressed into relief service as soon as he reported from Jersey City.

The Pirates scored all their runs against Errickson and clinched the game with a three-run barrage in the second inning. With two runners on in that frame, Wilbur Brubaker lashed out a two-bagger, and then scored himself after Al Lopez singled.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, June 19. (AP) — Billy Southworth gave his Cardinals a scare the other day, but otherwise things have been quite all right with the St. Louis club since the dapper little guy took over where Ray Blades left off.

Fibber Bill McGee was pitching against the Phillies when, with two down, a batter smacked out a clean hit. The next two batters hit boopers which had to be scored as hits, and the outlook was none too rosy for the Red Birds.

Suddenly little Billy popped out of the dugout and bustled toward the mound where the apprehensive Fibber Bill stood, memories of similar situations in recent months flashing through his mind.

"Bill," said Southworth, "they aren't hitting you. Those last two were lazy bluebirds if I ever saw any. Now get in there and throw the ball past this next guy."

McGee's shoulders went back and his teeth clamped. He fogged three pitches over the plate to retire the side.

That incident tells the story of the recent Cardinal successes; a story which has as its text mutual confidence. Gone are the jitters. In their place is something of the old Cardinal whoopde-do, the slashing, confident, chance-taking play that brings victories.

The team is just starting its season. When Southworth took over he told his players to forget the past, to concentrate on the future. He found a bunch of willing amnesia victims, who today are playing their heads off for the pleasant little fellow who asks only cooperation and a love of the game.

Southworth, frankly outlined his ideas as the Cards waited for their second crack at the Brrooklyns. In no way did he criticize the work of Blades. They used to be roommates.

"The team got away to a bad start because of the weather," he said. "The players would have a couple of rainy days to ponder a defeat. They got jittery, and pressed, and the harder a team presses the more jittery it becomes.

"The weather helped me when I took over. We had a couple of postponed games which gave me a chance to get my pitching staff set for rotation. I figure on five starters—Bowman, Cooper, McGee, Warneke and Shoun. I know most teams use four starters, but Warneke and Bowman will need a longer rest between games.

"How did I happen to start Shoun? Well, one of the boys came up to me and said it would please Shoun greatly if he could start a game, so I asked Clyde if he'd like to start. He said: 'I'd give my right arm.' He's left handed, you know. So I told him we'd set a date, and for him to get ready. The date was the first game with Brooklyn. You know what he did. Pitched four-hit ball to win. He's a starting pitcher if I ever saw one.

"Regarding the Medwick deal, I was asked my opinion before it was made, and I okayed it. I think Joe will do better with Brooklyn, but I won't miss him because I never had him. And I like Ernie Koy. In fact, I think that in a couple of years they may be thinking the Cards made a steal in the deal. Koy is fast, a power hitter, a fine fielder, and a great team player."

The Cards all seem to be great team players now, for that matter. They liked Blades. They are crazy about Southworth, who tells them to have a good time and play the fame free from worry. They're fielding better, and running the bases with old-time exuberance. And in their happiness they're really slapping that ball. Just slap happy, that's all.

Lacy's, Trozzo's and Golden's Win Games

Trozzo's Whirlwinds were sluggish in their battle with the Davis Gassers and almost lost the game but finally squeezed through for a 3 to 2 victory.

Lacy's Delicatets won an easy 13-3 game from the Candy Kitchen aggregation with Campbell pitching a three hit masterpiece.

Golden's Bakery rallied in the late innings to snatch a 6-5 victory from the Post team. Each team had seven hits and one error.

Liberty Dairy won an easy tussle from the King team 17 to 4.

Detroit Defeats A's Twice To Go Into Second Place

Tigers Run Streak to Six Straight with 5-4 and 9-4 Wins

DETROIT, June 19. (AP)—The Detroit Tigers climbed into second place in the American League standings, ran their winning streak to six games and helped two of their pitchers better impressive records by thumping the Philadelphia Athletics twice today. Detroit won the nightcap.

Louie (Buck) Newsom chalked up his eighth straight pitching triumph in the first contest, Hank Greenberg singled Barney McCosky home from second with the winning run off Nelson Potter. Newsom, who won 20 games last season, has not been beaten since opening day when he bowed to the St. Louis Browns. Frank Higgins, of the Tigers, and Sam Chapman, of the A's, hit homers in their game.

In the second contest Lynwood Rowe, unbeaten in his comeback bid this season, scored his fifth consecutive victory. Rowe retired after yielding four runs in the eighth, Alton Benton finishing.

Flaming Feud Breaks Out at Ebbets Field

Brooklyn Defeats Cardinals 8 to 3 To Break Losing Streak

By JUDSON BAILEY

BROOKLYN, June 19. (AP)—The surge of the St. Louis Cardinals collapsed under the strain of seven errors tonight and the Brooklyn Dodgers fought their way to an 8 to 3 victory that lifted them into a virtual tie for first place in the National League.

Both clubs showed the tension of hard feelings and harsh words that followed yesterday's "beaning" of Joe Medwick, but the Cards were affected most.

Catcher Mickey Owen was banished from the game in the third inning for getting into a fist fight with Manager Leo Durocher of the Dodgers and shortstop Martin Marion was so jittery he made four errors, three of them in one inning.

Each team made nine hits, but Whitlow Wyatt kept his quota spaced except for two singles and came out of the wild west show with his sixth victory of the year, to the noisy satisfaction of 31,249 fans who jammed Ebbets Field to capacity.

Pittsburgh Beats Boston as Bowman Goes Route, 5 to 1

Pitches Effectively To Aid Bucs Move into Sixth Place

Boston, June 19 (AP) — A heavy shower interrupted the Pittsburgh Pirates for 45 minutes today as they moved into sixth place in the National League by drubbing the Boston Bees, 5-1, behind the effective pitching of righthander Joe Bowman.

Bowman did not give a single pass and kept the Bees' nine hits scattered in all but the sixth inning. The Pirates subjected Dick Errickson to his first defeat in five starts by chasing him after five innings and then were checked by Manuel Salvo, pressed into relief service as soon as he reported from Jersey City.

The Pirates scored all their runs against Errickson and clinched the game with a three-run barrage in the second inning. With two runners on in that frame, Wilbur Brubaker lashed out a two-bagger, and then scored himself after Al Lopez singled.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, June 19. (AP) — Billy Southworth gave his Cardinals a scare the other day, but otherwise things have been quite all right with the St. Louis club since the dapper little guy took over where Ray Blades left off.

Fibber Bill McGee was pitching against the Phillies when, with two down, a batter smacked out a clean hit. The next two batters hit boopers which had to be scored as hits, and the outlook was none too rosy for the Red Birds.

Suddenly little Billy popped out of the dugout and bustled toward the mound where the apprehensive Fibber Bill stood, memories of similar situations in recent months flashing through his mind.

"Bill," said Southworth, "they aren't hitting you. Those last two were lazy bluebirds if I ever saw any. Now get in there and throw the ball past this next guy."

McGee's shoulders went back and his teeth clamped. He fogged three pitches over the plate to retire the side.

That incident tells the story of the recent Cardinal successes; a story which has as its text mutual confidence. Gone are the jitters. In their place is something of the old Cardinal whoopde-do, the slashing, confident, chance-taking play that brings victories.

The team is just starting its season. When Southworth took over he told his players to forget the past, to concentrate on the future. He found a bunch of willing amnesia victims, who today are playing their heads off for the pleasant little fellow who asks only cooperation and a love of the game.

Southworth, frankly outlined his ideas as the Cards waited for their second crack at the Brrooklyns. In no way did he criticize the work of Blades. They used to be roommates.

"The team got away to a bad start because of the weather," he said. "The players would have a couple of rainy days to ponder a defeat. They got jittery, and pressed, and the harder a team presses the more jittery it becomes.

"The weather helped me when I took over. We had a couple of postponed games which gave me a chance to get my pitching staff set for rotation. I figure on five starters—Bowman, Cooper, McGee, Warneke and Shoun. I know most teams use four starters, but Warneke and Bowman will need a longer rest between games.

"How did I happen to start Shoun? Well, one of the boys came up to me and said it would please Shoun greatly if he could start a game, so I asked Clyde if he'd like to start. He said: 'I'd give my right arm.' He's left handed, you know. So I told him we'd set a date, and for him to get ready. The date was the first game with Brooklyn. You know what he did. Pitched four-hit ball to win. He's a starting pitcher if I ever saw one.

"Regarding the Medwick deal, I was asked my opinion before it was made, and I okayed it. I think Joe will do better with Brooklyn, but I won't miss him because I never had him. And I like Ernie Koy. In fact, I think that in a couple of years they may be thinking the Cards made a steal in the deal. Koy is fast, a power hitter, a fine fielder, and a great team player."

The Cards all seem to be great team players now, for that matter. They liked Blades. They are crazy about Southworth, who tells them to have a good time and play the fame free from worry. They're fielding better, and running the bases with old-time exuberance. And in their happiness they're really slapping that ball. Just slap happy, that's all.

Lacy's, Trozzo's and Golden's Win Games

Trozzo's Whirlwinds were sluggish in their battle with the Davis Gassers and almost lost the game but finally squeezed through for a 3 to 2 victory.

Lacy's Delicatets won an easy 13-3 game from the Candy Kitchen aggregation with Campbell pitching a three hit masterpiece.

Golden's Bakery rallied in the late innings to snatch a 6-5 victory from the Post team. Each team had seven hits and one error.

Liberty Dairy won an easy tussle from the King team 17 to 4.

Detroit Defeats A's Twice To Go Into Second Place

Tigers Run Streak to Six Straight with 5-4 and 9-4 Wins

DETROIT, June 19. (AP)—The Detroit Tigers climbed into second place in the ~~American League stand~~ings, ran their winning streak to six games and helped two of their pitchers better impressive records by thumping the Philadelphia Athletics twice today. Detroit won the nightcap.

Louie (Buck) Newsom chalked up his eighth straight pitching triumph in the first contest, Hank Greenberg singled Barney McCosky home from second with the winning run off Nelson Potter. Newsom, who won 20 games last season, has not been beaten since opening day when he bowed to the St. Louis Browns. Frank Higgins, of the Tigers, and Sam Chapman, of the A's, hit homers in their game.

In the second contest Lynwood Rowe, unbeaten in his comeback bid this season, scored his fifth consecutive victory. Rowe retired after yielding four runs in the eighth, Alton Benton finishing.

Medwick "Beaning" under Investigation

National League Awaits Inquiry by District Attorney

League President Holds Off Action after Hearing

Bowman Declares He Did Not Throw To Hit Ex-Teammate

NEW YORK, June 19 (AP)—An early decision by Ford C. Frick on charges that the "beaning" of Brooklyn outfielder Joe Medwick by Bob Bowman of the St. Louis Cardinals was deliberate appeared remote tonight as the National League president declared he would take no action until the results of an investigation by District Attorney William O'Dwyer's office were known.

Hinting that baseball could keep its own shirts clean, and that he was not interested in the civil aspects of the case, Frick said:

"Even if I do make up my mind, I would not make any announcement under the circumstances. Suppose I should suspend Bowman. That would be taken as proof of his guilt."

Frick spent four hours today interviewing everyone who might throw some light on yesterday's incident, when Medwick was felled and suffered a concussion.

Crowd into Hearing

He said he had asked only Leo Durocher, Brooklyn manager; Bowman; Johnny Mize, Cardinal first baseman; Pepper Martin, Cardinal outfielder; and Larry MacPhail, Brooklyn club president, to the hearing, but practically the entire Cardinal team trooped to the league office and before the lengthy testimony was ended many other players, as well as two or three Brooklyn fans, had been called in.

Bowman obviously was nervous. He was called in twice. He later reiterated an earlier statement that Medwick was his friend and the beaning was unintentional.

"I tried to put too much stuff on the ball and it got away," he said. "If I live a thousand years I'll still think that Joe stood there waiting for the ball to curve, and it didn't."

MacPhail was as emphatic in his opinion that the beaning was intentional.

"We presented our case to the effect that we believed it was intentional," he said, "and backed it with the statements of two St. Louis players.

Allen Hurls Tribe To 4-1 Triumph

CLEVELAND, June 19 (AP) — Johnny Allen hurled steady ball today for a 4 to 1 victory over Washington, helping the Cleveland Indians in their drive to overtake the league-leading Boston Red Sox.

It was the Tribe's fourth straight triumph, and its sixth in seven starts since a dozen Cleveland players aired unhappiness in the wigwam by complaining to the front office tney couldn't play winning baseball for Manager Oscar Vitt, who still is boss.

Allen allowed eight hits but never was in serious danger. Cleveland's nine-hit attack on Ken Chase and two successors included Hal Trosky's 15th home run of the season, which followed a three-run outburst in the second inning. Allen's double drove in one of the tallies.

Lous A 6-1 Favorite To Win Against Godoy

NEW YORK, June 19—Joe Louis is about to defend his world's heavyweight championship against Arturo Godoy at Yankee Stadium, fifteen rounds. My set of Farthingale tea leaves—with men who know tea leaves best, it's the slower-burning Farthingale—tell me that Godoy will not come up for the tenth round.

No man with the courage and cool resourcefulness of this Chilean can be licked before the fight starts. Godoy will display no hysteria. He will not exhibit the cold funk of John Paychek, Louis's last opponent, who scuttled backward with a clacking of teeth when Louis advanced to the kill last Spring.

Mr. Godoy will fight the best he knows how, and since he possesses certain gifts, I will not advertise the result of this brawl as a foregone conclusion. But Louis should win, and win by a knockout.

The Only Secret

The weights of these two assorted nougats are known. They're about the same. Their respective hitting quotients are known. Louis hits six times harder. Their records are open to inspection, and Louis has the better record. Thus, there is only one unknown factor in the whole panorama, and that is Godoy's secret weapon, as developed by his manager, the sinister Alsatian, Monsieur Armand (Weskit) Weill.

Monsieur Weill says that Godoy has a scheme of attack which will shake the great arena upon its foundation with surprise when revealed, thus postponing the baseball adventures of the New York Yankees for two weeks, until they can get the Stadium back in place.

"There will be no crouching," promised the Weskit recently, "and no lunging."

"No lunging?" barked Mr. Godoy in dismay. "What do you want to do, starve me to death? That means I gotta eat twice as much breakfast."

"I do not refer to lunging in the sense of the midday meal," said Monsieur Weill coldly. "I refer to your tactics in the last affair with Louis, when you lunged forward and tied up the bum at close quarters. I am merely pointing out that your strategy in the coming bout will not be the same, not at all. I am hinting that you will take the champ by surprise with a form of attack so new that Hitler don't even know it's on the market."

"All right," said Mr. Godoy. "Just so I get my lunge, with two scuppsa coffee."

Joe Sat It Out

This is a very formidable threat to Louis, with the brain of Mr. Weill linked to the brain of Mr. Godoy—all the more so when you consider that Mr. Weill cannot possibly be hurt unless somebody steps on his toe in the corner. This may account for the fearlessness of Mr. Weill. The nonchalance of Mr. Godoy is another matter. I do not know how to account for it, except that Louis was so much off form the last time they met that he made n impression upon the rhumba expert from Chile.

Joe was pretty bad that night. As mentioned before, he won the fight without much trouble and left his calling-card on Godoy's chiseled Chilean countenance. But he was something short of a homicidal maniac. Frankly baffled by the South American's new dance steps, he elected to sit this one out. Even as a kid in dancing school, Joe was a wallflower.

He landed a few punches that seemed to be flush on the button, but they didn't bother Godoy, and I'm inclined to think that this was less because of Godoy's powers of absorption, great though they are, than because Joe was consistently off balance. Usually he caught his man going away, or ducking, so that the blow either lacked full strength or slithered off the South American's noggin.

This time, with a bit more fixity of purpose, Louis should be able to bring Godoy out of his crouch with uppercuts and stab him properly. He should be able to, but will he? I do not know what's got into Joseph these days, if there is any truth in the ugly scandal that he picks his clothes out of Esquire.

The betting is roughly 6 to 1, or write your own recipe, that Louis will win, and even money that he will knock Godoy out. That is a fair proposition, and your correspondent, posed on the springboard for his customary swan with a half twist, predicts that the champion will level his man at approximately 2 minutes 20 and 6-10 seconds of round eight.

Bowman's Grocers Beat Potomac News Ten 11-7

Bowman's Grocers defeated Potomac News yesterday at Keegan's field by a score of 11 to 7.

"Buck" Palmer had a perfect day with four hits, two of them doubles. Palmer has hit safely the last seven times at bat. Dave Powell had two doubles, driving in four of the Grocers' runs. The fielding features of the game were two outstanding catches by Milt Athey and Charles Cubbage. Troutman had three of the News Boys' hits. Lefty Moore hit a home run in the seventh inning for the News Boys. Lineup and score:

Louis Declares for Kayo and Godoy for Decision

NEW YORK, June 19 (AP)—Facing the most dangerous foreign challenge to the world's heavyweight championship since Max Schmeling and Primo Carnera grabbed the brass ring, Joe Louis makes the 11th defense of fistiana's richest prize tomorrow night in Yankee Stadium against rough, tough Arturo Godoy of Chile.

Some 30,000 are expected when the shooting starts at 9 p. m. (E.S.T.). They'll contribute to an anticipated gross gate of more than $150,000. Of the net, Louis receives 40 percent. Godoy wil get 17½ for the tussle of 15 rounds or less.

What They Say

From the "just before the battle, mother" statements of both men, it appeared there would be two winners. Louis, who took a split decision over the Chilean fisherman last February, although befuddled by Godoy's peculiar crouching style, predicted he was "going to make this one as short as possible." Arturo, recalling he was weakened in the last meeting by a cold which had affected him for six days before the bout, insisted he would be the "first heavyweight champion from South America" when the firing ceases.

Nevertheless, the Broadway bookmakers and the "experts" were virtually unanimous in picking Louis to turn the trick again. The Bomber was 1 to 5 to do it any way, and 1 to 2 to do it the hard way—chilling the Chilean before the 15 rounds were up.

This corner goes along with the majority in this one. I pick Louis to flatten Arturo within seven rounds.

"Yep," Louis stated flatly, "this is gonna be a different kind of fight than last time. I'm ready for any style Godoy uses. He'se gonna have to straighten up if he wants to win, and when he does—that's all I want. But if he tries to fight the way he did and stay down in a crouch, then I know what to do. I'll keep my title."

Five Prelims

Godoy, as confident a punching man as ever jumped into the ring, laughed this off. "I'm in much better condition this time," he pointed out. "I'm not predicting I'll knock Louis out, but I'll be in there trying. And if it has to go the full 15, then Louis will be a beaten man."

Five preliminary bouts will support the main go. Steve Belloise, young middleweight knocker-outer from the Bronx, takes on Wicky Harkins of Philadelphia in the chief eight-rounder. In the event weather forces a postponement, the battle will be postponed one day.

The proceedings will be broadcast over the WJZ-NBC (Blue) network.

Dempsey Wants 6-Ounce Gloves

ATLANTA, June 19. (AP)—Jack Dempsey the one-time Manassa Mauler, wants to use six-ounce gloves when he trades punches with a Tampa (Fla.) wrestler here July 1.

Promoter Jim Downing said Dempsey wired his request after the grappler, Cowboy Luttrell, suggested pillow-like 18-ounce gloves.

The ten-round bout was arranged here as the aftermath of a wrestling match several weeks ago in which Referee Dempsey backed up a decision by clouting Luttrell's jaw.

Downing indicated the Atlanta Athletic Commission would determine the weight of gloves to be used.

Medwick Badly Hurt by Pitched Ball

Grimacing in pain, Joe (Ducky) Medwick, recently sold by the St. Louis Cardinals to the Brooklyn Dodgers for $200,000 is shown lying on the ground at Ebbets Field, immediately after he was hit by a ball pitched by Bob Bowman, of the Cardinals in a game between the Cardinals and Dodgers at Brooklyn. Bowman's first pitched ball struck Medwick in the head. He was rushed to hospital and under X-ray examination to determine the extent of the damage.

White Sox Upset Yanks in Fourth Straight by 1 to 0

Thornton Lee Outlasts Russo in Southpaw Mound Duel

CHICAGO, June 19. (AP)—Thornton Lee outlasted Marius Russo today in a lefthanded pitching duel to give the Chicago White Sox a 1 to 0 victory over the New York Yankees. It was the World Champions' fourth consecutive setback and second straight by a southpaw.

For seven innings young Russo allowed the Sox only two hits, but in the eighth Mike Kreevich and Joe Kuhel opened with singles and after Taft Wright grounded into a double play at third, Luke Appling singled Kuhel home.

The Yanks pecked away at Lee for seven hits, but only in the seventh did they get as many as two in an inning.

The Chance For a Knockout

The job of chopping down Arturo Godoy as one would an oak tree isn't as simple as it seems. Joe Louis discovered this melancholy fact once before, and he is likely to discover it again.

The large and stately oak can't assume as many postures or gyrations as Godoy can handle. The oak has to wait for the axe, while the Godoy chin is always in motion from the floor to neck high. It is an elusive target, even for a sharpshooter.

When the champion and the challenger meet at the Yankee Stadium tonight the betting will be around even that Louis will close out the performance inside of ten rounds. Louis has too many guns for the entry from Chile. But these howitzers, meaning a right and a left, must first locate their highly-elastic target.

It is a war of movement with Godoy, and when you get a big, game, rough, active fellow whose main idea is to spoil the other side's attack, the problem is no simple one.

The Louis Advantage

It could be quite different if only Godoy packed a punishing punch. He doesn't. Louis does.

Louis can afford to take certain chances in locating the Godoy chin, whereas Godoy can afford no such luxury.

I believe this time Louis will finally catch up with his man and flatten him. I believe the Louis fighting mood will be many notches above the baffled and bewildered status of the Bomber in their first whirligig or merry-go-round.

Louis has yet to fail in a return engagement and while part of his old keenness may be dulled, enough remains to turn the trick if Louis will only move his offense into higher speed, and keep it going.

Godoy is hard to hurt and even harder to bring down, but the champoin is still a stunning puncher with either hand. Unpleasant memories smoulder in the Louis system until at last they are ready for the flame.

If you recall the details, Louis was sore at both Schmeling and Pastor in the second engagements, and sore at Galento in the first. There was nothing lethargic or listless attached to the Louis mood on these three occasions. He lost no time in opening vicious assaults that were highly damaging from the start.

Tougher Target

Conceding the fact that Louis will crowd his opponent from the start and attempt to erase the Godoy frontispiece as rapidly as possible, it must be admitted that the invader is much harder to surround and manhandle than Schmeling, Pastor or Galento were. His legs may carry no greater bulk than Galento's underpinning, but they can move about at a faster pace.

When you get a big, awkward party whose main intention is to go the limit, only a great amount of hustling will turn the trick.

"Joe was caught napping and off guard in that first fight," Jack Blackburn tells you, "but he will be another Joe this time. He knows now the kind of fight he has to make, and he is in a better fighting mood. Joe's only at his best when he is mad. You can't keep on being keen forever, or mad all the time. He wasn't either keen or mad in their first fight, but he'll be out after his man this time and right from the start."

"Yes, but can he catch him?" Blackburn was asked.

"I think he can," Jack replied. "And so does Joe. Maybe not in a hurry for this fellow is not only a tough bird, hard to hurt, but he also knows what it's all about. If he could punch like Joe can it might be all different, but he can't. I still say we never had a fighter who could punch as hard as Joe can with both hands."

At least, this time neither Blackburn nor Louis have underrated the Chile visitor with the elastic piano legs and the granite jaw. Louis has been told that he must keep after his rival from start to finish, that he must throw many more punches than he fired before.

I look for this to happen, starting with the opening canto. If it doesn't happen this way we will have definite proof that Louis has slipped well back and that the job of being champion has reached the boredom stage.

"Louis is two entirely different fighters," an old-timer remarked around fight headquarters yesterday, "meaning when he is sore and when he isn't. Godoy may have startled and surprised Joe in their first meeting, but I believe this time it will be Godow picking up the surprise package, just as Max Sch-

Ridgeley Rod & Gun Ten Defeats Police Boys

The Police Boys Club softball ten put their pantoons to work in the last inning of their game with the Ridgeley Rod and Gun Club team at Ridgeley yesterday and it looked like the four run rally was good for the game. However Ridgeley came right back and batted in five to win the contest 11-10. The teams had gone into the final frame deadlocked at 6-6.

Shearer and Shaner led the Boys Club attack with triples and singles to their credit, while C. DeRosa and Moreland were the big guns for the Ridgeley club with doubles in the final and winning flare-up.

meling did in their second round-up."

All of which sounds righly reasonable. There always comes a time in every champion's career when he is over the hill and on his way down. It has happened to them all, barring Gene Tunney who retired before his peak.

It is a difficult point to spot in advance. Even when John L. Sullivan had become only a wreck of his former self, few believed he had gone back.

Louis isn't the savage young animal he was some years ago, but he is still something to beat when he gets steamed up against someone he yearns to annihilate.

He had better be in that mood against Godoy tonight, or lose a large patch of ground when it comes to ranking the heavyweights of all time. For he isn't facing any puff ball or any flutter of thistledown in this elastic entry from Chile who hasn't the slightest fear of the Bomber's bombs.

Red Shields Win 10-9; Seek Softball Rivals

The Red Shield Club of The Salvation Army played a return soft ball game with the Lexington Avenue Boys Tuesday, beating them with a score of 10 to 9. The last game the Red Shield lost by one run. A home run was made by Deneen, a three base hit by Bob Hare, and a two bagger by J. Brown.

Pitcher for the Red Shield was B. Hare and catcher Nield. For the Lexington Avenue team B. Yost was pitcher, and Dugan catcher.

Walter Hite, manager of the team, will be glad to have other teams contact him for a game at 212 S. Mechanic street.

Medwick "Beaning" under Investigation

National League Awaits Inquiry by District Attorney

League President Holds Off Action after Hearing

Bowman Declares He Did Not Throw To Hit Ex-Teammate

NEW YORK, June 19 (AP)—An early decision by Ford C. Frick on charges that the "beaning" of Brooklyn outfielder Joe Medwick by Bob Bowman of the St. Louis Cardinals was deliberate appeared remote tonight as the National League president declared he would take no action until the results of an investigation by District Attorney William O'Dwyer's office were known.

Hinting that baseball could keep its own shirts clean, and that he was not interested in the civil aspects of the case, Frick said:

"Even if I do make up my mind, I would not make any announcement under the circumstances. Suppose I should suspend Bowman. That would be taken as proof of his guilt."

Frick spent four hours today interviewing everyone who might throw some light on yesterday's incident, when Medwick was felled and suffered a concussion.

Crowd into Hearing

He said he had asked only Leo Durocher, Brooklyn manager; Bowman; Johnny Mize, Cardinal first baseman; Pepper Martin, Cardinal outfielder; and Larry MacPhail, Brooklyn club president, to the hearing, but practically the entire Cardinal team trooped to the league office and before the lengthy testimony was ended many other players, as well as two or three Brooklyn fans, had been called in.

Bowman obviously was nervous. He was called in twice. He later reiterated an earlier statement that Medwick was his friend and the beaning was unintentional.

"I tried to put too much stuff on the ball and it got away," he said. "If I live a thousand years I'll still think that Joe stood there waiting for the ball to curve, and it didn't."

MacPhail was as emphatic in his opinion that the beaning was intentional.

"We presented our case to the effect that we believed it was intentional," he said, "and backed it with the statements of two St. Louis players.

Allen Hurls Tribe To 4-1 Triumph

CLEVELAND, June 19 (AP) — Johnny Allen hurled steady ball today for a 4 to 1 victory over Washington, helping the Cleveland Indians in their drive to overtake the league-leading Boston Red Sox.

It was the Tribe's fourth straight triumph, and its sixth in seven starts since a dozen Cleveland players aired unhappiness in the wigwam by complaining to the front office they couldn't play winning baseball for Manager Oscar Vitt, who still is boss.

Allen allowed eight hits but never was in serious danger. Cleveland's nine-hit attack on Ken Chase and two successors included Hal Trosky's 15th home run of the season, which followed a three-run outburst in the second inning. Allen's double drove in one of the tallies.

I am merely pointing out that your strategy in the coming bout will not be the same, not at all. I am hinting that you will take the champ by surprise with a form of attack so new that Hitler don't even know it's on the market."

"All right," said Mr. Godoy. "Just so I get my lunge, with two scuppsa coffee."

Joe Sat It Out

This is a very formidable threat to Louis, with the brain of Mr. Weill linked to the brain of Mr. Godoy—all the more so when you consider that Mr. Weill cannot possibly be hurt unless somebody steps on his toe in the corner. This may account for the fearlessness of Mr. Weill. The nonchalance of Mr. Godoy is another matter. I do not know how to account for it, except that Louis was so much off form the last time they met that he made n impression upon the rhumba expert from Chile.

Joe was pretty bad that night. As mentioned before, he won the fight without much trouble and left his calling-card on Godoy's chiseled Chilean countenance. But he was something short of a homicidal maniac. Frankly baffled by the South American's new dance steps, he elected to sit this one out. Even as a kid in dancing school, Joe was a wallflower.

He landed a few punches that seemed to be flush on the button, but they didn't bother Godoy, and I'm inclined to think that this was less because of Godoy's powers of absorption, great though they are, than because Joe was consistently off balance. Usually he caught his man going away, or ducking, so that the blow either lacked full strength or slithered off the South American's noggin.

This time, with a bit more fixity of purpose, Louis should be able to bring Godoy out of his crouch with uppercuts and stab him properly. He should be able to, but will he? I do not know what's got into Joseph these days, if there is any truth in the ugly scandal that he picks his clothes out of Esquire.

The betting is roughly 6 to 1, or write your own recipe, that Louis will win, and even money that he will knock Godoy out. That is a fair proposition, and your correspondent, posed on the springboard for his customary swan with a half twist, predicts that the champion will level his man at approximately 2 minutes 20 and 6-10 seconds of round eight.

Louis Declares for Kayo and Godoy for Decision

NEW YORK, June 19 (AP)—Facing the most dangerous foreign challenge to the world's heavyweight championship since Max Schmeling and Primo Carnera grabbed the brass ring, Joe Louis makes the 11th defense of fistiana's richest prize tomorrow night in Yankee Stadium against rough, tough Arturo Godoy of Chile.

Some 30,000 are expected when the shooting starts at 9 p. m. (E.S.T.). They'll contribute to an anticipated gross gate of more than $150,000. Of the net, Louis receives 40 percent. Godoy wil get 17½ for the tussle of 15 rounds or less.

What They Say

From the "just before the battle, mother" statements of both men, it appeared there would be two winners. Louis, who took a split decision over the Chilean fisherman last February, although befuddled by Godoy's peculiar crouching style, predicted he was "going to make this one as short as possible." Arturo, recalling he was weakened in the last meeting by a cold which had affected him for six days before the bout, insisted he would be the "first heavyweight champion from South America" when the firing ceases.

Nevertheless, the Broadway bookmakers and the "experts" were virtually unanimous in picking Louis to turn the trick again. The Bomber was 1 to 5 to do it any way, and 1 to 2 to do it the hard way—chilling the Chilean before the 15 rounds were up.

This corner goes along with the majority in this one, I pick Louis to flatten Arturo within seven rounds.

"Yep," Louis stated flatly, "this is gonna be a different kind of fight than last time. I'm ready for any style Godoy uses. He'se gonna have to straighten up if he wants to win, and when he does—that's all I want. But if he tries to fight the way he did and stay down in a crouch, then I know what to do. I'll keep my title."

Five Prelims

Godoy, as confident a punching man as ever jumped into the ring, laughed this off. "I'm in much better condition this time," he pointed out. "I'm not predicting I'll knock Louis out, but I'll be in there trying. And if it has to go the full 15, then Louis will be a beaten man."

Five preliminary bouts will support the main go. Steve Belloise, young middleweight knocker-outer from the Bronx, takes on Wicky Harkins of Philadelphia in the chief eight-rounder. In the event weather forces a postponement, the battle will be postponed one day.

The proceedings will be broadcast over the WJZ-NBC (Blue) network.

Dempsey Wants 6-Ounce Gloves

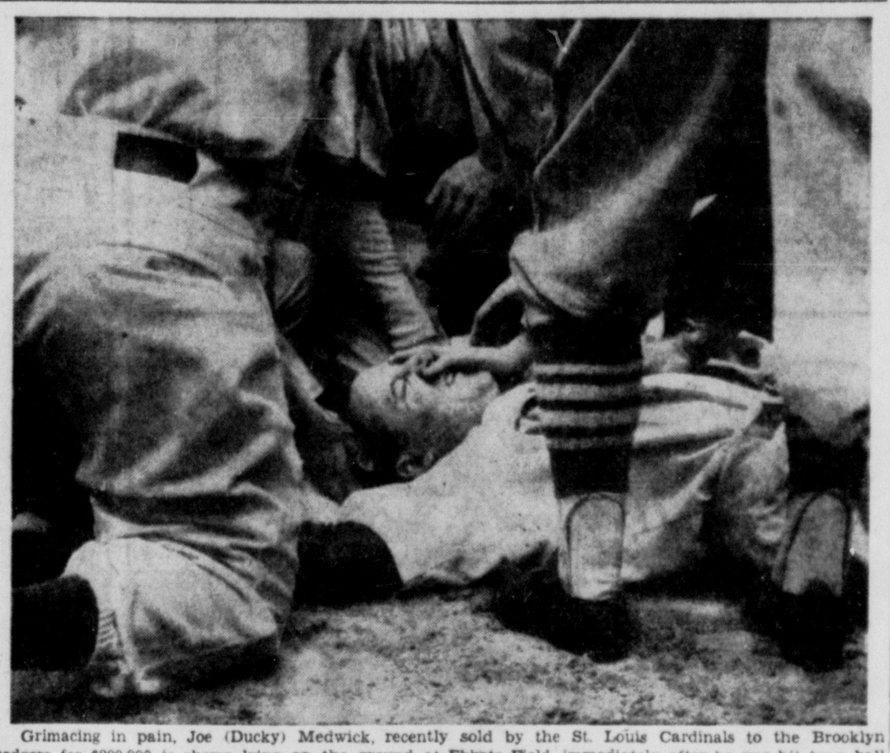

ATLANTA, June 19. (AP)—Jack Dempsey the one-time Manassa Mauler, wants to use six-ounce gloves when he trades punches with a Tampa (Fla.) wrestler here July 1.

Promoter Jim Downing said Dempsey wired his request after the grappler, Cowboy Luttrell, suggested pillow-like 18-ounce gloves.

The ten-round bout was arranged here as the aftermath of a wrestling match several weeks ago in which Referee Dempsey backed up a decision by clouting Luttrell's jaw.

Downing indicated the Atlanta Athletic Commission would determine the weight of gloves to be used.

Medwick Badly Hurt by Pitched Ball

Grimacing in pain, Joe (Ducky) Medwick, recently sold by the St. Louis Cardinals to the Brooklyn Dodgers for $200,000 is shown lying on the ground at Ebbets Field, immediately after he was hit by a ball pitched by Bob Bowman, of the Cardinals in a game between the Cardinals and Dodgers at Brooklyn. Bowman's first pitched ball struck Medwick in the head. He was rushed to hospital and under X-ray examination to determine the extent of the damage.

White Sox Upset Yanks in Fourth Straight by 1 to 0

Thornton Lee Outlasts Russo in Southpaw Mound Duel

CHICAGO, June 19. (AP)—Thornton Lee outlasted Marius Russo today in a lefthanded pitching duel to give the Chicago White Sox a 1 to 0 victory over the New York Yankees. It was the World Champions' fourth consecutive setback and second straight by a southpaw.

For seven innings young Russo allowed the Sox only two hits, but in the eighth Mike Kreevich and Joe Kuhel opened with singles and after Taft Wright grounded into a double play at third, Luke Appling singled Kuhel home.

The Yanks pecked away at Lee for seven hits, but only in the seventh did they get as many as two in an inning.

The Chance For a Knockout

The job of chopping down Arturo Godoy as one would an oak tree isn't as simple as it seems. Joe Louis discovered this melancholy fact once before, and he is likely to discover it again.

The large and stately oak can't assume as many postures or gyrations as Godoy can handle. The oak has to wait for the axe, while the Godoy chin is always in motion from the floor to neck high. It is an elusive target, even for a sharpshooter.

When the champion and the challenger meet at the Yankee Stadium tonight the betting will be around even that Louis will close out the performance inside of ten rounds. Louis has too many guns for the entry from Chile. But these howitzers, meaning a right and a left, must first locate their highly-elastic target.

It is a war of movement with Godoy, and when you get a big, game, rough, active fellow whose main idea is to spoil the other side's attack, the problem is no simple one.

The Louis Advantage

It could be quite different if only Godoy packed a punishing punch. He doesn't. Louis does.

Louis can afford to take certain chances in locating the Godoy chin, whereas Godoy can afford no such luxury.

I believe this time Louis will finally catch up with his man and flatten him. I believe the Louis fighting mood will be many notches above the baffled and bewildered status of the Bomber in their first whirligig or merry-go-round.

Louis has yet to fail in a return engagement and while part of his old keenness may be dulled, enough remains to turn the trick if Louis will only move his offense into higher speed, and keep it going.

Godoy is hard to hurt and even harder to bring down, but the champoin is still a stunning puncher with either hand. Unpleasant memories smoulder in the Louis system until at last they are ready for the flame.

If you recall the details, Louis was sore at both Schmeling and Pastor in the second engagements, and sore at Galento in the first. There was nothing lethargic or listless attached to the Louis mood on these three occasions. He lost no time in opening vicious assaults that were highly damaging from the start.

Tougher Target

Conceding the fact that Louis will crowd his opponent from the start and attempt to erase the Godoy frontispiece as rapidly as possible, it must be admitted that the invader is much harder to surround and manhandle than Schmeling, Pastor or Galento were. His legs may carry no greater bulk than Galento's underpinning, but they can move about at a faster pace.

When you get a big, awkward party whose main intention is to go the limit, only a great amount of hustling will turn the trick.

"Joe was caught napping and off guard in that first fight," Jack Blackburn tells you, "but he will be another Joe this time. He knows now the kind of fight he has to make, and he is in a better fighting mood. Joe's only at his best when he is mad. You can't keep on being keen forever, or mad all the time. He wasn't either keen or mad in their first fight, but he'll be out after his man this time and right from the start."

"Yes, but can he catch him?" Blackburn was asked.

"I think he can," Jack replied. "And so does Joe. Maybe not in a hurry for this fellow is not only a tough bird, hard to hurt, but he also knows what it's all about. If he could punch like Joe can it might be all different, but he can't. I still say we never had a fighter who could punch as hard as Joe can with both hands."

At least, this time neither Blackburn nor Louis have underrated the Chile visitor with the elastic piano legs and the granite jaw. Louis has been told that he must keep after his rival from start to finish, that he must throw many more punches than he fired before.

I look for this to happen, starting with the opening canto. If it doesn't happen this way we will have definite proof that Louis has slipped well back and that the job of being champion has reached the boredom stage.

"Louis is two entirely different fighters," an old-timer remarked around fight headquarters yesterday, "meaning when he is sore and when he isn't. Godoy may have startled and surprised Joe in their first meeting, but I believe this time it will be Godow picking up the surprise package, just as Max Schmeling did in their second round-up."

All of which sounds righly reasonable. There always comes a time in every champion's career when he is over the hill and on his way down. It has happened to them all, barring Gene Tunney who retired before his peak.

It is a difficult point to spot in advance. Even when John L. Sullivan had become only a wreck of his former self, few believed he had gone back.

Louis isn't the savage young animal he was some years ago, but he is still something to beat when he gets steamed up against someone he yearns to annihilate.

He had better be in that mood against Godoy tonight, or lose a large patch of ground when it comes to ranking the heavyweights of all time. For he isn't facing any puff ball or any flutter of thistledown in this elastic entry from Chile who hasn't the slightest fear of the Bomber's bombs.

Shearer and Shaner led the Boys Club attack with triples and singles to their credit, while C. DeRosa and Moreland were the big guns for the Ridgeley club with doubles in the final and winning flare-up.

Retired Engineer Killed by Train At Union Street

'Growler' Coniff Meets Ironic Fate; Was 77 Years Old

James S. Coniff, 77-year-old retired B&O engineer, died early today in Allegany hospital after he had been hit and run over by a shifter train at the Union street crossing.

Affectionately known by the nickname of "Growler", Mr. Coniff had many friends in Cumberland and all along the line.

By a strange twist of fate, he met his death as a pedestrian after fifty-seven years of active service on the railroad without a serious accident.

Officers Carl J. Stouffer and Walter P. Crabtree, who investigated, said Coniff stopped on the lower side of the crossing until a passenger train left the station. Then, not seeing the backing shifter, he stepped in front of it and was thrown to the ground, his arm going under the coach's wheels, they said.

The train came to a halt immediately.

He was rushed to Allegany hospital, badly cut and bruised about the head. His left arm, which was nearly cut off by the train, was amputated at the hospital.

Coniff was apparently enroute home when the accident occurred about 7:15 p. m., he said.

Relatives last night said Mr. Coniff, who retired about a year ago, celebrated his 77th birthday Tuesday.

Hospital attendants reported his condition as "serious" early today.

Another Man Injured

Yesterday morning, Guy E. Shuck, 40, of Pinto, a Western Maryland Railway trackman, was injured when struck by a B&O train after he fell asleep on the tracks near his home.

He was admitted to Allegany hospital at 4:20 a. m., suffering from injuries about the chest.

Hospital attendants said Shuck told them he was walking home when he fell asleep on the roadbed while bending down to extinguish a cigarette. He was bumped off the track by the train some time later.

His condition was "fairly good" last night.

Cars 'Painted' by Mistake, Owner Asks Damages

Magistrate Frank A. Perdew is expected to return a verdict today in a $110 damage suit filed against the owner of a used car lot by a parking lot proprietor.

Charles Waingold, 416 North Mechanic street, is being sued by Kenneth Feight, of 311 Fayette street.

Feight, proprietor of a parking lot on Pershing street, is attempting to be reimbursed for his money and labor necessary to restore automobiles to good condition after they allegedly were coated with aluminum while a paint job was done at the used car lot adjoining.

Waingold, owner of the used car lot, had a fabricated steel office building erected last April and had it painted with aluminum paint, applied with a spray gun. During the painting Feight claims the spray was blown onto cars parked on his lot.

Feight had the cars cleaned and restored to the original condition and then filed suit against Waingold and his associates to collect the money he claims to have spent on the automobiles.

Thomas B. Finan, Jr. represents Feight, and Morris Baron is attorney for Waingold.

Golfers Prep for CCC Tourney on Saturday

Cumberland Country Club golfers are choraling the salt water chanty of "Rain, Rain Go Away" as they prepare these days between downpours for the annual President-Vice-Presidents Golf tournament which is on tap for Saturday over the local course, providing the Weather Man does not have another deluge of double-duty dew-drops on tap that afternoon.

Pro Carroll Boggs announces that there is keen interest in the scheduled executive session and that, whether the weather is wet or what, the warriors are whetting their appetites for the function that follows the fairways' frolic, and usually winds up with fowl for the winning warriors at the expense of the conquered caddy-critics.

So keen is the interest, Boggs reports from his bomb-proof shelter in the bogs off No. 1 tee, that captains of the opposing forces have been changed with Bill Bibby and Bob Barnard giving way to Jake Brown and A. M. "Pee-Wee" Widener.

Citizens in Washington To Discuss New Airport

Plans for immediate procedure toward financing and construction of a $200,000 airport at Wiley Ford were discussed yesterday in Washington at a conference of Cumberland citizens and Washington officials.

James C. Shriver, Cumberland postmaster, headed the Cumberland group, which conferred with Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, Representative William D. Byron, of Maryland, and officials of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce and other government officials.

The Cumberland delegation was expected to arrive back in Cumberland early this morning.

James P. Karns (above), formerly of Cumberland, now of Baltimore, received the University of Maryland gold medal, awarded annually to the medical school senior with the highest average during the four-year medical course.

Dr. Karns was graduated from Allegany high school here in 1932.

For three years he was a member of the student school council and finally became president of the class. Dr. Karns will begin his internship in the University of Maryland hospital July 1.

War or No War, Babies Must Have Milk

LONDON (AP)—A Belgian woman refugee told how she milked a cow in a Belgian field while German planes flew overhead.

During one of the train's frequent halts between Antwerp and Ypres, Mrs. Renee Thorn jumped out to get some milk for three babies. Bullets fell around her as she filled several empty beer bottles and then ran back to the train.

"The babies had to be fed," she said.

Robber Missed Payroll But Was Lucky, at That

CHICAGO, (AP) — A robber who walked into a bakery and took $15 while a $2,000 payroll was being delivered to another bakery two doors away was lucky at that.

He met no resistanuce while grabbing the $15. He would have found an armed messenger and a policeman waiting for him if he had aimed for the higher stakes.

LOS ANGELES, (AP) — Fifty children are transforming a borrowed lot into a garden in the "Bunker Hill" district here, directed by Mrs. P. M. Alcantara. A high accident toll and a high percentage of juvenile delinquency in the district convinced her the children needed to be kept off the streets. A Boy Scout troop is helping.

Members of 1890 Class Show Up At Reunion

Confederate Veteran Is Now 96-Years-Old

FRANKLIN, W. Va., June 19 (AP)—George W. "Uncle George" Hammer, who was taken prisoner by Union troops before he even was in the Confederate army — and that was before he was eighteen—has reached the age of 96.

The Confederate veteran, last in Pendleton county, celebrated the anniversary in bed, but until early in May he read without glasses and rode horseback over his farm.

In the 1861-65 war of the states, he was a member with two of his brothers of company F, sixty-second regiment of Virginia mounted volunteer infantry. Two other brothers were in the twenty-fifth Virginia regiment.

He took part in the Gettysburg campaign, helping to cover Lee's retreat across the Potomac. After the battle of cold harbor, he marched with General Early to the relief of Lynchburg and then into Maryland within sight of the capitol at Washington.

The sixty-second disbanded at Fincastle, Va., when it was headed off by Stoneman in an attempt to join General Johnson in North Carolina after Lee's surrender.

Hammer is a great grandson of a George Hammer who settled a few miles north of Franklin in 1761 and built a loopholed house.

Each son for the four generations bore the name of George and all in succession owned part of the land on which the pioneer Hammer settled.

Industrial Workers Make More Money

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 19 (AP)—The shift from 1939 to 1940 meant $2.13 more a month for the average West Virginia industrial worker, a statistical breakdown indicates.

For the first three months of this year wages averaged per man about $108.83 a month, swelling the total wage figure to $92,421,777.

Based also on workmen's compensation commission figures, the average monthly wage for the January-March period, 1939, was $106.70.

Total wages for the three months last year amounted to $81,804,726.

Accompanying the sharp rise in aggregate pay checks, the commission said, was an increase in the number of workers, tending to hold the average gain down.

During the first quarter of last year there was a monthly average of approximately 255,535 persons on the payrolls.

This year the monthly employment figure jumped to 282,867.

Wages for the first quarter in 1938 amounted to $76,758,351 and in 1937 to $94,024,952.

The air was a bit cool for a bathing beauty revue, but the show will be repeated tonight at 8 p. m., weather permitting.

An exhibition of swimming and diving was put on by the expert pupils of Instructor R. J. "Ike" Law.

Announcer was Armand Silverstri.

A full moon, which rose over Knobley mountain about the time the show began, added more glamour to the occasion.

House, Never Moved, Has Been in 3 Counties

SPARTA, Ga. (AP)—Three different counties have collected taxes on the home of Alonzo Frank Butts, although the dwelling stands on the same rural spot selected by his grandfather before the Civil war.

First taxes were paid to Washington county. Then the Georgia legislature created Greene county, and the boundaries embraced the Butts residence. Later, a third county, Hancock, was created and the Butts homesite was included.

OTTAWA, Kas. (AP)—It was a close race that Miss LaVergne Flora, 18, had with the measles. Graduated recently from Ottawa high school, she had attended school 13 years without being absent or tardy. The day after her graduation she became ill with the measles.

Tunnel Men Finish Job, Invited to Celebration

"Holing through" on a tunnel job means a party.

And that tradition, generally observed the world over, will be maintained Saturday at the Savage River Dam.

For a crew of WPA workers this week blasted through the last layer of rock to complete the 1180-foot control tunnel through which the waters of Savage river will flow when the big dam is completed. And the 100-odd tunnel workers, with their families—or a total of nearly 500—will be given a party Saturday, Daniel S. Pelletier, superintendent of construction, announced yesterday.

The party, which will be featured by a barbecue, a baseball game and old-fashioned square dancing, will be held in one of the state forest recreation areas near the dam. It is scheduled to begin in early afternoon and continue throughout the evening. Refreshments are on the Upper Potomac River Commission, sponsors of the project.

Three crews have been working twenty-four hours a day for almost three months to push the hazardous, arduous job to completion on schedule.

There's much to be done before the tunnel is actually completed, but the main job was "holing through." It will have to be cleaned up, ditched and the walls lined with from twelve to fifteen inches of concrete.

Horse-shoe in shape, with a level bottom, the tunnel will be ten feet in diameter—sufficiently large to permit a maximum flow of 1,000 cubic feet of water per second.

Meanwhile, work was proceeding at a rapid rate on other phases of the huge project, and Pelletier stated work would begin about Aug. 15 on actual construction of the dam.

Deaths

James W. Murray

James William Murray, well known traveling salesman throughout the Tri-State area, died Tuesday night at his home, 218 Cumberland street, following a heart attack. He was 72.

Mr. Murray, who had been a resident of Cumberland for forty years, was at work in Oakland Tuesday when he became ill. His son, C. Athey Murray, of Cumberland, brought him home, and his death followed several hours later.

Mr. Murray was a native of Hancock and a son of the late James P. and Margaret Light Murray. His paternal grandfather, Joseph Murray, was a private banker at Hancock in the early seventies and was prominently identified with Western Maryland affairs during and after the Civil War.

He was a grandson of the late Joseph Light, a pioneer hotel proprietor of Hancock, who conducted the old Light House which was torn down to make room for the Western Maryland Railway station.

John Johnson, chancellor of Maryland and father of the great Reverdy Johnson, of Maryland, died suddenly in the Light House during July of 1824. He was enroute to Berkeley Springs as a commissioner for Maryland in a boundary dispute with Virginia. He was buried in Hancock.

Mr. Murray was a warm friend of David Hunter Strother, famous under the name of "Porte Crayon" as an author and artist.

He was a life-long member of the Protestant Episcopal church.

Surviving, besides his son, are his wife, Mrs. Mabel Athey Murray, and six grandchildren, all of Cumberland.

Louis H. Turner

Louis Howard Turner, of Buffalo Mills, Pa., died yesterday afternoon at Timmins hospital, Bedford, Pa., where he had been a patient for two weeks. He was 64.

A sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Hichue, of Cumberland, is among those surviving.

Liquidating Church Debt

CHARLOTTE, N. C., (AP) — A devout church trustee told City Judge Frank Sims, unabashed, that the church had to have money and that was why he was selling drinks at home at a dime a throw from a half-gallon jar of moonshine liquor. He drew a suspended sentence.

WPA Officials Inspect Savage Dam Today

The Savage river dam, construction of which is progressing rapidly, will be inspected today by WPA officials, Daniel S. Pelletier, superintendent of construction, said last night.

Among the officials scheduled to make the tour of inspection are Major Harloe, of Washington, chief engineer for WPA; State Administrator Francis H. Dryden, Charles F. Bornefeld, director of operations for Maryland; Harry D. Williar Jr., deputy state administrator, all of Baltimore, and F. W. Springer, of Frederick, area supervisor.

The group will be accompanied by Chairman John J. McMullen and Owen E. Hitchins, of the Upper Potomac River Commission.

Nab Coney Couple As Moonshiners

Federal Agents Arrest Man and Wife in Raid

A Lonaconing couple was arrested yesterday on moonshining charges after federal agents raided their home.

Cecil Crowe, a miner, was lodged in the county jail to await a preliminary hearing this morning before United States Commissioner James Alfred Avirett. His wife, also charged with violation of federal liquor laws, was not jailed, but was cited to appear at the hearing.

The agents reported finding a 25-gallon still, 125 gallons of mash and a half-gallon of liquor in the basement of the Crowe home, in the Detmold section of Lonaconing. They claimed the Crowes managed to dump out fifteen gallons of liquor before they could prevent it.

The raid was made by Charles E. Cushwa and David H. Walker, of the federal alcoholic tax unit, and Deputy United States Marshal Howard P. Loughrie.

Firemen Warned Against Fifth Column Saboteurs

STOCKTON, Md., June 19 (AP)—Worcester county volunteer firemen were urged today to guard fire equipment against "fifth column" saboteurs by Curtis C. Larrimore, Easton, regional instructor for the University of Maryland Extension service.

Larrimore spoke on arson and sabotage at the thirteenth annual county firemen's association convention. About one hundred attended.

"Firemen form the first line of home defense in these critical times," he asserted. "We are today susceptible to the fifth columnists. In view of the large percentage of migratory labor in Worcester county today I suggest all firemen keep alert to any subversive activity.

"Guard your water and power plants now and do not allow strangers to loaf around your fire departments or equipments."

Percy S. T. Reinwall, Easton, president of the Maryland State firemen, spoke on formation of the National Firemen's association. Six states already have affiliated and the need for such an association is urgent, he said. Reinwall started working for a national association several months ago.

County Tax Basis Has Skyrocketed

BALTIMORE, June 19. (AP) — County tax basis skyrocketed as a result of the 1939 reassessments, Chairman Harry O. Levin of the State Tax commission reported today.

Nine counties of the fifteen in which reassessments were ardered by the 1939 legislature have turned in the new figures. Eight reported a broadening of the taxable basis totaling $80,800,296. The ninth — Worcester county — reported a reduction of $810,914.

Baltimore, Montgomery and Prince Georges counties together produced seven-eights of the total increased basis, headed by a $30,306,812 jump in Baltimore county. Montgomery added $29,057,479 to its books and Prince Georges, $11,557,959.

Other county increases were: Carroll, $561,595; Harford, $6,457,941; Talbot, $1,194,210; Queen Anne's, $434,141; and Dorchester, $1,230,159.

Counties still to report are Cecil, Somerset, Calvert, Washington, Howard and Charles.

Statute Is Missing From College Campus

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 19 (AP)—John Marshall is missing from the Marshall college campus and students say things aren't just the same.

They miss the grave statue of the famous jurist for whom the college was named, look forward hopefully to its return.

James L. Mullen, superintendent of the grounds, cleared up the slight mystery about its disappearance from a campus pedestal—last winter's cold weather snapped off part of the nose, and repairs had to wait until spring.

The granite company making the repairs promises a speedy return.

Smart Boy Swims Free in Park Pool, But 'Them Days Are Gone Forever'

The management of the Constitution Park swimming pool has taken steps to thwart the slick scheme of a youngster to swim free of charge all summer.

The lad, said to be about ten or twelve years old, was apparently wise beyond his years in the ways of the world, according to Pool Manager William H. Buchholtz, who explained the scheme this way:

The youngster appeared at the pool several days ago, bought his ticket and received a basket in which to check his clothes. He placed his only garment, a pair of overalls, in the basket, checked it and received in return a numbered pin.

But instead of claiming his overalls at the end of the day, he left without them. Next day he appeared in bathing suit, after having "checked" his clothes elsewhere, presumably behind a tree or some such place.

He flashed the check-pin he had been given the day before and was admitted to the pool, the doorman figuring that he had just stepped out of the pool enclosure for a little while.

But attendants finally noticed the same pair of overalls remaining in the checkroom every day. They set a watch, but so far have been unable to catch the lad.

They expect to catch up with him, however. In the meantime, a new system has been inaugurated to prevent a repetition of such occurrences.

Hereafter, showing of the check-pin will not be sufficient to gain entrance to the pool. If a bather wishes to leave the pool enclosure for any reason and wants to return, attendants will stamp the date, together with the words, Constitution Park pool, on his wrist with ink.

At the same time he announced the new arrangement, Buchholtz also pointed out that the water in the pool was changed yesterday.

Many would-be swimmers were turned away yesterday afternoon as the big pool was drained and half a million gallons of fresh water pumped in.

Changing of the water began at 12:20 p. m. and took eight and one-half hours.

Rev. W. F. Atkinson

Methodist Pastor Dies Suddenly At Parsonage

Rev. Atkinson Had Been Here Only a Year

The Rev. Walter Franklin Atkinson, pastor of Kingsley and Park Place Methodist churches, died about noon yesterday at the parsonage, 248 Williams street, after a sudden heart attack. He was 56.

The Rev. Mr. Atkinson had been in ill health off and on since January, when he was stricken with pneumonia and heart trouble. He underwent a major operation three months ago at Sibley hospital, Washington.

The Rev. Mr. Atkinson, who had been in the ministry for thirty-five years, came to Cumberland in June, 1939, from the Dumbarton Avenue Methodist church, of Washington, D. C. He had been pastor there for five years.

Born in New Jersey

He was born August 2, 1883, at Clayton, N. J., a son of the late George and Mary Atkinson.

In 1905 he was graduated from Taylor University, of Upland, Ind., and two years later married Miss Rovilla Fry. He was graduated in 1909 from the University of Pennsylvania, where he received an A. B. degree.

The Rev. Mr. Atkinson was a 32nd degree Mason of the consistory of Free Order of Masons, of Camden, N. J. He was a member of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics and of Hope Council, of Bridgeton, N. J.

He was a member of the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist church for thirteen years. Previously, he held membership in the New Jersey Conference.

Attended Conference

The Rev. and Mrs. Atkinson celebrated their thirty-third wedding anniversary June 4 with a trip to Conference at Westminster.

Surviving, besides his wife, are a son, the Rev. Lowell M. Atkinson, pastor of the East Hartford Circuit; two daughters, Mrs. Ardis Atkinson Cannon, of Hyatsville, Md., organist-director in the Petworth Methodist church in Washington; and a half-sister, Mrs. Ada Atkinson Haffer, of Fullerton, Cal.

Services will be held tomorrow afternoon at the Kingsley church, where the body will lie in state from 1 to 3 p. m. Burial will be in the Harleigh Cemetery, of Camden, N. J., Saturday.

The official boards of the Kingsley and Park Place churches will act as honorary pallbearers.

Quarry Worker Hurt In Explosion

A 35-year-old stone quarry worker was painfully injured about the eyes yesterday morning in a dynamite explosion at the Corriganville quarry.

John Porter, of Corriganville, was tamping a shot into a hole preparatory to blasting some rock when the cap exploded and set off the dynamite.

Porter was unable to see when he was admitted to Allegany hospital at 8 a. m. for observation, but his injuries probably were not serious, hospital attendants said.

X-rays were taken to determine the extent of the injuries to his eyes. The outcome will be known today.

Porter's condition was reported "fairly good" last night.

Real Estate Man Gives Boy Scouts 150-Acre Tract

Aaron Lazarus Deeds Site near Oldtown To Potomac Council

A 150-acre tract of land, two-thirds wooded, was presented to the Potomac Council, Boy Scouts of America, for a camp site yesterday by Aaron Lazarus because he "wanted to do something for the boys of Cumberland."

The gift of the property, located four-and-a-half miles northeast of Oldtown, marks the first time the Scouts have received a donation of this kind.

The deed to the property was recorded yesterday in the office of Circuit Court Clerk Robert Jackson after Mr. Lazarus had approached Raymond C. Lalor, scout executive, regarding the gift.

Wanted To Help Boys

Mr. Lazarus, Cumberland real estate dealer, of 14 South Lee street, told the scout executive he "wanted to do something for the boys of Cumberland and felt the Boy Scouts, because of their outdoor training and character building program, could use the land to best advantage."

Boy Scout leaders were elated over the gift since the property will offer an ideal camp site for week-end hikes and will make a splendid location for numerous Scout activities.

"Mr. Lazarus is the first public-spirited citizen of the community to realize the importance of a camp site for boys," Miles G. Thompson, Cumberland Scout leader, declared. "We are much indebted to him, not only for the gift, but for the spirit in which it was offered."

1,000 Scouts in Council

Scout leaders emphasized the fact that such gifts were most acceptable to the council, which supervises a vast program for approximately 1,000 Scouts in the area, including 350 in Cumberland.

Since much of the Scout program consists of getting boys outdoors, leaders were hopeful that other citizens might follow Mr. Lazarus' example in providing camp sites throughout the area.

"We can't stress the Scout program too much," Mr. Thompson said last night. "Today, in Europe, boys are being taught a way of life entirely alien to the democratic principles with which all Scouts are imbued."

Not Permanent Camp

The Lazarus tract, located on the Definbaugh road about a mile from Oldtown creek, will not be used as a permanent camp for the Council, although the donor was hopeful that it might be. However, the tract, while suitable as a camp site for this immediate area, is not central enough for the entire district and is not located close enough to a lake or stream, it was said.

But leaders are confident that the site will prove popular as a camping ground since it is rugged, wooded and "off by itself."

"This tract was donated to be used," Scout leaders said last night, "and the more it is used, the better."

Deeded to Scouts 'Forever'

Formerly, the Scouts leased property on the South Branch and Blue Lick for their activities, since they have never actually owned any land.

According to the transfer drawn up by Attorney George Henderson, the tract has been turned over to the Scouts "forever", an indication that the donor is confident that the American way of life will be safe as long as such programs as the Scout movement carry on.

The land was deeded to three trustees representing the Scout council: Dr. Arthur H. Hawkins, Miles G. Thompson and Victor D. Heisey.

Retired Engineer Killed by Train At Union Street

'Growler' Coniff Meets Ironic Fate; Was 77 Years Old

James S. Coniff, 77-year-old retired B&O engineer, died early today in Allegany hospital after he had been hit and run over by a shifter train at the Union street crossing.

Affectionately known by the nickname of "Growler", Mr. Coniff had many friends in Cumberland and all along the line.

By a strange twist of fate, he met his death as a pedestrian after fifty-seven years of active service on the railroad without a serious accident.

Officers Carl J. Stouffer and Walter P. Crabtree, who investigated, said Coniff stopped on the lower side of the crossing until a passenger train left the station. Then, not seeing the backing shifter, he stepped in front of it and was thrown to the ground, his arm going under the coach's wheels, they said.

The train came to a halt immediately.

He was rushed to Allegany hospital, badly cut and bruised about the head. His left arm, which was nearly cut off by the train, was amputated at the hospital.

Coniff was apparently enroute home when the accident occurred about 7:15 p. m., he said.

Relatives last night said Mr. Coniff, who retired about a year ago, celebrated his 77th birthday Tuesday.

Hospital attendants reported his condition as "serious" early today.

Another Man Injured

Yesterday morning, Guy E. Shuck, 40, of Pinto, a Western Maryland Railway trackman, was injured when struck by a B&O train after he fell asleep on the tracks near his home.

He was admitted to Allegany hospital at 4:20 a. m., suffering from injuries about the chest.

Hospital attendants said Shuck told them he was walking home when he fell asleep on the roadbed while bending down to extinguish a cigarette. He was bumped off the track by the train some time later.

His condition was "fairly good" last night.

Tunnel Men Finish Job, Invited to Celebration

"Holing through" on a tunnel job means a party.

And that tradition, generally observed the world over, will be maintained Saturday at the Savage River Dam.

For a crew of WPA workers this week blasted through the last layer of rock to complete the 1180-foot control tunnel through which the waters of Savage river will flow when the big dam is completed. And the 100-odd tunnel workers, with their families—or a total of nearly 500—will be given a party Saturday, Daniel S. Pelletier, superintendent of construction, announced yesterday.

The party, which will be featured by a barbecue, a baseball game and old-fashioned square dancing, will be held in one of the state forest recreation areas near the dam. It is scheduled to begin in early afternoon and continue throughout the evening. Refreshments are on the Upper Potomac River Commission, sponsors of the project.

Three crews have been working twenty-four hours a day for almost three months to push the hazardous, arduous job to completion on schedule.

There's much to be done before the tunnel is actually completed, but the main job was "holing through." It will have to be cleaned up, ditched and the walls lined with from twelve to fifteen inches of concrete.

Horse-shoe in shape, with a level bottom, the tunnel will be ten feet in diameter—sufficiently large to permit a maximum flow of 1,000 cubic feet of water per second.

Meanwhile, work was proceeding at a rapid rate on other phases of the huge project, and Pelletier stated work would begin about Aug. 15 on actual construction of the dam.

WPA Officials Inspect Savage Dam Today

The Savage river dam, construction of which is progressing rapidly, will be inspected today by WPA officials, Daniel S. Pelletier, superintendent of construction, said last night.

Among the officials scheduled to make the tour of inspection are Major Harloe, of Washington, chief engineer for WPA; State Administrator Francis H. Dryden, Charles F. Bornefeld, director of operations for Maryland; Harry D. Williar Jr., deputy state administrator, all of Baltimore, and F. W. Springer, of Frederick, area supervisor.

The group will be accompanied by Chairman John J. McMullen and Owen E. Hitchins, of the Upper Potomac River Commission.

Nab Coney Couple As Moonshiners

Federal Agents Arrest Man and Wife in Raid

A Lonaconing couple was arrested yesterday on moonshining charges after federal agents raided their home.

Cecil Crowe, a miner, was lodged in the county jail to await a preliminary hearing this morning before United States Commissioner James Alfred Avirett. His wife, also charged with violation of federal liquor laws, was not jailed, but was cited to appear at the hearing.

The agents reported finding a 25-gallon still, 125 gallons of mash and a half-gallon of liquor in the basement of the Crowe home, in the Detmold section of Lonaconing. They claimed the Crowes managed to dump out fifteen gallons of liquor before they could prevent it.

The raid was made by Charles E. Cushwa and David H. Walker, of the federal alcoholic tax unit, and Deputy United States Marshal Howard P. Loughrie.

Firemen Warned Against Fifth Column Saboteurs

STOCKTON, Md., June 19 (AP)—Worcester county volunteer firemen were urged today to guard fire equipment against "fifth column" saboteurs by Curtis C. Larrimore, Easton, regional instructor for the University of Maryland Extension service.

Larrimore spoke on arson and sabotage at the thirteenth annual county firemen's association convention. About one hundred attended.

"Firemen form the first line of home defense in these critical times," he asserted. "We are today susceptible to the fifth columnists. In view of the large percentage of migratory labor in Worcester county today I suggest all firemen keep alert to any subversive activity.

"Guard your water and power plants now and do not allow strangers to loaf around your fire departments or equipments."

Percy S. T. Reinwall, Easton, president of the Maryland State firemen, spoke on formation of the National Firemen's association. Six states already have affiliated and the need for such an association is urgent, he said. Reinwall started working for a national association several months ago.

Statute Is Missing From College Campus

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 19 (AP)—John Marshall is missing from the Marshall college campus and students say things aren't just the same.

They miss the grave statue of the famous jurist for whom the college was named, look forward hopefully to its return.

James L. Mullen, superintendent of the grounds, cleared up the slight mystery about its disappearance from a campus pedestal—last winter's cold weather snapped off part of the nose, and repairs had to wait until spring.

The granite company making the repairs promises a speedy return.

Real Estate Man Gives Boy Scouts 150-Acre Tract

Aaron Lazarus Deeds Site near Oldtown To Potomac Council

A 150-acre tract of land, two-thirds wooded, was presented to the Potomac Council, Boy Scouts of America, for a camp site yesterday by Aaron Lazarus because he "wanted to do something for the boys of Cumberland."

The gift of the property, located four-and-a-half miles northeast of Oldtown, marks the first time the Scouts have received a donation of this kind.

Cars 'Painted' by Mistake, Owner Asks Damages

Magistrate Frank A. Perdew is expected to return a verdict today in a $110 damage suit filed against the owner of a used car lot by a parking lot proprietor.

Charles Waingold, 416 North Mechanic street, is being sued by Kenneth Feight, of 311 Fayette street.

Feight, proprietor of a parking lot on Pershing street, is attempting to be reimbursed for his money and labor necessary to restore automobiles to good condition after they allegedly were coated with aluminum while a paint job was done at the used car lot adjoining.

Waingold, owner of the used car lot, had a fabricated steel office building erected last April and had it painted with aluminum paint, applied with a spray gun. During the painting Feight claims the spray was blown onto cars parked on his lot.

Feight had the cars cleaned and restored to the original condition and then filed suit against Waingold and his associates to collect the money he claims to have spent on the automobiles.

Thomas B. Finan, Jr. represents Feight, and Morris Baron is attorney for Waingold.

Golfers Prep for CCC Tourney on Saturday

Cumberland Country Club golfers are chorusing the salt water chanty of "Rain, Rain Go Away" as they prepare these days between downpours for the annual President-Vice-Presidents Golf tournament which is on tap for Saturday over the local course, providing the Weather Man does not have another deluge of double-duty dew-drops on tap that afternoon.

Pro Carroll Boggs announces that there is keen interest in the scheduled executive session and that, whether the weather is wet or what, the warriors are whetting their appetites for the function that follows the fairways' frolic, and usually winds up with fowl for the winning warriors at the expense of the conquered caddy-critics.

So keen is the interest, Boggs reports from his bomb-proof shelter in the bogs off No. 1 tee, that captains of the opposing forces have been changed with Bill Bibby and Bob Barnard giving way to Jake Brown and A. M. "Pee-Wee" Widener.

Dr. Karns was graduated from Allegany high school here in 1932.

For three years he was a member of the student school council and finally became president of the class. Dr. Karns will begin his internship in the University of Maryland hospital July 1.

Confederate Veteran Is Now 96-Years-Old

FRANKLIN, W. Va., June 19 (AP) —George W. "Uncle George" Hammer, who was taken prisoner by Union troops before he even was in the Confederate army — and that was before he was eighteen—has reached the age of 96.

The Confederate veteran, last in Pendleton county, celebrated the anniversary in bed, but until early in May he read without glasses and rode horseback over his farm.

In the 1861-65 war of the states, he was a member with two of his brothers of company F, sixty-second regiment of Virginia mounted volunteer infantry. Two other brothers were in the twenty-fifth Virginia regiment.

He took part in the Gettysburg campaign, helping to cover Lee's retreat across the Potomac. After the battle of cold harbor, he marched with General Early to the relief of Lynchburg and then into Maryland within sight of the capitol at Washington.

The sixty-second disbanded at Fincastle, Va., when it was headed off by Stoneman in an attempt to join General Johnson in North Carolina after Lee's surrender.

Hammer is a great grandson of a George Hammer who settled a few miles north of Franklin in 1761 and built a loopholed house.

Each son for the four generations bore the name of George and all in succession owned part of the land on which the pioneer Hammer settled.

Industrial Workers Make More Money

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 19 (AP)—The shift from 1939 to 1940 meant $2.13 more a month for the average West Virginia industrial worker, a statistical breakdown indicates.

For the first three months of this year wages averaged per man about $108.83 a month, swelling the total wage figure to $92,421,777.

Based also on workmen's compensation commission figures, the average monthly wage for the January-March period, 1939, was $106.70.

Total wages for the three months last year amounted to $81,804,726.

Accompanying the sharp rise in aggregate pay checks, the commission said, was an increase in the number of workers, tending to hold the average gain down.

During the first quarter of last year there was a monthly average of approximately 255,535 persons on the payrolls.

This year the monthly employment figure jumped to 282,867.

Wages for the first quarter in 1938 amounted to $76,758,351 and in 1937 to $94,024,952.

Smart Boy Swims Free in Park Pool, But 'Them Days Are Gone Forever'

The management of the Constitution Park swimming pool has taken steps to thwart the slick scheme of a youngster to swim free of charge all summer.

The lad, said to be about ten or twelve years old, was apparently wise beyond his years in the ways of the world, according to Pool Manager William H. Buchholtz, who explained the scheme this way:

The youngster appeared at the pool several days ago, bought his ticket and received a basket in which to check his clothes. He placed his only garment, a pair of overalls, in the basket, checked it and received in return a numbered pin.

But instead of claiming his overalls at the end of the day, he left without them. Next day he appeared in bathing suit, after having "checked" his clothes elsewhere, presumably behind a tree or some such place.

He flashed the check-pin he had been given the day before and was admitted to the pool, the doorman figuring that he had just stepped out of the pool enclosure for a little while.

But attendants finally noticed the same pair of overalls remaining in the checkroom every day. They set a watch, but so far have been unable to catch the lad.

They expect to catch up with him, however. In the meantime, a new system has been inaugurated to prevent a repetition of such occurrences.

Hereafter, showing of the check-pin will not be sufficient to gain entrance to the pool. If a bather wishes to leave the pool enclosure for any reason and wants to return, attendants will stamp the date, together with the words, Constitution Park pool, on his wrist with ink.

At the same time he announced the new arrangement. Buchholtz also pointed out that the water in the pool was changed yesterday.

Many would-be swimmers were turned away yesterday afternoon as the big pool was drained and half a million gallons of fresh water pumped in.

Changing of the water began at 12:20 p. m. and took eight and one-half hours.

Quarry Worker Hurt In Explosion

A 35-year-old stone quarry worker was painfully injured about the eyes yesterday morning in a dynamite explosion at the Corriganville quarry.

John Porter, of Corriganville, was tamping a shot into a hole preparatory to blasting some rock when the cap exploded and set off the dynamite.

Porter was unable to see when he was admitted to Allegany hospital at 8 a. m. for observation, but his injuries probably were not serious, hospital attendants said.

X-rays were taken to determine the extent of the injuries to his eyes. The outcome will be known today.

Porter's condition was reported "fairly good" last night.
